Four Colleges Seized By Quebec Students

STE. THERESE DE BLAINVILLE, Que. (CP) — Student occupation of junior colleges spread to four Quebec campuses Wednesday night as opposition to the province's education system grew.

Begun with the take-over here Tuesday of Lionel Groulx College, there were fears student occupation would soon include Quebec's 21 other junior colleges.

Meanwhile, Louis Falardeau, secretary-general of the Union Generale des Etudiants du Quebec, said an emergency meeting of UGEQ will be held tonight in Montreal to determine the extent of the union's support for the Lionel Groulx take-over.

His announcement was made before junior colleges came under student occupation at Quebec City's suburban Ste. Foy, at Chicoutimi 125 miles north of Quebec City and St. Jerome 45 miles north of Montreal.

Mr. Falardeau said:

"We plan to propose to representatives of the 25 Cegeps—Colleges d'Enseignement General et Professionel (post-secondary colleges)—that they not attend classes next Tuesday and that they sit in on study sessions instead."

The "study sessions" could lead to a decision by the student executive to occupy all of Quebec's post-secondary schools.

Lionel Groulx students said they decided to barricade themselves inside the school 20 miles north of Montreal to draw attention to the need for reforms in Quebec's education system.

The demands include:

—Immediate government action to set up a long-promised second French-language university in Montreal.

—Reversal of a government decision to reduce the amount of money available for student scholarships by $5,000,000 this year.

—Reversal of a government decision to increase the annual interest rate on student loans to 7⅛ per cent from 5¼.

—A study of the education system in general.

Tigers Win Series

By JACK HAND

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mickey Lolich, working with only two days' rest, beat the mighty Bob Gibson 4-1 in a seventh-game World Series duel today and the aroused Detroit Tigers completed a smashing comeback by dethroning St. Louis Cardinals.

Only three previous teams had rallied to win after losing three games—the 1903 Boston Red Sox, 1925 Pittsburgh Pirates and the 1958 New York Yankees. When the Red Sox did it the Series was best-of-nine.

Gibson, setting a Series strikeout record with 35 in three games, and Lolich matched scoreless innings until the Tigers broke through suddenly with two out in the seventh, just as they did all season.

Norm Cash singled to right field, the second hit off Gibson. Then Willie Horton drove a single to left between short and third.

Jim Northrup, whose grand slam homer capped the big 10-run inning Wednesday, lofted a long fly to deep centre. Curt Flood first started in on the ball, slipped as he tried to change direction and the ball sailed over his head for a triple, scoring both Cash and Horton.

Wilson, Smith Talks Affable but 'Tough'

GIBRALTAR (AP) — Prime ministers Harold Wilson of Britain and Ian Smith of rebel Rhodesia opened today a last-ditch effort to solve the three-year-old impasse between them in a 3½-hour meeting that aides described as "tough going for both sides."

The aides made it clear the language used was "perfectly affable" but the session was tough in terms of uncompromising stands on key issues.

These sources said there was "clear disagreement" at the opening session of the negotiations aboard HMS Fearless in Gibraltar harbor.

The sources refused to comment on the substance of the opening talks or say which issues were discussed.

However, the two leaders set out uncompromising stands Wednesday on Britain's demand for "unimpeded progress" toward majority rule for Rhodesia.

Insurance Firms Silent On Revolutionary Plan

B.C. Gets $56 Million From U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States handed over a cheque for almost $56,000,000 in Canadian funds today as payment to British Columbia for flood control for the next 60 years from a Columbia River dam.

The $55,909,812.50 will be used by the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority for construction projects.

Canadian Ambassador A. E. Ritchie accepted the cheque in a state department ceremony and an aide then popped it in his wallet for depositing with the U.S. treasury department.

The money will be transferred to Victoria via the Federal Reserve Bank in New York.

"This is going to be the most man-handled cheque of all time," said George Springsteen, deputy assistant state secretary who presented it to Ritchie.

"I just want to touch it," said a secretary.

The payment is the bulk of the $64,000,000 pledged by the U.S. under the Columbia River treaty for flood-control benefits produced in the U.S. by three B.C. dams taming the unruly river.

Duncan Lake, the smallest, has been completed. Today, Arrow Lake dam became fully operational, months ahead of schedule.

The Arrow Lake dam was one of the most controversial projects as far as Canadian opposition to the treaty was concerned.

A third dam, and the largest, at Mica Creek, is to be completed in early 1973.

The U.S. in October, 1964, made a lump-sum payment of $275,000,000 to B.C. for the extra power the Canadian storage allows to be generated on the American leg of the Columbia.

The Canadian government estimated when the agreement finally cleared Parliament in 1964 that total costs to Canada and B.C. for the three dams would be $448,000,000 and that U.S. payments "would have a total value to Canada of $501,000,000 by 1973."

That figure, providing at that time for a B.C. profit of $53,000,000, took account of interest on the U.S. payments.

'Complete Color Ban'

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Rightwing firebrand Enoch Powell today demanded a total ban on colored immigration to Britain before "the character of this country is changed beyond recognition."

BEDTIME READING only for insurance executives anxious about contents of Royal Commission on Automobile Insurance report was carried away in plain cardboard boxes from the Queen's Printer Wednesday by this pretty pair of secretaries, Anne Watt (left) and Fay Lenaghan. About 2,000 copies of the two-volume report went on sale to the public for $7.88. (Halkett photo.)

Court Cases Would Be Cut

The private insurance industry in B.C. today reacted to the proposals for radical changes in the Wootton Royal Commission on Automobile Insurance report with watchful silence planned in advance.

Several spokesmen for various insurance associations who had presented the bulk of submissions to the inquiry, and also individual insurance company managers and agents who were contacted, all declined comment on the same ground: They need time to read and consider the report's ramifications.

But there was immediate reaction from other quarters both praising and condemning the report and also revealing an unexpected bonus "spin-off" benefit that would follow implementation of the "no-fault" driver self-insurance proposal.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen hailed the report as a major breakthrough in rationalizing compensation protection and giving hope that bad drivers would be ruled off the road more systematically to reduce the accident rate.

But T. O. Griffiths, president of the B.C. Trial Lawyers Association which made a strong plea for more legal recourse for traffic victims, said the commission was so "preoccupied with social theory" that it had recommended a "terribly retrograde step toward anarchy" through abolition of lawsuits over traffic accidents.

New Democratic Party Leader Robert Strachan condemned the commission for not recommending that the government enter the insurance field directly instead of compelling motorists to buy some insurance from private companies.

But NDP deputy leader Alex Macdonald, who presented a brief to the commission, said at least the party had won "half a Victory" with acceptance of its argument that compensation only should be the insurance principle.

Attention Centres on Industry

Victoria Bar Association vice-president Kenneth Murphy revealed the "spin-off" impact of eliminating car accident law suits from court calendars.

He said the proposal would cut down the present load on the court system by 25 to 33 per cent and therefore should speed up the system for other types of litigants who sometimes have to wait long periods before coming to trial.

Attention, however, centred on the silence of the private insurance industry which, collectively, was reported to have spent $500,000 in preparing and delivering the bulk of the 100 volumes of briefs and testimony collected by the commission.

"It would be premature to comment on the 800-page report in full or in part until a thorough study has been completed," a press release issued by a public relations firm quoted the industry's leading spokesman in the province, Ken Malthouse, representing both the Insurance Bureau of Canada and All-Canada Insurance Federation.

'Spokesman Is a PR Firm'

Other spokesmen for insurance associations and even individual company managers and agents contracted for comment gave the same response.

George Turner, of the Canadian Underwriters Association, revealed that "I haven't seen the report yet but in any case I cannot comment on it because the spokesman for all of us is John Usher (a Vancouver public relations man who issued the Malthouse release).

"He is to make all comment for all of us and I am not really authorized to make any comment or I could get my knuckles rapped."

Justin Harbord, Victoria insurance agent with a reputation for being outspoken who also presented a brief to the commission on behalf of the Insurance Agent Association, also declined any comment.

The association's president, Robert Spray in Vancouver, told The Times that it had been agreed in advance that all comment would be withheld, at least until the Oct. 21 meeting of directors in Nanaimo.

A spokesman for the Independent Insurance Conference, in Vancouver, also told The Times "you can't expect any comment from us."

Mayor Hugh Stephen termed the commissioners' recommendations "a radical new concept, a revolution in thinking to which one will require time to adjust."

Mayor Stephen declined comment on premium costs "be-

Bobby Hull Quits; Sought $100,000

HULL
. . . "no alternative"

TORONTO (CP) — Superstar Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks announced today he is retiring from the National Hockey League. The announcement was made in a brief statement issued by Bobby Hull Enterprises Ltd. of Toronto.

The statement said:

"Today I wish to announce my retirement from Chicago Black Hawks. It is with a great deal of regret and much sadness that I face the fact that my contribution to the Black Hawks and hockey is a matter of dispute.

"Therefore, under the circumstances I have no alternative other than to wish my team good luck and say good-bye to the game."

The announcement followed weeks of contract dispute between Hull, perennial goal-scoring champion in the league and the game's biggest star, and the Hawks.

Hull was reported to have been seeking a three-year contract at $100,000 a year. His team-mate, centre Stan Mikita, was also reported to be seeking a six-figure contract.

Biafran Civilians Massacred by Advancing Nigerian Troops

By CHARLES TAYLOR
Special to The Times

UMUAHIA, Biafra — Nigerian soldiers have massacred more than 500 Biafran civilians in the town of Urua Inyang on the southern war front, according to witnesses I interviewed here.

Women and children were among the victims when the Nigerians opened fire with mortars and machine-guns on the town market place and refugee camps last Friday. Thousands of civilians fled the town in terror and are hiding in the bush.

There is still fighting in Urua Inyang, 16 miles south of Umuahia, so it was not possible to visit the scene of the massacre, which was reported by the Biafrans.

But the witnesses were interviewed in English, in different places and without advance warning. Their report tallies with the others and there is no reason to doubt their truth. On the outskirts of Umuahia, I interviewed John Akpaidiok, a 30-year-old secondary school teacher who brought the first news of the raid to the capital.

On Friday morning, he was attending a Red Cross meeting in Urua Inyang when he heard the sound of gunfire. "The noise became louder and when it was unbearable, I rushed out of the hall," Mr. Akpaidiok said.

"I saw three tall Nigerian soldiers walking down the street and spraying bullets in all directions. Behind them was a land-rover with more Nigerian soldiers and a heavy machine-gun. It was moving very slowly and the machine-gun was also spraying bullets on both sides of the streets.

"Then a lot of refugees rushed out of their camp. A lot of them were hit by the bullets.

"I escaped by running to my house and jumping through the back window. Then I passed through the market square. It was a market day and everywhere I looked I saw dead bodies and blood. I saw mortar shells falling on the people and I saw the same land-rover machine-gunning people in the market. Then I dashed into the bush and managed to get to safety."

There were no Biafran soldiers in the town at the time of the Nigerian attack, according to Mr. Akpaidiok and all other eyewitnesses. The nearest Biafran troops were at the front, four miles away, and the Nigerians outflanked them to enter the town.

"Nobody stopped to count the bodies," said A. E. Bassey, the administrator of Annang province in which the town is situated. "But after piecing together all the reports, we're sure that many more than 500 people were killed, and hundreds more were wounded." Urua Inyang has a normal population of about 9,000. There were also about 8,000 refugees in three camps.

Most of the townspeople are members of a minority tribe, the Annangs (Mr. Bassey is also in Annang). Most of the refugees were Annangs, Ibibios, Efiks, and Ogonis. There were a only a few Ibos—the leading Biafran tribe.

According to Lagos, the federal Nigerian troops are fighting the war partly in order to liberate the minority tribes from domination by the Ibos.

To confirm these reports, I drove across country to the Ikot Umo Essien area, about 11 miles from Urua Inyang. At a crude refugee camp in the bush, I found other survivors of the massacre.

They all told the same story—a sudden mortar attack on the market place and the refugee camps, the Land-Rover with the machine gun, and the Nigerian soldiers spraying bullets at the civilians.

"I was in the market place with my bicycle when the shooting started," said Pius John Inokong, 38, a former chairman of the northern Annang county council. "People were running all over the place—running in terror," he added.

PEOPLE FALLING

"I saw Nigerian soldiers in their steel helmets sitting in the Land-Rover and shooting into the crowd. People were falling on every side. "I ran away into the bush. I had my wife and six children in the town and I don't know where they are."

According to E. E. Ekanem, a 52-year-old school teacher, the market place was filled with women doing their shopping when the shooting began. "Suddenly there were explosions everywhere. I saw people die from the mortar shells and the bullets. It was horrible."

At the start of the attack, John Eyara, a worker with Caritas, the Roman Catholic relief agency, was standing with Rev. Eugene Bree, from Ireland, the parish priest.

Mr. Eyara started to flee on his bicycle, but was knocked down by the explosion of the mortar shell.

Mr. Eyara never saw Father Bree again. But a friend later cause I think only the experts can say whether they are fair and adequate. But I think it a very good concept that insurance will be compulsory before you can obtain a driver's licence.

"And I think it is extremely sensible to tie the licence to insurance and the insurance rate to a driver's record. Many bad drivers will be eliminated in the process, but that's all to the good."

Mayor Stephen said he also agreed with the commissioners' recommendation that road safety programs be co-ordinated at the federal and provincial levels and that more money be spent on such programs.

TOUGHER APPROACH

But he added that he would have liked to see the commission take an even tougher approach.

"It has always been shocking to me that people with terrible records of negligence are allowed to drive at all. Whatever plans and proposals we make for safety now, in the final analysis we have to come down to taking hard, brassy action against the consistently bad driver.

Vancouver Ald. Halford Wilson, chairman of the insurance committee of the B.C. Safety Council, said he had not as yet had time to read the full report.

"But I think it safe to say that any recommendations that tend to improve the safety factor will have our full support," he said.

"From the brief accounts I have read it would appear that the establishing of compulsory minimum insurance protection is a sound step in the right direction."

Ald. Wilson said the Safety Council would solidly back the commission call for greater co-ordination between federal and provincial governments and between various departments within the provincial government.

"Actually such recommendations are part of our long range program," he said.

Victoria and Vancouver lawyers agreed that the proposed auto insurance scheme would ease the load on law courts throughout British Columbia.

"I would say between a quarter and a third of the courts' time is now spent on the hearing of accident cases," said Kenneth Murphy, vice-president of Victoria Bar Association.

"If no auto accident cases were heard in the courts, other actions would certainly be brought on more speedily.

Colin McQuarrie, QC, a bencher of the B.C. Law Society, said the proposed scheme could mean a loss to the public "if they didn't have more protection than is indicated in the royal commission's report."

"The proposed sum of $20,000 would be an inadequate insurance basis for a person seriously injured in an accident. I would say the present court system is better where people have substantial claims.

COMPENSATION

"At least they have a reasonable chance of recovering a substantial amount of compensation.

Lloyd McKenzie, QC, of Victoria agreed with Mr. McQuarrie.

"Under the present system of hearing claims in court, the amount of compensation is more [illegible]sely measured than would [illegible] possible under the system proposed.

Mr. Griffiths, president of the trial lawyers association, said proposals contained in the report would lead to anarchy.

He said the "no fault" principle in the report removes the responsibility principle from insurance.

"One of the most important things the commission hasn't taken into account is that the no-fault principle doesn't make any impact on the wrongdoer.

'FICTION'

"It is a monstrous fiction that leaves the impact with the person (the injured party) who can least afford it."

"The present system is an excellent one, if properly used. It is the best in North America."

WITHIN YEAR

To the commission's reference to a time lag in the hearing of accident cases, Mr. Griffiths said there is "no unreasonable lag" and the majority of cases go to trial within a year".

NDP Leader Strachan said he welcomed the adoption of his party's argument for compulsory no-fault insurance.

"However, the commission's proposal to leave the handling of such insurance in private hands is, I think, morally wrong and will not result in insurance at the lowest possible cost to the public."

He predicted the Social Credit cabinet would "pigeonhole" the proposals and contended "this report makes it obvious that any real change in automobile insurance will still require the election of an NDP government in B.C."

FAR REACHING

Newly-elected Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said the report's proposals were so far-reaching that he and his party would have to study it thoroughly "for some considerable time before I will comment on it."

Cyril Shelford, provincial minister of agriculture, said the report puts the onus on insurance companies to do a better job for B.C. drivers.

'REAL PROD'

"It will act as a real prod," he said. "This is what I've wanted all along."

He said the report gives companies a chance to improve rates and coverage under the clear threat of government takeover if conditions do not improve.

Mr. Shelford, who made the motion in the Legislature calling for the commission, said he was also impressed by the emphasis it placed on accident prevention.

Ray Haynes, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said the report only postpones the inevitable introduction of a government car insurance plan.

Noting that the report was critical of insurance companies, he added that he did not "see why they didn't recommend a compulsory government plan."

Hijacking Charge Tossed Out

MONTREAL (CP) — Charles Leverne Beasley, 22, of Dallas, Tex., was acquitted today of charges alleging that he attempted to divert an Air Canada flight to Cuba Sept. 11.

Judge Emile Trottier agreed with the argument of defence lawyer Sidney Leithman that the Crown had failed to obtain necessary authority from the attorney-general of Canada to prosecute a non-Canadian in an airplane hijacking case.

The judge dismissed all charges, which included theft of an aircraft, interfering with transportation facilities, kidnapping, forcible detention, illegal possession of a .22-calibre revolver, public mischief by obstructing use of property and two counts of assault.

Changes in Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand today brought Speaker Remi Paul of the legislative assembly into his cabinet as provincial secretary and named two ministers to new portfolios in the first cabinet shuffle since he came premier Oct. 2.

Yves Gabias, 47-year-old lawyer from Trois-Rivieres, was switched from the provincial secretary portfolio to the department of financial institutions and co-operatives and Armand Maltais, a 55-year-old lawyer from Quebec City, who had been minister without portfolio, was named solicitor-general.

Skin 'Transplants' For Burn Victims

TORONTO (CP) — Temporary skin grafts from corpses can work miracles overnight for patients suffering severe burns, says Dr. George Collentine, assistant professor of surgery at the Marquette School of Medicine, Milwaukee.

Speaking Monday to the sixth annual meeting of the Ontario College of Family Physicians, Dr. Collentine said a graft applied to a dying child, with a high temperature and bleeding from ulcers, will cause almost instant improvement.

"He'll sit up and want to eat the next morning."

Why the graft makes this dramatic difference was not known but it seems enough to help the body block out bacteria invasion and fight infection.

Dr. Collentine said the temporary grafts are applied as soon as one-third of the burned area has healed enough to take them.

In time the graft is rejected —"it just feathers and disappears" and then a permanent graft of the patient's own skin could be applied.

The surgeon said the best first-aid treatment for burns of any degree of severity is a "clod, moist cloth, the cleanest one available."

He advised parents whose child has been burned to remove his hot clothing "grab a clean towel and put it under the cold water tap, wrap it around the burned area and take him to hospital."

Prague in Gloom As Details Known

By KENNETH AMES

Special to the Washington Post

PRAGUE — An atmosphere of profound gloom settled on the Czechoslovak capital Wednesday —the cumulative effect of the information gradually becoming known about the latest Moscow demands and the tortuously depressing communique issued Tuesday midnight by the communist party presidium.

Meanwhile, as if to underline the real significance of the communique—which promised to purge "anti-socialist forces" and toughen controls over party and press—a mission of military experts, led by Czechoslovak deputy premier Frantisek Hamouz and senior staff officers, was reported Wednesday about to sign an agreement in Moscow on a Warsaw pact garrison to be stationed in this country.

The defence minister, Gen. Martin Dzur, who normally would head such a delegation, was in a hospital. The announcement of Dzur's illness was made Wednesday—four days after he is said to have been admitted to the hospital.

In the wake of these developments, Czechs and Slovaks are trying to calculate what might be salvaged from their eight-month liberalization program.

The best informed observers Wednesday said the Czechoslovak presidium communique was a total acceptance of Moscow's conditions, punctuated by occasional phrases intended to ameliorate the shock.

An important question raised Wednesday was how long it would take for the general population of the nation, as distinct from politicians and intellectuals, to recognize the full implications of the communique.

told him that he had watched the priest being beaten my Nigerian soldiers, dragged into a car and driven away. There has been no further report on Father Bree.

According to E. D. Ogolo, the district officer for central Annang, thousands of refugees from Urua Inyang began streaming through his area after the attack. "Many were badly wounded, all were hungry and they only had the clothes on their back," Mr. Ogolo said.

"I had to tell them there was nothing I could do for them. We had no doctor and our refugee camps are already filled up. I couldn't give them any food.

"Our stocks are so low that I'm only giving the refugees one cup of garri (the Biafran staple) a day. Some days I have to ask the adults to go without their garri so there's something for the children."

BIND WOUNDS

Some of the victims from Urua Inyang stayed in the refugee camps but most moved on into the bush, Mr. Ogolo added. Many were binding their wounds with leaves. "From what I heard, there must have been 700 to 900 killed in the town," he said. "I don't know how many more have been dying in the bush."

As we talked—standing by one of the refugee huts and surrounded by a crowd of thin and ragged people—an Ilyushin bomber of the Nigerian air force broke through the clouds and flew directly overhead.

We scrambled behind trees and into ditches.

For about 20 tense minutes, we heard the bomber circling nearby, above the clouds. Then—in the distance—two explosions, followed a few minutes later by three more. Then the Ilyushin flew back above us and away.

"It happens like that every day," Mr. Ogolo said. "Only now they know we take cover, so they're starting to strafe the bush. "They want to kill us all," he added. "They simple want to kill us all."

Surprise Talks End In Finland

HELSINKI (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin flew back to Moscow Wednesday following a secrecy-shrouded surprise visit to Finland where he had talks with President Urho Kekkonen — partly at sea during a fishing trip.

As Kosygin and his party was seen off with a hearty farewell by Kekkonen and Finnish Premier Mauno Koivisto at Helsinki Airport, a communique expressing Finno-Soviet unity on international questions and peace efforts gave the first official word on the talks.

"The friendly and frank discussions," were said to have confirmed the wish of both governments and peoples to develop their relations on the "firm basis" of the 1948 friendship and assistance treaty — which gives the Soviet Union the right to demand military consultations and even to station troops in Finland in case of a tangible threat from West Germany or its allies.

Kekkonen and Kosygin in the communique expressed their "firm confidence" that the two countries' policies would "remain unshakeable."

Final Countdown For Apollo Flight

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) With green lights flashing for all aspects of the flight, the final countdown begins today for Friday's scheduled launching of the three Apollo 7 astronauts on an 11-day space journey.

The 300-man launch crew planned to start the critical final hours of the count by feeding electrical power to a 224-foot-high Saturn rocket.

As the launch team prepared the rocket and the Apollo 7 spaceship, navy Capt. Walter M. Schirra Jr., Air Force Major Donn F. Eisele and civilian astronaut Walter Cunningham expected to relax after a morning meeting in their quarters with key project officials.

The space trio is to ride the Saturn rocket into orbit at 11 a.m. EDT Friday on a mission that could put the United States back on course toward its goal of a manned lunar landing next year.

ORBIT MOON NEXT?

If Apollo 7 demonstrates that the spaceship can function long enough for a 500,000-mile round trip to the moon, the Apollo 8 crew may attempt to orbit the moon in December.

The 363-foot-high Saturn 5 rocket for that mission rolled to its launch pad Wednesday for about 40 days of pre-launch checks. The Apollo 8 commander will be air force Col. Frank Borman.

Schirra, Cunningham and Eisele practised Wednesday in a spacecraft simulator.

Paul Donnelly, launch operations manager for the Kennedy Space Centre, reported Wednesday that preparations for Apollo 7 were better than on any of the previous 16 U.S. man-in-space flights and the 16 unmanned flights that have been conducted with Saturn rockets.

Wallace Sending LeMay to V. Nam

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Third-party presidential candidate George C. Wallace plans to send his vice-presidential running mate, retired air force general Curtis E. LeMay, to Vietnam to get a first hand report on the war, The Associated Press has learned.

Tentative plans are for LeMay to make a four-day trip "and to find out what the servicemen themselves think about the matter," a source close to Wallace said.

He said LeMay is to report back before a nationwide television appearance by Wallace Oct. 30. The election is Nov. 5.

Wallace, meanwhile, has accused national public opinion pollsters of trying to "control" the United States election in favor of Republican Richard M. Nixon and has called for an investigation of pollsters by the next Congress.

Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey's camp challenged the accuracy of a new Gallup poll indicating no drop in Nixon's lead over Humphrey—but said it would not join Wallace in advocating a congressional inquiry on opinion polling.

The polls, Wallace said Wednesday, are "owned by the big money interests who want Nixon to win" and are going to show Wallace losing ground as the Nov. 5 election day approaches.

A spokesman for Gallup in Princeton, N.J., denied Wallace's charges that the poll has any connection with Nixon's campaign.

Nixon aides have made clear, meanwhile, that he will not participate in any television-radio debate this year that would permit Wallace equal time and thus additional national attention.

The aides acknowledge Nixon's reservations eliminate any prospect of a Nixon-Humphrey broadcast debate before the election.

Amid the opinion poll and debate disputes, Humphrey made a new appeal for Senator Eugene J. McCarthy's endorsement for the sake of Democratic unity.

Otherwise, Humphrey said in New York, the "impossible dream" that keynoted McCarthy's campaign of the Democratic presidential nomination might "turn into a quite possible nightmare of George Corley Wallace or Richard Milhouse Nixon."

Wallace probably will not be elected president, Humphrey said at a New York Liberal party dinner, but he said Nixon could be.

Pentagon Discounts Coup Bid

By MURREY MARDER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Officially, the United States sought Wednesday to discount reports that a coup d'etat had been attempted in South Vietnam.

State department press officer Robert J. McCloskey said "We have no information to substantiate that report."

It was learned, however, that the United States also was told that the alert had been invoked to head off a "demonstration" planned by South Vietnamese who oppose any U.S. concessions in the deadlocked Paris peace talks on Vietnam, fearing a U.S. "sellout."

One American source said "there was obviously some political turmoil there—I just don't think it got to coup proportions."

It is well known that supporters of Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky are particularly aroused by all reports of U.S. flexibility in the Paris talks.

'FOIL PLOTS'

South Vietnam president Nguyen Van Thieu of Monday told the national assembly that the nation must "foil" what he called "plots" by people whom he did not name. But he clearly implied that they are to the political right of him.

Thieu said "there are a number of people" who say "that this government has been bought out by foreigners; that this government advocates coalition with the Communists; they endeavor to create confusion and division and call themselves the champions of anti-communism as a reason to explain the political instability they cause if they succeed."

Off to Bad Start

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Three admitted bootleggers were put on two years' probation Wednesday in U.S. district court. Judge Gus J. Solomon said he thought they had learned their lesson after their very first customer turned out to be an agent from the U.S. alcohol and tobacco tax division.

THE MONUMENTAL STUDY OF automobile insurance produced in two and a half years by Mr. Justice Wootton and the members of his royal commission appears certain to spark discussion and controversy for a long time to come. The recommendations, even if implemented only in part, could result in a revolutionary change in the whole structure of automobile insurance in this province. It is equally certain that the report will receive close attention from provinces and states across the continent.

The principle that each car driver should insure himself and not the third party whom he might injure would be an entirely new approach to the system of compensating for loss deriving from traffic accidents. Lengthy and expensive legal battles to win recompense in civil suits would be abolished, and blame for an accident would have no bearing on payment of benefits. Set limits for premiums and benefits would bring standardization to the compulsory features of the insurance program, although the recommendations provide for further voluntary coverage at the option of the individual. And the identification of insurance with persons rather than with automobiles — protection and drivers' licences being tied together — would do much to eliminate the many problems which now confuse the automobile insurance field.

Because such a system would be unique on this continent—although some component features are found in other places—motorists going out of the province would find it necessary to take out the present type of third-party insurance for their own protection against possible claims, and this might be only one of the drawbacks of the suggested plan.

But the commission has done a masterly job in trying to get at the basic problems of traffic accidents and protection, and the recommendations regarding driver training and examination, coupled with the point system for traffic misdemeanors and a grading system for incidence of accidents, will undoubtedly be given a very close look by the government.

This report embodies an attempt to reduce traffic accidents as well as reduce misfortunes arising from them. It takes the very practical view that under the conditions of present-day traffic a proportion of accidents is inevitable — and the prospect is that the proportion will continue to rise as highways and city streets become increasingly crowded. This is a fact of life, and the commission has rightly faced it rather than waste its effort in hand-wringing or exhortation.

The freedom of motorists a generation ago cannot be duplicated under the conditions of today, and drivers a generation hence may look back on our own times as an era of open permissiveness. Restrictions and safeguards will have to be accepted as facts of life on the highways. The commission's study will do much to open the whole problem to logical and rewarding public examination, and Mr. Justice Wootton and his colleagues are to be congratulated on a valuable document.

The Maverick

BY REFUSING TO ENDORSE Vice - President Humphrey, Senator Eugene McCarthy has preserved his reputation as a maverick in United States politics and raised some basic questions about the principle of party loyalty. It is traditional that once a party has selected a candidate, his opponents for the nomination rally round despite any objections they may have to his platform. This solidarity is usually carried over into Parliament or Congress where, after a decision has been hammered out in caucus, the party members vote as a bloc regardless of individual views.

It can be argued that without such cohesion chaos would result and the legislative system break down. There is a tendency, however, to extend this principle of loyalty indefinitely to the leader as well as the party. Anyone who challenges the entrenched party head for the leadership is accused of undermining the party. This partly explains why so many political leaders stay on long beyond their time. The current leadership problems of the NDP at both the federal and provincial level illustrate the case.

This was the situation facing Senator McCarthy a year ago when he decided to oppose President Johnson for the Democratic nomination on the issue of Vietnam. Party officials appealed to him not to run and risk damaging party unity. Senator McCarthy persisted and although his candidacy was not successful, his campaign had a profound effect on American politics. Now the party is urging him to suppress his feelings on Vietnam and support Mr. Humphrey in the interests of party unity. Senator McCarthy, however, maintains that if the appeal to unity was not valid a year ago it is not valid today.

Whether or not this conclusion is completely sound, Senator McCarthy has demonstrated there still is room for men of courage and principle. His example should encourage others to stand apart when they believe strongly in some cause, and to challenge the leadership of their party when they feel it is necessary. That is what democracy is all about. all about.

A Prudent Delay

BRITISH COLUMBIA SCHOOL trustees have shown prudence in reserving, for one year, judgment on the educational finance formula promulgated at the last session of the Legislature. Until they know what its results will be, criticism would be premature. It is conceivable that they will find, under the formula, certain extra authority they had not anticipated — control, for instance, over the way allocated money can be spent on suitable projects of their own choosing.

It is understandable that this attitude does not extend to provisions under the formula which trustees believe restrict their budget-setting powers. This refers to the government ruling which requires them to hold their budgets at a point no higher than 10 per cent above the total approved the previous year, unless they take any of three courses.

One of the courses would be an appeal to the cabinet; another would be an appeal to the municipal councils within their jurisdiction; a third would be submission of their extra-money proposals to the ratepayers. Approaches made by any of these avenues could be rejected. But if the appeal for taxpayers' support failed, the board members would know that their programs were not approved by the people who elect them.

This seems to be a reasonable check on inclinations to extravagance by any particular board — and some are more frugal than others. At all events, the general decision to wait a year to determine results is well taken by the trustees. It could relieve them of the acute embarrassment frequently caused by judgment based on insufficient evidence.

A Highly Useful Biafran Inquiry

THERE was a noticeable absence of partisan spirit in the House of Commons on Monday as the government and opposition co-operated to make possible an immediate inquiry into the Nigerian-Biafran conflict by the external affairs committee. This was the more impressive because Mr. Stanfield had to resort to a rare procedure, requiring unanimous consent, in order to bring forward the motion on which agreement was built.

Western

The inquiry was sparked by the mission of two private members, Andrew Brewin and David MacDonald, to Biafran territory, by their public report and by their private representations to Mr. Trudeau. It is perhaps the more necessary because quite different conclusions have been drawn by the military observers, including a Canadian, who visited a section of the Nigerian front.

There is nothing remarkable about these differences and no reason to doubt the sincerity of either party. Both, no doubt, reported what they saw and what they were able to glean from the best sources they could find. But civil wars are even more confused than other wars and may be obscured quite as much by propaganda fogs. The obvious criticism of the Brewin-MacDonald mission is that the two members were in Biafra only 36 hours in circumstances which cannot have allowed very much movement. On the other hand some serious questions have been asked about the scope of the inquiry by the military observers, who should have had much greater opportunities for travel in the provinces now pacified by the Nigerian army.

Informative to Public

If the inquiry achieves nothing else, it should assist in the development of a better informed public opinion. We appear to be suffering at the moment from a minimum of reliable intelligence and a maximum of denunciations combined with demands (sometimes extreme demands) on the Canadian government.

Everyone agrees that Canada, in concert with other states, the United Nations or private agencies, should take whatever humanitarian action is open for the relief of suffering in Nigeria and Biafra. But this case, in public discussion, merges very easily into the advocacy of measures which in reality amount to intervention against Nigeria and thus raise extremely difficult problems.

The word which has most inflamed public feeling is genocide. In their report the two members speak of Biafrans dying from starvation, quoting estimates obtained presumably from church or Red Cross organizations. They also mention evidence of the bombing of civilian populations. There is no reason to doubt either finding. But neither is proof of genocide which involves the deliberate extermination of a people as practised, for example, by the Nazis with the helpless Jews. In war, unhappily, bombs quite commonly find the wrong targets and blockade is still an accepted means of bringing a foe to his knees.

On the other hand, as the mission reports, the Biafran belief that defeat means extermination may — whether right or wrong — be one of the governing realities in the present situation. The two members are convinced that Nigeria cannot be reconstructed and that the United Nations must intervene to prevent genocide, bring about a ceasefire and negotiate an end to the conflict. They quote the chief justice who says Biafrans cannot accept the Nigerian federation because it denied the Ibos security of life and property.

It may be one indication of the difficulty facing us that this is precisely the defence that was offered by General Franco and his colleagues for launching their attack on the Spanish republic. The British government (now under criticism for supplying Nigeria) was then heavily criticized because, instead of helping the legitimate government, it imposed an arms embargo — as did the United States — and attempted to organize non-intervention which, in so far as it worked, was of very substantial assistance to the rebel cause.

Black-White Difference

Mr. Brewin and Mr. MacDonald could probably show that there are many differences between the two situations; they attach great weight for example, to the democratic attitudes of the Biafran people. But in the present case the most obvious difference is that the government of a white country, Canada, is being urged to take the lead in bringing about an international intervention in a black country. The effect would be to deny military victory to the Nigerians who, up to now, have had the better of the fighting.

African Vulnerability

Everything would be easier if the African neighbors of Nigeria and Biafra were prepared to sponsor such a move in the United Nations. The reason they will not was recently hinted at by Mr. Trudeau in an observation which attracted remarkably little attention. It is that many of them, like Nigeria, are tribal societies. They fear the same dangers which split the Nigerian federation and are in consequence reluctant to take steps which might become precedents for international action in their own affairs.

From the tone of much comment it would seem that Mr. Mitchell Sharp, up until now, has had poor success in conveying to the country the magnitude of his difficulties. The committee hearings ought to produce a clearer exposition of the government's case than we have yet heard. But there may also, as some critics believe, be opportunities as yet unexploited for purely humanitarian intervention in the war ravaged areas. The committee hearings should be very useful on both counts.

To the Editor

Not at My Expense

In your paper of October 8, and on the front page, appeared two articles re. students (Delta) in one case, and school trustees (Vancouver) in the other, protesting the government decision to curtail recreational facilities in new schools due to present day costs.

More power to the government to do away with such frivolities which I, as a taxpayer for years, feel I cannot afford.

Educate them, yes, but let the kids get off their bottoms and exercise themselves in many ways I can suggest at no expense to me. — Old Timer.

FROM BLACKPOOL By TIM TRAYNOR

Can Wilson's Tough Policy Win Votes?

AT this seaside resort last week a political leader took the unlikely step of harnessing his party to a tough policy, the long term political benefits of which are becoming more and more problematical. The leader was Harold Wilson and he had no choice but to follow through his government's drive for economic health at the Labor party's annual conference. The party had to be keyed to this drive and targeted on a recovery-induced electoral boom for Labor. That prospect had to be kept foremost even though it is no longer clear that Labor salvation lies in the successful pursuit of its economic program.

Traynor

Certainty on this score did not survive the trauma of devaluation. It undermined Mr. Wilson's authority as an economic manager and put the government in the position of a harried functionary driven to action by larger outside voices. It was easy to conclude that the government was incidental to the post-devaluation program of economic therapy. It is consequently necessary to ask whether Labor can expect to be credited with whatever success it achieves. Defeat is of course a foregone conclusion if the program does not meet with some measure of success.

Even if it could be assumed that the credit for an economic revival would go to Labor, doubts would persist as to the electoral consequences. It is Mr. Wilson's misfortune to be straining for economic regeneration at a time when there in increasing disenchantment with things economic. Here, as everywhere, there is an impulse to assert the primacy of privacy and individual freedom as against subordination to wealth, enhancing but confining economic discipline.

Doctrinal Strait-Jacket

Not only has Mr. Wilson to insist on this discipline, he is committed to enforcing it within a framework of centralization and planning drawn from socialist doctrine. There is thus a possibility that the Labor leader will alienate the public in the process of setting Britain's economy right.

There is an indication of the way the wind is blowing in the phenomenal growth of radical movements over the past year. One-time Labor voters have moved in considerable numbers to particularist nationalism and to the hard-nosed anti-statism of Enoch Powell. The trend has been particularly marked since the introduction of the repressive post-devaluation reform program. Mr. Wilson naturally did his best to keep the conference away from such doubts by telling delegates over and over that the groundwork had been laid for party recovery, and that it was now on its way. He bent over backwards to demonstrate that the post-devaluation economic program was merely an intensification of his earlier policies and must therefore be identified with him. He told them to trust in an economic recovery to pull back defectors from the radical movements; these being basically a protest against the country's economic tribulations. His only concession to the idea of a deeper rooted radicalism was an attack on the racist overtones of Powellism.

The reaction of the party was illuminating. At only a very few points was it out of tune with Mr. Wilson. There were loud dissonances but they were usually on his wavelength. There was only a feeble echo of the ideological wrangling of past conferences. The pragmatism of Harold Wilson was accepted as orthodoxy. All that was arguable was whether it should be oriented to left or right. Thus the left wing union challenge was a challenge only to the government's policy of tight economic controls, especially over wages. The union leaders were quick to reaffirm their acceptance of Wilsonism.

Brown's Demand

The closest thing to a fundamental challenge was George Brown's vigorous exposition of the likely political trends of the 1970s. The irrepressible ex-foreign secretary postulated a demand for more public participation in national affairs and suggested that there could be too much concentration on the improvement of economic standards. The warning was, however, safely delivered in the context of a morale-boosting report on the government's progress in the first half of its term. Mr. Brown's remarks were taken merely as an elaboration of the report's vague proposals for the development of Wilsonism to meet the apparent desire for greater participation. (The report was given a radical flavor by the advocacy of wealth tax, but it was otherwise subdued, setting out a number of possible industrial and parliamentary reforms.)

Incredible as it may seem, no direct attention was given to combatting the nationalist upsurge in Scotland and Wales — traditionally the heartlands of British socialism. Alarmed ministers had to confine their misgivings to unofficial gatherings. The silence was deafening.

Massey Gift

Ottawa Journal

What a feast of Canadian art there is in Vincent Massey's final gift of paintings to the National Gallery. One hundred and one paintings from the finest private collection of Canadian painting have suddenly enriched the public domain.

Canadians can now see Thomsons and Jacksons, Milnes and MacDonalds which have greatly enhanced the Gallery's holdings. A trip to the fourth floor of the Lorne Building is a voyage of discovery.

Those who have been uncomfortable with some of the gallery's recent exhibitions of contemporary art, Canadian and international, will find pleasure and reassurance in old familiar names — and recognizable subjects!

The enjoyment of these paintings is deepened in knowing that each was chosen by the Masseys "for the love of each individual picture."

The Group of Seven, and names like Cullen, Morrice, Fortin, Emily Carr, are all so familiar today that Vincent Massey's daring and perception in acquiring the work of these artists long ago may be easily overlooked by a new generation.

The Masseys bought paintings which at the time scandalized the artistic establishment. They turned to those wild men who had scorned the academics and were trying to find a national Canadian style in the ruggedness of the landscape.

These painters appealed to Vincent Massey not only for the strength and beauty of their work but perhaps also because in so many aspects of his life he too was searching for a Canadian way.

His country is once again put deeply in debt to his taste, foresight and generosity.

Feet in the Air

Regina Leader-Post

Vegetarians who stand on their heads would make the best world leaders, according to a swami who runs a yoga camp near Montreal.

Swami Vishnu-Devananda, who came to Canada from India in 1958, started a campaign this summer to create a new breed of political leaders who would establish a "world government dedicated to universal peace."

The swami, who claims 200,000 disciples in North America, guarantees that politicians who come to his 60-acre wooded retreat will become better men by learning the art of meditation.

But first, they must spurn meat-eating, which "leads to violence and creates animal passions in man".

Included in the program, for which there is no charge (contributions are accepted), are morning and evening headstands and other exercises to "calm the mind and open the way to change in mental attitudes."

Sounds good, swami, but we've been trying for years to get our politicians to take their heads out of the sand and get their feet back on the ground. We'd prefer to see less meditation and more action, thank you.

Trudeau and the Press: The PM Shows Disdain

By CHRISTINA NEWMAN, Saturday Night

All summer long, cottagers on Meach Lake, a summer place a few miles from Ottawa in the black-fly and choke-cherry country of the Gatineau, were leaning out their windows watching for sports cars and saying to each other, "Hey, is that him?"

"Yeah. This one's got brown hair and she's driving."

"How old?"

"Oh, I don't know. Maybe twenty-four."

Him, of course, was the Prime Minister on the way with a friend to his official summer residence at Harrington Lake and the kind of questions they were asking about his mysteries in the Gatineau seemed reassuringly trivial compared to what was being asked downtown.

Exciting Unease

What Pierre Trudeau's actions were inspiring there was not idle curiosity but excited unease, even more intense than is usual with the change of a political regime. Within a month of his smashing electoral victory, Trudeau had served notice on three of the city's main power blocs — the cabinet, the senior bureaucracy, and the press gallery — that things were no longer as they had been. The formerly very powerful were busy trying to figure out if they were powerful still.

The three groups reacted according to form: the mandarins said nothing at all, preferring to nod enigmatically and bide their time ("Crises will come and he will need us" apparently at the back of every careful clever mind); the ministers were smiling heartily and reiterating hopefully, "He's great, what this country needs is a strong leader, we're all pulling together ... and don't forget, this is off the record"; and the press gallery was squawking in a fury of frustration, "How dare he — dammit we invented him — scorn us?"

To the political reporters the unforgivable thing was that the Prime Minister had publicly indicated his disdain both for them and their craft.

Trudeau had given ample notice of his attitude when he wrote in the foreward to his essay collection, Federalism and The French Canadians, "Mass media, to the extent that they claim to reflect public opinion, constitute a vehicle for error, if not indeed an instrument of oppression. For my part, I have never been able to read newspapers without a sense of unease ..."

Still, it came as a shock to journalists when Trudeau forebade members of his cabinet to talk and most of the ministers proved too frightened of him to disobey.

Reporters who had been on a first-name basis with cabinet ministers before the twenty-fifth of June would phone for appointments with these old friends and be turned away cooly by secretaries.

Central Agency

There was serious talk among Trudeau's advisors of setting up a central government agency for information, of developing an "information policy" and instituting a series of official "briefings" for certain "serious" journalists.

The first minister (John Turner) to make a press statement — not, mark you, an underhanded leak about a cabinet secret but a straightforward statement about upcoming legislation — was publicly rebuked.

Whether the situation will prove as difficult as the reporters at first feared won't be clear until the House meets and the capital begins to operate at normal tempo in the early fall.

Just Uninterested

But whatever relationship is worked out between the press and the government in the next few months, Trudeau's own attitude seems unlikely to change.

"It's not so much that he's disdainful of the press," says an aide, "He's just uninterested."

Long before the election, Trudeau has told reporters repeatedly that he never bothers to read what they write.

When he was minister of justice, press clippings on his department's affairs were handed to him every afternoon in folders just before he went into the Commons and he could be seen flipping through them in minutes with that air of boredom that sometimes masks his face.

Since most politicians read their clippings as avidly as actresses devour their reviews, Trudeau's extraordinary attitude was the subject of intense interest.

Dates to Dark Days

Most observers agree that it must date back to the dark days of the Duplessis era when, except for Le Devoir, every daily newspaper in Quebec, both French and English, was in thrall to the Union Nationale.

Even to the casual out-of-province visitor, this sycophancy born out of fear and greed, was dismaying to observe; to the passionate reformer that Trudeau was then, it must have been disgusting.

Less obvious than the trauma of the Duplessis period is the apparent influence on Trudeau, in so many aspects of his past and present life, of the British elitist tradition—an attitude that still permeates not just the Westmounts (and Outremonts) of this country but the upper reaches of academe and the public service as well—all milieux in which Trudeau is very much at home and from which he has drawn many of his key advisors.

Unpalatable

These men expect no more of the nation's press than they do of the nation's vineyards; they believe as a matter of course that the products of both will be unpalatable to the civilized.

In his attitude to the press, Trudeau has strong support in Ottawa not among the younger politicians but in certain sectors of the public service.

It's still common here to encounter the spectacle of the second-echelon bureaucrat, his normal timidity and abnormal snobbishness fortified by two Scotches, coming up to a journalist at a dinner party and talking in the accents of Westmount or Rosedale (or even Elbow, Sask., overlaid with those of the Oxford Union) about the rudeness and ignorance of the press.

These gibes are usually prefaced with, "I mean if you must have these little thoughts and are overwhelmed by the desire to commit them to print, you're fair game, agreed?"

Such comments reflect the speakers adherence to the belief, held in Britain since the eighteenth century, that the gentlemen of the press are no gentlemen — indeed, by definition, cannot be.

Times Greatest

To Trudeau, as to most of these men, the greatest paper in the world is still the Times of London.

Their horror of American-style journalism was intensified during the Pearson Years, when the press through its panting disclosures almost became the important fourth branch of government it is in the United States.

The dangers of too close contact with reporters must have been evident to Trudeau when he first went into Pearson's office as his parliamentary secretary in 1965, at a time when cabinet leaks to the press were threatening the whole ship of state with submersion.

(At one point Pearson was so desperate to stop inside information being revealed that he set up a caucus committee on secrecy; its composition and instructions were known by a journalist that same afternoon.)

Compete For Space

All through the Pearson regime the cabinet was torn by factionalism as various left-right and old-guard-new-guard combinations jockeyed to outdo each other in putting their conflicting viewpoints across. During the administration's last eighteen months, seven cabinet ministers were more or less openly competing for the leadership—and for space in the newspapers.

What this situation apparently inspired in Trudeau was a strong resolve to put the press in its rightful (insignificant) place.

He is said to feel that Pearson's lack of rapport with the electorate was due largely to the bad press he received, that the press is an institution that stands between the governors and the governed with too heady a sense of its own power and too few self-imposed responsibilities.

It appears that Trudeau now has enough control of the machinery of government to impose his wishes. He doesn't need press support while he has the public's adoration and an uncanny ability to feed that adoration through his mastery of television.

Furthermore, his personal staff is made up of men who are convinced he's right, that a chastened, more controlled press will not only prove good for the country but is what the country wants.

Their reasoning goes something like this: the Prime Minister is seeking to involve the public more closely in governmental decisions and to do this he hopes to establish direct communication lines between the people and the politicians without having the press tell the people what to think. He expects his ministers to engage in public discussions but only on issues that aren't on the cabinet agenda.

Forbidden To Talk

While cabinet decisions are being taken, ministers are forbidden to talk about them but are invited to argue their points of view vigorously within the confines of the privy council chamber.

Once the decision is made, ministers are expected to uphold the resultant consensus; the will of the people will thus be served, without the rights of the people being jeopardized.

It doesn't seem to have occurred to the Trudeau advisers that this complex process could produce difficulties.

They don't seem to have asked themselves how the public can discuss issues if the public hasn't heard about them. (Or is the public to hear about them only from the Prime Minister or his agents, who may be expected to speak from a certain bias?)

All On Agenda

Or: how can cabinet ministers know when it's permissible to talk, since every issue of importance is on the cabinet agenda most of the time?

Who can guarantee that they won't continue as they did all summer long to ignore public discussion entirely and to remain silent in self-protection?

In fact, who is able to separate the press from the public? Is the press not part of the public, not representative, even in its worst failings, of the society it serves?

The Trudeauites have no doubt that these mundane questions will be resolved as the Just Society unfolds itself. But even now in arguing the merits of their leader's press policy, their attitude is not entirely unlike one that was endemic to other Liberals in other eras and was best expressed by C. D. Howe when he remarked, "Who's to stop us?"

PRIME MINISTER TRUDEAU meets the press at news conference in Ottawa. He subjects himself to questioning as infrequently as possible, has sealed the lips of his cabinet ministers and generally displays a mixture of boredom and disinterest toward the press, says Christina Newman, Ottawa editor for Saturday Night magazine.

Cuba Gets 'New Lease on Life' From Death of Che Guevara

By RICHARD GOTT
© The Manchester Guardian

Second of Two Articles

HAVANA — "And what do you want to be when you grow up?" I asked the bright-looking 12-year-old in the front row of the class. "I want to be like Che," she replied quite simply.

She had learned her lesson well, for this is the "year of the heroic guerilla," and all Cuba is geared to perpetuate the memory and example of the famous guerrilla fighter, Ernesto (Che) Guevara, who was killed now almost a year ago in Bolivia.

The emotional impact of Guevara's death has undoubtedly given the Cuban revolution a new lease of life, and old revolutionaries discuss the details of the Bolivian campaign with the earnestness that they once talked of the old days in the Sierra Maestra.

●

In schools, Guevara and his old comrade, Camilo Cienfuegos (killed accidentally in October, 1959) are held up as the pattern of the "new man" that the revolution is trying to create.

Those who direct the education of the country's children, said one revolutionary leader recently, must be capable of educating them according to the example set by Guevara.

"We must make the eighth of October a date felt and respected by the children. No school must remain, however remote, without developing activities designed to instil in our children a sentiment of profound hatred for Yankee imperialism."

This hatred of the Americans is, of course, reinforced by the economic blockade of Cuba which the United States and its Latin American allies continue to maintain. There are people who argue sophisticatedly that the blockade helps Cuba by maintaining in the island a sense of solidarity in the face of the enemy.

I think this may have been true in the early years, but it is certainly nonsense today. There is a determination in Cuba at present which has nothing to do with the blockade.

It is the determination of a country which is trying to pull itself out of its situation of underdevelopment. It is unique in Latin America. But the blockade is a major difficulty placed in the way, and its adverse effect on the Cuban economy should not be underestimated.

Inevitably the blockade forces the Cubans to retain their links with the Soviet Union. The famous figure of a million dollars a day which Cuba is supposed to obtain from the Russians is derived largely from evaluating the subsidy which the Russians give when they buy Cuban sugar.

●

Certainly the Cuban experience makes one realize that the price of development is extremely high. It is a price that many people are not prepared to pay, and those who are hostile to the Cuban revolution are often hostile to the idea of development itself.

The fact is that if you insist that the rural population must be adequately housed, fed, clothed, and educated, this involves vast sacrifices on the part of the population—mostly in the towns—who previously lived well.

There is a very fundamental belief that seems to permeate Cuban thinking, namely that a society where very rich and very poor can co-exist is essentially intolerable.

Kelp Grows at Rapid Clip

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

Carl

Before October tides usher in the first runs of maturing salmon the kelp beds along the rocky shores reach their maximum growth and begin to show signs of age.

The bulbous floats and thick stems which lie near the surface lack the fresh transparency of youth and become coated with whiskery growths which add to their bedraggled appearance.

In time most will gradually deteriorate until, torn loose from their anchor by rough weather, they will be tossed up on the beach where they will add their substances to the organic stock pile. A few plants may winter over but they too will eventually succumb before new growth appears.

Two kinds of seaweed are commonly called kelp. One, known by botanists as Macrocystis, is found mostly along the exposed outer coast where it flourishes in great beds in water up to a hundred feet deep.

The other, called Nereocystis or bull kelp is found in more quiet areas such as along the inside coast or in protected inlets. It may have a stem more than 75 feet in length when mature.

* * *

The former plant is easily recognized by the series of leaf-like branches arising at intervals from the main stem, each branch being provided with a bulbous float at the base.

Bull kelp, the more common species in the area around Victoria, has a stem which starts out as a solid structure but which increases in diameter nearer the top, becoming a hollow tube and ending in an enlarged bulb from which two clusters of flat leaf-like structures grow.

Each is an alga, that is, it belongs to the most primitive groups of plants characterized by having a simple organization plan.

Most members of this assemblage are small in size, many of them are actually microscopic consisting of but a single cell. In general however, the various kinds of [illegible] and of the hundreds of species found throughout the world our kelp is the largest.

Its great size measured in the length of the stipe or stem is probably due to a combination of several favorable factors. Certainly its ability to grow and to maintain its position in deep water is a major attribute and undoubtedly the system of floats which support the mass of the plant body has played an important role too.

Of considerable significance also is the fact that kelp has an exceedingly fast rate of growth—as much as eight inches per day at the height of the season.

* * *

Such rapid elongation is no doubt necessary for a plant that may have to produce a stem more than fifty feet in length in order to reach the surface, all within a few short months since it is an annual.

Despite its rather simple body plan its life history is complex. When mature each plant releases great numbers of mobile spores from fertile patches scattered along the leaf-like blades.

Spores which arrive at a favourable spot grow into minute plants which in turn produce either eggs or swimming sperms. These unite to produce a new individual which in time grows into the familiar plant we see along the rocky shore.

* * *

Kelp plays a very important role in the economy of coastal waters by providing shelter and a holdfast for many kinds of marine creatures.

Where it grows thickest it forms an effective breakwater, lessening the eroding effect of waves on the adjacent shore.

It has considerable direct economic value as well; as a source of chemicals and other products used in industry it is now being harvested in large quantity along certain sections of our coastline.

It may well prove to be an important resource valuable beyond our expectation.

Swedes Drop Rate

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — The Swedish bank rate will be lowered Friday by one-half per cent to five per cent, it was announced today.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Industrials Post Decline

Industrials posted a sharp decline at the Toronto Stock Exchange today, while in Montreal the stock market lost ground in all sectors in late trading.

The stock market also declined in heavy trading at New York.

Gains and losses were evenly distributed across the mining board in pre-noon trading at Vancouver.

AT TORONTO, on index, industrials dropped 1.66 to 178.35, golds rose 1.73 to 211.73, base metals climbed .39 to 113.56 and western oils dipped .95 to 226.56.

Final volume was 4,040,000 shares compared with 3,814,000 Wednesday.

In industrials, Southam fell 2⅜ to 51, Inco 1⅜ to 41⅞, Seagrams 1⅝ to 46 and Dominion Textile 1⅛ to 16½. Ford of Canada gained 13½ to 272½ and Peel Elder 2 to 40.

Charter Oil dropped 1¼ to 17, Canadian Gridoil ½ to 14⅝ and Peruvian Oils 33 cents to $1.57. Great Plains Development rose ⅝ to 24⅝.

Bethlehem Copper was up 1¼ to 14½, Bankeno $1.05 to $5.85 and Patino ⅝ to 37½.

AT VANCOUVER Coast Silver was strong and gained .30 to $3.20 on 129,000 shares. Lornex put on .20 to $9.30 and Atlas rose .15 to $2.65.

However, Dynasty was off .50 to $10.25, Brenda was down a similar amount to $11.75 and Silver Standard dropped .17 to $1.55.

In the industrials, Trans-Canada Mortgage rose .25 to $2.75, but EDP was .62 lower at $22.37.

AT NEW YORK losses outnumbered gains by some 200 issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average was off about 5 points.

Pent-up demand from the Wednesday closing boosted volume as usual.

Turnover also was swelled by a parade of big blocks, among them 379,000 shares of Great Western Financial, off 2⅛ at 23. Earlier it traded on a 77,000-share block at 25.

Ingersoll-Rand rose about 2, and Torrington gained more than 3, after a report they planned to merge.

In Canadians, Canadian Pacific gained 1⅛, McIntyre Porcupine ⅛ and Massey ¼. Distilers Seagrams lost 1½, Dome ⅝, Granby ⅝, Hudson Bay ½, Walker Gooderham 1, Inco 1⅜ and Alcan ⅛.

AT MONTREAL Inco led industrial losses with a fall of 2 to 41⅝. Dominion Bridge retreated ⅝ to 16⅝ and Famous Players ½ to 66.

Canada Steamship Lines climbed ½ to 31⅝, CP Rails ⅝ to 69⅝ but Quebec Telephone slid ¼ to 12⅝.

Distillers Seagrams lost 1⅝ to 46½.

B.C. Oil fell ¼ to 47⅞ on a small turnover in senior oils.

Louanna led volume trading on the Canadian Stock Exchange with a gain of ½ cent to 25 cents on a turnover of 258,500 shares.

AT LONDON stock markets were dull today, but scattered firm features arose from company news of bids. Gilts drifted lower on lack of support.

With Wall Street Closed Wednesday, dollar stocks were quiet, and small rises by Ford and Woolworths were the only noteworthy movements.

Canadians made a mixed showing with Cominco, Imperial Oil and Dome $2 to $3 off, but Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas rose 1½ to 103½. Hiram Walker, Inco and Algoma were others to improve.

Royal Bank of Canada, Canadian Imperial and Nova Scotia lost but Bank of Montreal moved against the trend.

Tobacco Sales Drop Blamed on Taxes

OTTAWA (CP) — Soaring tax rates on tobacco this year are being blamed by the tobacco industry for a drop of three to four per cent in sales volume.

Last Dec. 1 the federal government increased its excise taxes on all tobacco by 10 per cent.

Since Jan. 1 provincial rates have gone up in Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Quebec, Ontario and Saskatchewan. The cigarette tax alone has been increased by as much as 300 per cent and by no less than 66 per cent in these provinces.

Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd. Wednesday reported net income of $4,070,000 or $2.54 a share in the 12 months ended June 30, compared with $3,763,000 or $2.35 in the previous year.

But it said its own unit sales were down 1.5 per cent and industry sales off 3.3 per cent in the same period.

SALES MAY BE OFF

Later figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, incorporating inventory changes, suggest that in the first eight months of the year industry sales may be off as much as 4.1 per cent from the same period of 1967.

No comprehensive survey is available to determine whether price is the big factor in these decisions to cut down or stop smoking.

But the retail price changes are substantial and well-detailed.

Last December's federal increase, for example, added 2½ cents to the cost of a pack of 25 cigarettes.

Here are some typical changes for the 25-cigarette pack in major cities between November, 1967 and August, 1968:

St. John's, Nfld.—To 72 cents from 58 cents. Newfoundland's provincial tobacco tax doubled to 12½ cents a pack on April 1.

Montreal—To 61 cents from 54. Quebec's tax increased 66 per cent to 10 cents a pack on March 28.

Toronto—To 59 cents from 50. Ontario tripled its provincial tax to 7½ cents a pack on March 13.

Saskatoon—To 60 cents from 54. Saskatchewan increased its tax to 8¼ cents a pack on March 1.

Prices tended to be lower in August in provinces that did not increase taxes this year: Halifax 55 cents; Saint John, N.B., 58; Winnipeg 61; Calgary and Edmonton 52; Vancouver 54.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices fell below Wednesday's close amid slight export interest today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Banks Need Credit To Start Credit Plan

TORONTO (CP) — The four chartered banks which have started Canada's newest credit card system may have to advance themselves some credit to operate it.

The Telegram says a confidential report from a large United States investment house projects a loss of $1.250 million the first year.

It adds that the report forecasts a profit of $149,000 in the second year, a little over $1 million in the third and $3.6 million by the fifth year.

The plan was started in August in Toronto and Montreal by the Royal Bank, Toronto-Dominion Bank, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and Banque Canadienne Nationale.

Auto Electric

Terms of a Whitaker and Revercomb Ltd. takeover disclosed last week by Auto Electric Service were 14,000 Autolec treasury shares and an unspecified amount of cash.

The Victoria-based firm with outlets up-Island will contribute $1.5 million in annual sales to the Toronto-based firm.

Bank Clearings

Value of cheques cashed in clearing houses across Canada increased 15.7 per cent in July to $52 billion from $45 billion in the corresponding month last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports.

Clearings were up 17.8 per cent in Ontario and 15.4 in Quebec. Other percentage increases: British Columbia 14.1; Atlantic 13.1; Prairies 11.3.

Husky Appointment

The appointment of Robert Strother of Calgary as Husky Oil general managr of acquisitions and land has been announced by Gene E. Roark, president of the company.

Roark said the Strother will supervise the company's expanded acquisition and land programs in Canada and the United States. Th operations of Husky are about equal in both countries.

Inland Gas Co.

Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd. Wednesday reported net income in the year ended June 30 of $2,548,421, 92 cents a share, compared with $2,489,882, 89 cents, in the previous year.

The annual report said gas sales increased to $13,307,665 from $12,988,672. The number of customers increased to 33,915 from 31,467, said president John A. McMahon.

CPA to Panama

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Transport Commission today announced authorization of Canadian Pacific Airlines to add Panama City to its services between Canada and Latin America.

An order issued by the commission's air transport committee says Panama City has been added to licences which already authorized CPA to fly scheduled services to Mexico City, Lima, Peru, and Buenos Aires, Argentina.

U.K. Rebukes Free Trade

LONDON (CP) — The British government Wednesday trampled firmly on the idea of participation in a North Atlantic free-trade area that would include Canada.

Lord Chalfont, the government's chief negotiator for Britain's entry into the European Common Market, told the Canadian Chamber of Commerce that such as association would not be "a satifactory alternative" to the ECM.

The North Atlantic concept has been widely touted in some political and newspaper circles here in recent months.

Lord Chalfont, a junior minister for foreign affairs, spoke out against it more plainly than the government has ever done.

"There is no sign that any U.S. government would support it," he said. "It would perpetuate the divisions in Western Europe. It would lead to technological domination by the U.S. It would have no political content."

Joseph Brien Found Guilty On Fraud

TORONTO (CP) — Joseph Benoit Brien, former president of Prudential Finance Corp. Ltd., was found guilty Wednesday of theft and two charges of defrauding the public.

Mr. Justice D. R. Morand said he will sentence Brien Oct. 17.

Brien was found guilty of the theft of 24,000 shares of Dominion Glass Co., the property of O'Brien Gold Mines Ltd., and of defrauding North American General Insurance Co. of $365,305 and $106,875 on two separate occasions.

P.A. Pulp Mill Opens Today

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Saskatchewan's first pulp mill, a development that pumped more than $100 million into the province's economy in two years, was to be opened today by Premier Ross Thatcher.

Billed as the largest single industrial investment in the industry-conscious wheat province, the $65 million mill went into production in July and is expected to turn out 250,000 tons of bleached pulp a year when it hits its stride.

The mill sits on a 2,300-acre site 10 miles east of this city of about 27,000 persons. More than half of the mill's 350 permanent staff are Saskatchewan natives. About 20 per cent of the 600 woodlands employees, who will harvest pine and spruce, are of Indian or Metis descent.

London Gold Glitters

LONDON (UPI) — In the six months of the "new look" gold operations since the gold crisis of the spring and the institution of the two-tier market, the London market has again shown its adaptability and flexibility, its chairman, E. Hawes, says.

It has now become a truly international market where sales by gold producers and speculators are handled on every working day to meet the buying demands of other speculators, hoarders, investors and industrial consumers of Gold.

"And we do it with a narrowed spread between buying and selling prices than is quoted in any other centre," a market member said.

For the first time in recent years the five firms which comprise the gold market invited newsmen to the banking house of N. M. Rothschild and Sons and lifted the veil on their operations. In the gold room at the Rothschild's, the price of gold is now "fixed" twice daily when buying and selling orders are matched and a guideline price agreed.

Since the spring crisis sealed off official monetary gold from "free mareket" gold, the character of the London market has changed—and rivals have emerged notably in Zurich.

Until the great gold rush of late 1967 and early this year, London was the channel through which supplies from the bank of England, acting for the reserve bank of South Africa and the international gold pool, were distributed to the world's markets. The formation of the two-tier market in March ended this system.

Gold became almost like any other commodity, subject to the pressure of supply and demand.

The London "fixing" price in gold is still the universally accepted true indication of conditions in the international market, and other centres still base their local price on London prices, market dealers said.

Now under the new "free" market rules only buyers have to pay a brokerage fee in London and this has been set at one quarter of a percentage point. No commission is charged to sellers.

Turnover on the London market still remains a secret but privately its members believe it still overshadows that of its Swiss counterparts. Many tons of the metal still change hands every day.

The London market demands a very high standard of assaying, melting and refining to meet its "gold delivery" specification and issues a list of acceptable melters and assayers whose bars can be traded in all major world centres in good faith and without being re-assayed.

Gentleman's Waterfront Estate

APPROXIMATELY 3 ACRES WITH 300 FEET SECLUDED BEACH
MAIN RESIDENCE AND 2 GUEST COTTAGES

This outstanding waterfront property, probably the best of its kind on Vancouver Island, was designed and developed to give the ultimate in relaxed western indoor-outdoor living. The main residence, a large single-storey home, faces the setting sun and opens out onto spacious sun decks and patios. The interior accommodation comprises: the master bedroom suite, the bedroom itself having a tasteful open fireplace and connecting with its own dressing rooms and bathroom. Second guest bedroom and bathroom. A living room over 30 ft. in length with raised hearth, stone fireplace; separate dining room; a very large and extremely well laid-out kitchen-family room combination of exceptional planning and design.

The guest cottages, while separate from the main residence, are connected by a series of partially covered walk-ways. The main one is a nearly new bungalow with its own oil-o-matic heating system—consisting of 2 bedrooms, bathroom, large living room with granite fireplace and kitchenette. The smaller one consists of panelled bed-sitting room with its own washing facilities.

All the buildings on this estate are completely in character, the grounds have been kept largely in a cleared natural state, allowing easy up-keep. The location offers safe, warm salt water swimming, close to golf courses, the city and air and sea transportation.
We consider this an exceptional property, realistically priced at $112,500.00

Sonic Boom Sweet Music In Europe

LONDON (CP) — The thunder of superjets echoing across the Bristol Channel may arouse twinges in the listener but it's sweet music to the makers of the supersonic Concorde—and to the British government.

The British-French gamble for big stakes in the air—a rare piece of co-operation these days—is nearing the critical point. In a few weeks the world's first passenger plane built for the far side of the sound barrier is due to take the air.

Officials of British Aircraft Corp. at Bristol said Tuesday they expect to have an announcement in two weeks on when their pre-production model will try its wings. France's Sud Aviation, which had a six-month head start on a companion prototype, is to announce its flight date at about the same time.

Both planes have been going through taxiing and full-scale ground-engine trials and are due for a series of low-speed flights once they get off the ground. If these are satisfactory, they will be pointed at the sound barrier within four months after take-off.

Expectations are the two huge planes will be airborne almost simultaneously—it could be any time before the end of the year.

HIT SOME SNAGS

The French plane is about eight months behind its originally-proclaimed flying date of last Feb. 28, thanks to some teething problems that included last summer's riots, but both firms profess happiness with the way things are going now.

They got a large amount of competitive elbow room from the way their major competitor—the Boeing 707 of the United States—has bogged down in technical difficulties. The Anglo-French builders had a worried eye over their shoulder until recently, when it became evident Boeing would have to take its bigger and faster creation back to the drawing board.

"I suppose you could say this hasn't been exactly discouraging to us," a BAC official said.

The British guessing is that the Concorde now is four or five years ahead of the United States and that the 132-passenger, 1,400-miles-an-hour craft should have a good grip on the world market for superspeed travel by the time the U.S. gets launched.

The hotter competitive threat now is Russia's TU-144, with about the same speed, load and general characteristis as the delta-wing Concorde.

TU-144 HAS FLOWN?

While its progress is being kept strictly under wraps, word from behind the Iron Curtain is that it may fly at about the same time as the Concorde—possibly a bit earlier. There are some unconfirmed reports that it actually has flown.

Aeroflot, the Russian airline, is planning to put it into service by 1970, getting a two-year jump on the Concorde.

The Anglo-French creation is going to get perhaps the longest and most rigorous tests in history before getting its certificate of airworthiness. More than 4,300 hours of flying time will be pre-production prototypes and the first three assembly line machines.

Despite the time gap, BAC officials profess not to be particularly worried about the TU-144 as a competitor. They contend it will not be available in quantity to their own prospective customers in the West. The U.S., for instance, would be highly unlikely to buy any.

Depending on how capability and the competitive situation turn out, the British and French stand to make or lose a lot of money. So far the two governments are committed equally to development costs aggregating about $1.3 billion and unofficial estimates of the eventual outlay run to about $2.6 billion before the project begins to pay off.

STAKES ARE HIGH

But the winners' stakes in money and international prestige—and Britain can do with both—are high. Concordes will go on the market at perhaps $19.5 million apiece. So far airlines have taken options on 74 planes including four that Air Canada will receive in 1973 and 1974 if it takes up the options.

British-French hopes are that 275 Concordes will have been sold by 1975 as long-distance commuters latch onto supersonic travel.

At its cruising speed of 1,320 miles an hour, the Concorde will just about halve the present London-Montreal flying time of seven hours, even allowing for no supersonic speed over land. British Overseas Airways Corp. plans a London-Montreal-Toronto service to start in 1972, soon after it begins crossings to New York.

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The Soviet Union's supersonic transport airplane may make its maiden flight this month, says C. W. Duffy, director of program information for the Boeing Aircraft Co.'s SST program.

Duffy noted that a Soviet flight would coincide with the October anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

Duffy said the Russian aircraft likely will reach speeds in excess of 1,000 miles an hour.

Boeing is designing a plane which would, flying at 1,800 miles an hour, cruise at 70,000 feet altitude and carry 230-280 persons over ranges of up to 4,000 miles. A trip across the Atlantic would take about two hours.

Duffy said the company will announce shortly whether the plane will have a fixed wing or variable wing—one which could be moved forward or backward, depending on speed.

"All we have now is a paper airplane," he said. "We are about four years behind the British and French and there is no way we can make that up."

Duffy said Boeing's principal design problem is how to load enough fuel for trans-oceanic flights.

Opposition Thinned Out

PANAMA (AP) The government majority in the National Assembly unseated four opposition deputies Tuesday and then swore in four pro-government candidates in their places.

The four deputies had been issued credentials as deputies-elect for the 1968-72 term, but subsequently charges were filed against them of electoral coercion on voting day last May 12.

Opposition spokesmen said the assembly action was the most dangerous precedent set in the country and that the assembly ignored a Supreme Court ruling permitting the four to take their seats.

A government tribunal had referred the charges to the assembly on the grounds that the assembly alone can try its own members.

The move increased the government's majority in the assembly to 34 from 30. The assembly has 42 deputies.

Bonds Shelved

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $10,000,000 bond issue by the Greater Vancouver Regional District has been shelved until early 1969 because there are no buyers. Investment officials said institutional investment money is short and the public appears more interested in the stock market.

Russians Avoid Nasty Comment

OTTAWA (CP) — In the old cold war days of the 1950s, the Russian diplomats were hard-nosed if not sometimes just a little bit nasty.

"Imperialists," they used to say undiplomatically and didn't seem to care two canapes whether Canadians turned up at their embassy receptions. As a result, the Canadians used to stay away.

Gradually, as East-West tensions eased off, cocktails with the Soviets became the biggest attraction in town on the diplomatic circuit.

Has Czechoslovakia put the clock back?

Soviet Ambassador Ivan F. Shpedko held a farewell reception Wednesday night at his embassy. He leaves here Oct. 16 after 5½ years and will be succeeded later in the year by Boris Miroshnichenko.

Several Canadian MPs turned up. Perhaps not as many as would have before the Aug. 20 Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia. But still a fair sprinkling.

Senator Paul Martin, government leader in the Senate and former external affairs minister, and Works Minister Arthur Laing attended.

The Russian diplomats eschewed any nasty comment—or any comment at all—on NATO's response to the continuing presence of Soviet troops in Czechoslovakia.

Rather, they were more concerned with damping down any Western resentment.

"A contemporary problem," said Mr. Shpedko when asked whether Czechoslovakia has changed Canada-Russia relations.

World Beauty Title Taken By Brazilian

TOKYO (UPI) — Maria Da Gloria Carvalho, a radiant Brazilian beauty, Wednesday won the crown of Miss International of 1968, edging out a lithe charmer from Sweden and a leggy lovely from the United States.

Brown-eyed, brown-haired Maria, who lives to sing and wants to travel, thanked her approving audience in practised if not perfect Japanese.

"Domo Arigato," said dry-eyed Maria as the 1967 Miss International, Mirta Massa of Argentina, placed the crown on her head. Her statistics are 38-22-38.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, OCT. 10, 1968—PAGE 11

Arthur Mayse

While I was still staring bleakly at my first mug of office coffee this morning, a zealot called to suggest that I should look into health food.

"Most people don't eat the right foods," she said. "They should be taught to choose what's good for them."

Perhaps we would all become better, kinder and slimmer people on a diet of turnip croquettes and loaves baked from hand-bashed barley.

But that's not the point, any more than the purpose of this Tuesday - through - Saturday ramble is to teach you "What you should be taught."

Further — and believe me, it took a long time for this realization to sink home — I can get along handsomely without the unsolicited services of the self-appointed teacher.

Mind, I am not knocking health food. Far from it! It's just that I believe with increasing fervency in man's right to make his own mistakes.

This up to a point: We should not hurt others in the process, and it is a duty imposed on us by our common humanity to save each other from lethal error when we can. It is right that a child be taught the folly of assuming that all clear liquids are water. The container could hold naptha, or vodka.

★

My spleen is reserved for those who insist that we be taught in areas where ignorance is of no great consequence, or where the insistence on teaching can do more harm than the error itself.

When we bought a boat trailer, I hadn't the foggiest notion of how to back the thing. So I set out to teach myself the knack, in the home driveway.

I got along reasonably well, and after a few bouts of practice, could navigate in reverse without jack-knifing, beating up the salvia bed, or intruding on the lawn.

Then one morning, we set out to try an actual launching on a boat ramp. We had the concrete apron to ourselves, the boat-laden trailer was behaving nicely, when a "This Guy has to be Taught" type appeared out of nowhere.

He stuck his head into the car—I had rolled the window down for a fast exit if need be—and hollered in my ear, "Hey, you're doing this all wrong! Better pull out and try it again."

What with his "Hold the wheel here and here," his "No, no, don't keep looking back" and his shouts of "Watch it, watch it!" I came within an ace of dunking us in Oak Bay.

He didn't teach me a thing. What he did do was drain my shallow self-confidence so thoroughly that it took another session of driveway backing to restore it.

★

About the time that 'togetherness' was blooming in the women's magazines, it seemed that every medical authority who could scribble more than a prescription felt impelled to teach the arts of wedded love. This he or she attempted in a book; the plain brown wrapper never had it so good.

The spate has dwindled now, and perhaps that's just as well. The instructions offered were dismayingly acrobatic, and one essential ingredient of wedlock was nowhere to be found in the copy that I browsed through. This is humor.

Those books may well have ruined more marriages than they nourished.

The self-sparking teacher, the person who cannot rest until he has taught some happy blunderer how to do it right, turns up in every bracket and department of life.

He will not let be, he is a petty tyrant, and as a swarm of niggling two-bit municipal regulations attest, he is well on his way toward ruling our lives.

The woman who believes you should be taught to eat health foods means well, and I hope she enjoys her bowl of blah and her dish of parsnip patties. But may the same be forced down this protesting throat if I ever decide that you must learn anything from me!

CLASSROOM CROWDING at Claremont Secondary School in Saanich means students must jam into lunchroom (above) to work. Three classes use lunchroom almost full time in the space squeeze. Principal J. W. Lott predicts school enrolment will climb from 698 this year to 964 by September of 1973. Saanich ratepayers vote October 19 on school district building referendum which would give Claremont two extra permanent and six portable classrooms. 2 Radar Men Not on Watch When Ship Hit

By JOHN SLINGER

The operations officer of HMCS Saskatchewan testified today that the ship did not have a complete "blind pilotage team" in the operations room when the ship struck a rock September 8.

He was testifying at a court martial of the captain of the destroyer, which grounded in a fog in Active Pass.

Lieut. Bran Oudshoorn said the two officers who normally carried out radar fixes to determine the ship's forward progress had been assigned other duties.

He said he had made no report to Commander Norman S. Jackson, the captain, because he thought it was "obvious the men were not in the operations room." Commander Jackson is being tried on three charges of negligence.

Lieut. Oudshoorn told the five-member court headed by Capt. Frederick C. Frewer, CFB Esquimalt commander, that Mrs. Oudshoorn and another guest were in the operations room watching at the time of the incident.

14-18 KNOTS

As the court martial entered its second day, Cmdr. J. L. Henderson of Ottawa cross-examined the ship's navigator, Lieut. Robert G. Howden, who had testified the destroyer-escort was making 14 to 18 knots in unexpected fog at the entrance to the pass.

"I felt perfectly confident of navigating Active Pass visibly."

But, said the navigator, "a dense and wet" fog hung over the entrance shoals and "I doubt whether I would have transited Active Pass at that speed."

In preparing for the trip to Esquimalt to Vancouver and back he said the captain had asked for an alternate route to Active Pass in case of bad weather. If there was fog "he had no intention of going through Active Pass."

Lieut. Howden, who said the captain had offered to give assistance whenever the navigator ran into difficulty, testified that the question of going blind through Active Pass had not arisen.

If the weather is bad "one normally doesn't go through."

OFF COURSE

Lieut. Oudshoorn testified that the tide running against the Saskatchewan at the entrance to the pass was 4.2 knots.

After making initial entry he noticed the ship was 100 yards to port (left) of the planned course.

He progressively recommended three course changes but the ship was 600 yards off course when she "struck a rock."

He said just prior to the incident he had sent a petty officer to the bridge to get Mrs. Oudshoorn and bring her to the operations room so she "could see what was going on there." He testified there had been "no conversation" with the guest in the room.

Under examination by prosecutor Maj. D. H. Ward, of Winnipeg, Lieut. Howden related how the Saskatchewan had left Vancouver on a prepared course based on a weather report that did not mention fog possibilities.

Leading sister-ship Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan steamed into the Pass entrance and Lieut. Howden, navigating by radar, ordered a course bearing 215 degrees.

He took a radar fix on Marianne Point and saw the ship was "bearing greater" than 215 and "I knew we were to port of track"—the planned course.

The operations room confirmed the ship was off line. Lieut. Howden recommended a course heading 225 degrees. She ship came around.

Suddenly operations recommended 240 degrees. Again the navigator concurred.

He was taking another radar fix when operations called for 270 degrees.

"I was reaching for the intercom" to say he agreed "when I felt a bump."

"The ship bumped and appeared to bump for some seconds."

Under prosecution examination, the navigator said "I felt we were aground."

SAW NOTHING

He went out on the wing of the bridge and, in the fog in the narrow passage, "nothing was visible."

Temporary repairs to the Victoria-built vessel, commissioned in 1963, cost $15,000. Extensive repairs will be required when Saskatchewan goes into drydock for a refit next year.

Orders require the operator of the ship's echo sounder, an instrument which measures water depth, to "call out everything under 10 fathoms," Lieut. Howden testified.

"I don't remember getting any report from him," he said.

The ship's charts indicated the deepest spot on the ship's intended course "appeared to be 15 fathoms."

"I knew I was off my track" but the echo sounder, even if it was making reports, would not have indicated how far.

CUT SPEED

The navigator said just after the course change to 215 degrees was ordered, Cmdr. Jackson ordered the ship's speed reduced from 18 to 14 knots.

Maj. Ward had the navigator take nearly three hours to go over the route, explaining each course change as the ship progressed across the Straits of Georgia.

He asked the navigator who was responsible for keeping charts up to date and Lieut. Howden said it was his responsibility.

"Were the charts up to date?" the prosecutor asked.

"At that time they were not," said the navigator, explaining there was "a large backlog of corrections" to be made and "I had not checked" to see whether they were being made.

The court martial is continuing.

CHOSEN TO ATTEND College Militaire Royal at St. Jean, Que., is Ian Kinsey, 17, son of Mrs. Olive Kinsey and the late Russel Kinsey, of 5217 Sark Road. The only Victoria resident accepted at the college this year and one of seven from B.C., he was president of St. Louis College last year, the final year before the college closed.

Uvic Brief Under Way On Housing

A special committee of Uvic students and faculty will prepare a brief for the Hellyer task force on housing this month.

Ronald Jeffels, Dean of college and student affairs, said this week the committee would study housing and accommodation as it affects the university.

The Hellyer commission will visit to Victoria Nov. 6. Arrangements for briefs and hearings are being made this week.

The task force was set up by the federal government a month ago under Transport Minister Paul Hellyer to study housing problems across the country. It is currently conducting hearings in Ontario.

The Uvic committee was set up a week ago under Dean Jeffels' direction.

Woman Put in Freezer For Phone Call Attempt

A woman who tried to phone the police during a midnight hold-up at Ernie's Fine Foods restaurant, 1616 Hillside, was shut in a refrigerator and kept there, it was stated in B.C. Assize Court Wednesday afternoon.

Raymond Victor Moorhouse, 19, an employee at the drive-in restaurant, testified that three men with sweaters pulled over their faces entered the restaurant and held up the staff with guns.

One of the men, Mr. Moorehouse said, took Mrs. Rose Davis by the arm, led her to a stand-up refrigerator and forced her inside.

Under cross-examination by David Skillings, Mr. Moorhouse said he was uncertain which of the men shut Mrs. Davis in the refrigerator.

Mr. Moorhouse was giving evidence at the trial of Peter Simpson, 21-year-old Toronto man, who has pleaded not guilty to robbing the restaurant; also to charges of breaking and entering and theft from the Monty Aldous home at 4590 Summer Place, and stealing a car from Mr. Aldous's step-son, Melvin R. Butler.

At a preliminary police court hearing, Mr. Moorhouse said it was Simpson who shut Mrs. Davis in the refrigerator.

In Assize Court Wednesday, he said it was another man who put her in the refrigerator while Simpson was emptying the cash register.

FACES COVERED

"Their faces were covered," he said, "and I was relying on voice identification. It wasn't until after the preliminary hearing that I became certain the man at the cash register had the same voice as the accused."

"Why didn't you tell the police about your change of mind?" asked defence counsel Skillings.

"Because I was told all would come out and be corrected at the trial," witness replied. Mr. Skillings said the change of mind came out two weeks ago when Mr. Moorhouse was interviewed by Crown counsel.

"Are you sure today that your voice identification of the accused is correct?" asked Mr. Skillings.

"Yes," Mr. Moorhouse replied.

Under questioning by Crown counsel Louis Lindholm, witness said one of the three hold-up men ran into the restaurant, pointed a gun at him and said:

"Don't move — this is a stickup."

'UNUSUAL'

Mr. Moorhouse said holdups were "so unusual" at Ernie's Fine Foods, he thought it was a big joke and "smiled from ear to ear." Then the gunman repeated "This is a stickup" in a rather nasty voice.

"Did you continue smiling?" asked counsel.

"No Sir, I knew they were in earnest."

Witness said Mrs. Davis picked up the phone. As she did so, two other men, both carrying guns, rushed past him. One of them took the phone out of her hand and led her to the refrigerator.

Mr. Moorhouse said the third man threw him to the floor. After Simpson had been to the cash register, the three men left the store. One of them pointed a gun at him, momentarily, then left without a word. Constable Peter Doherty of Esquimalt police identified Simpson in the dock as the man he found unconscious behind the steering wheel of a car after it smashed into a tree at View Royal soon after the holdup.

HIGH SPEED

The crash occurred when the car was being chased at high speed by Esquimalt police.

Constable Doherty said he found two other men unconscious in the front seat. They were Robert Rickward, 20, and Roger McEwan, 22.

Rickward died almost immediately; McEwan died a short time later. Simpson was treated for a broken foot, broken ankle and head injuries at St. Joseph's Hospital.

The trial continued today. It is being heard by Mr. Justice J. S. Aikens and a jury of two women and 10 men.

Retroactive Strike Vote Clears Air

Shingle workers at two local mills who walked off the job earlier this week confirmed their action with a strike vote Wednesday.

About 150 men are off the job at McCarter Shingle Co. Ltd. and Smith Cedar Products Ltd. and another 180 at the Hunting-Merritt mill in Vancouver.

William Bell of Victoria, president of the shingle weavers division of the carpenters' union, said today the vote makes the strike legal. One company spokesman said earlier it appeared to be a wildcat strike to him.

"The situation now is for us to try and get back talking with the companies and get this straightened out," said Mr. Bell.

Negotiations opened last April and the length of talks is one reason for the walkout. Millworkers also want wage increases and an hourly pay scale for numerous jobs where men are now paid by piecework.

SEEKING PRIVATE POOL

Nudist Group Winters Indoors

Victoria's newest nudist club is hibernating this winter in members' homes, and looking for a private swimming pool.

The Arbutus Park Club was formed in March for nudists who like to travel. It has no home base but this summer members made the rounds of nudist camps (sometimes called sunbathing clubs) on Vancouver Island and the mainland.

"This club is for those who may already belong to another similar club but want to travel around and meet others," said Oliver Lordly, associate director.

Last weekend they hosted the Western Canadian Sunbathing Association directors' meeting in Victoria. Representatives from Nanaimo, Courtenay, Powell River, Vancouver, Penticton, Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg attended meetings and were taken on a tour of Victoria.

Inter-club business was discussed and slides to be used on public speaking tours were edited.

There are now two sunbathing clubs operating in Victoria. The other is the Sol Sante club.

Plan Forecasts Higher Rates For 'Collision'

Mayor Names Auditorium Advisors

Mayor Hugh Stephen announced today the formation of a citizens committee to iron out the details on design of a civic auditorium-convention centre complex.

The committee will work in conjunction with Marathon Realty, the CPR development agency, to design a facility tailored to community needs.

Members of the new committee are Clare Copeland, president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce; T. M. Sherwood, Community Arts Council; Larry Ryan, Victoria Labor Council; Roy Denny, Downtown Businessmen's Association and Jack Morgan, director of community services for the city.

Mayor Stephen said the task of the committee would be to advise city council on the features that should be built into the facility to ensure maximum community use.

"Until now the total emphasis has been placed on use of the centre for conventions, but it must be stressed that for most of the year it would be available and used for other community functions," the mayor said.

He added that he was anxious that when final proposals are made to city council the centre, planned for the rear of the Empress Hotel, should incorporate all the design features necessary to the community role.

$100 Deductible For Everyone

Persons buying more than basic car insurance under the Wootton Commission plan would find rates higher than they pay now for property damage coverage.

The commission said in its report this is because the policyholder's own company would be meeting all the costs.

There would be no recovery as often applies now, from the other car owner involved, or his insurance company.

And there would be more claims for damages because under the present insurance system many drivers prefer to pay repair bills themselves than apply to their insurance company.

They know that besides paying a portion of the initial settlement — usually the first $100 — they can also expect a rate boost after making a claim.

This situation inevitably would force an increase in present premiums for collision coverage — perhaps as much as 36 per cent, the commission said.

Where a driver might pay $100 for collision coverage under today's third-party liability system, the new self-insurance for an owner's own repair bills would likely cost $135.70.

But while the consumer cost of "damage insurance" would be higher, the basic cost of insurance required as protection against death or injury would be considerably less than at present.

The commission commented on two forms of supplementary insurance coverage which likely would be required under a no-fault driver insurance system.

The first would supplement the basic level of death and disability insurance which may be considered by some drivers as inadequate.

Insurance companies could be expected to offer such additional insurance at relatively low cost to cover benefits such as ambulance services and other out of pocket expenses, it was suggested.

The insurance industry would be expected to offer considerable choice in voluntary endorsements and riders to extend coverage.

Incentive to Defensive Driving

However, it is suggested that the minimum deductible amount (payable by the insured) should be set at $100 for collision coverage in order to give incentive to defensive driving practices.

Any lower deductible could encourage irresponsibility in those drivers who knowing their own damage would be paid for, may jeopardize unnecessarily the safety of others, commissioners said.

It was found in examining the mechanics of the proposal that average claim size would not be greater than at present, although frequency would be.

It also was found that claims expenses would be reduced, leaving a greater share of the premium dollar available for payment of claims.

Any dispute or dissatisfaction over any claim or payment could be taken to a proposed insurance appeal board.

Referring to agent's commissions the commission said it was not prepared to recommend a maximum amount chargeable on voluntary insurance coverage.

Any reduction on the commission percentage on higher cost insurance should be left to arrangement between agent, insurance company and consumer—"provided there is effective competition," the report said.

Insurance, Agent's Fees Separate

But in this connection, the commission found favor in a "disclosure" plan. It would require each voluntary insurance contract to show clearly the cost of insurance separately from the fee payable to the agent.

"This would make the agent's professional fees as readily ascertainable as those charged for services by members of other professions," the commission said, and be in the interests of more effective competition.

It would be workable only if the direct-writing companies operated by rules that eliminated the service costs customarily carried out by independent agents, it said.

Although predicting a representative cost for supplementary insurance under the Wootton report was difficult to arrive at, the commission gave an actuarial-based breakdown of how it arrived at the basic compulsory premium.

At a total $16.76—compulsory premium for death and disability minimum coverage—a driver would be paying $10.36 pure premium, 45 cents adjustment expense, $1.80 underwriting and administrative cost, $3 agent's commission, 82 cents contingency reserve and underwriting profit, 34 cents for 2 per cent provincial premium tax.

Drivers with an escalating number of demerit marks for driving offences would pay for the basic coverage on a rising scale up to $26.48, after which they could be suspended from driving, but their insurance would remain in effect.

Plans Drafted For Long Beach Park Project

Kenneth Kiernan, B.C.'s minister of conservation and recreation, said today his department is preparing a working draft for a federal-provincial agreement over Long Beach Park on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

The park proposed for a 20-mile wide strip of surf and sand will be discussed by Mr. Kiernan and Northern Development Minister Chretien at a federal provincial conference on tourism in Ottawa later this month Mr. Kiernan said.

Mr. Kiernan said he had received a reply from the federal minister which stated "in general terms that we should now proceed with outlining an agreement."

THE NEED IS GREAT

Volunteer canvassers are needed for the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal's door-to-door campaign which begins Tuesday.

A total of 2,100 canvassers will be required, a spokesman for the United Appeal said today.

Volunteers are asked to call the Community Chest office at 382-6708 for further information.

Ask The Times

Q. In Monday's issue you mentioned a mine disaster in Ladysmith which you claimed happened on Oct. 5, 1918. I think this explosion and fire occurred in 1910. Are you sure you're right?—J. M. McD.

A. The Times was wrong. The actual date of this disaster was Oct. 5, 1909. On that date 32 men were trapped and killed underground following an explosion in a mine level at Extension. Ladysmith never recovered economically as a mining town. There was, however, a 1918 mining disaster on Protection Island when a cage dropped killing 16 men. The confusion in dates stems from this.

OLYMPIC PREVIEW

Acclimatized Athletes Hold Definite Edge

Following is the first of a series of articles on the 19th Olympic Games written exclusively for the Daily Times by Roger Bannister, the first man to break the four-minute barrier for the mile.

By ROGER BANNISTER

The decision to hold the Olympic Games at altitude was as ludicrous as forcing each competitor in the Mille Miglia to use a different brand of fourth-rate petrol or as randomly allocating bizarre weights to horses in the Derby.

Altitude is a handicap which affects each athlete differently. It slows down the distance runners, soups up the sprinters and makes nonsense of the record books.

The bright side of this gloomy picture is that for the last three years the scientific world has beavered a way to dredge up as much useful information as it can find.

We know that over a five thousand metre race (just over three miles) the average athlete will be 8 per cent slower after a week at altitude and will still be 6 per cent slower at the end of a month.

But his 2 per cent improvement is worth 120 yards, enough to cover the whole field in the finish of an Olympic final. So the scientist has told us that victory in the distance events will go to the best acclimatized athlete.

But from all the scientific tests of the last few years there is a missing factor. The difference between a man running races in order to be tested and running with gold medal swimming before his eyes is as different as practising life saving and actually having to do it. Your mind is your body's shield — it tells you when to stop. But in the Olympics your mind is at war with itself and your safety warnings are muted.

How does altitude affect the performance? In distance running the muscles, minute after minute, continually demand more oxygen to obey the mind. The arterial blood is usually saturated with oxygen. The inexorable demand of the muscles eventually leads to a reduction in the amount of oxygen in the arterial blood to the heart, brain and muscles.

The oxygen cannot be moved from the air into the lungs quickly enough because it is 25 per cent thinner at altitude; it cannot cross the delicate membrane in the lungs in sufficient quantity. When this point is reached the whole complex machinery begins to fail.

There are two parts of the body that usually have preference in their needs for oxygen, the brain and the heart. If starved of oxygen both may falter. I remember with awe at the end of hard races seeing the world turn grey, because the nerve cells of our eyes were too starved of oxygen to respond to color.

The brain in long distance races, like the marathon, may stop working clearly. I know some runners who have "forgotten" whole sections of races as they plodded on in a trance. Such runners become stubborn as well as muddled.

The whole realm of finite consciousness contracts to a narrow struggle against the opponent and the stop-watch, regardless of personal safety. Because he feels strange the athlete sometimes mysteriously refused the vital drink for which his body craves. Then a vicious circle occurs, greater confusion and greater upsetting of the delicate balanced environment of the brain.

We know less about the way in which the heart may misbehave. In one series of tests at altitude Martin Hyman, though he did not fall, suffered what the Everest physiologist Pugh described as "profound exhaustion." His pulse was irregular and he is not the only athlete to whom this has happened.

The heart as if in protest abandons the perfect natural rhythm of contraction that is usually never lost, night or day, from the cradle to the grave. No one knows how fine a border exists between the temporary protest of a few extra beats and a more persistent protest of a total irregularity that would terminate performance abruptly and shockingly.

●

The lack of oxygen at altitude can reveal unsuspected abnormalities in athletes. A trivial reduction at sea level in the iron combining pigment haemoglobin within the red cells becomes a serious handicap at altitude. The British team have already taken iron suplements by mouth which can be expected to increase their oxygen carrying capacity at altitude.

In other teams there may be some unfortunate athletes with mild anaemia that has escaped detection.

A second problem has only just arisen. Some Negroes in training at Lake Tahoe in California have been found to have an inherited abnormality of the red cells which causes them to "sickle" and burst if they are exposed to unusually low levels of oxygen. These athletes were unaffected until they started to compete at altitude.

This possibility might have been predicted but only in the last month have any ill effects been reported. Fortunately few of these American Negroes are actually competing in the long distance running event.

The conclusion from all this is that though we have been learning fast in the past three years there is still much to learn. What shall we learn too late?

With every group of athletes studied at altitude the rates of acclimatization have differed strikingly. With each successive spell at altitude the rate of improvement increases. Any infection, which might pass unnoticed under ordinary conditions, can become a major setback in the acclimatization process.

The Olympic rules on acclimatization hastily written in 1967 state that no athlete may spend more than a month out of the last three months before the Olympics at altitude, unless of course he happens to live on an Alp! Richer countries with mountains within their frontiers have ignored the spirit if not the letter of the rule and given many of their athletes full time altitude training in the past year. Their teams will have an overpowering advantage.

●

Tim Johnson, the British marathon runner who did not have exceptional merit a year ago, went to Mexico City in order to work in 1967. This year when he returned to the British six-mile championships he ran astonishingly well and trounced the field. His likely advantage in Mexico over other British runners who have spent only a month at altitude is likely to be the equivalent of a 2 per cent or some hundred metres in the course of three miles.

The Ethiopian Bikili Abebe has won two marathon titles already, largely because he has lived at altitude all his life and he must be the clear favorite for the Mexican marathon. Whatever his genetic advantages, since birth he has been breathing air with 20 per cent less oxygen than the rest of us and having to stretch his lungs accordingly.

The majority of the British distance runners with an average of two short spells at altitude in the past year who are now in their final week of their month's pre-Olympic training in Mexico are clearly at a disadvantage.

I shall be surprised however if there are not some distance athletes arriving in Mexico City almost totally without any acclimatization. It is in these athletes that the risk of collapse in long distance races like the marathon is high, though if promptly rescued I do not think anyone will die. Nor do I think that any permanent ill effects will occur, comparable for example with the punch-drunk syndrome in a boxing booth sparring partner.

Who will reap most reward from this odd Olympics? In theory the Russians after their prolonged sprees in the Caucasus, the French from their mountain centres decreed by de Gaulle and the Americans from the loftiest parts of California, should sweep the board. But the fates may spring surprises on us all.

Liske's Passing Boosts Stamps Back Into Lead

TERRY SAWCHUK
. . . four-year absence

CALGARY (CP)—First place in the Western Football Conference standings went back to Calgary Stampeders Wednesday night after an easy 26-10 victory in a Canadian Football League game against Montreal Alouettes.

Calgary quarterback Peter Liske took to the air for three touchdown passes, connecting on 17 of 29 tries. He now has 200 completions for the season, 20 for touchdowns.

The win, before 18,450 fans, gave Calgary a total of 18 points, one more than Saskatchewan Roughriders and seven ahead of third-place Edmonton Eskimos. British Columbia has five points and Winnipeg four.

The loss put Montreal—with six points—deeper into the Eastern Football Conference cellar. League-leading Ottawa has 13 points while Hamilton and Toronto each have 12. All teams in the Eastern Conference have played 10 games.

Ted Woods, Gerry Shaw and Herman Harrison scored touchdowns on passes from Liske. Larry Robinson led individual scoring with three converts, a 28-yard field goal and a single. Ron Stewart scored a single.

Montreal threatened early in the game, but the Stampeders pulled ahead 7-0 at the end of the first quarter when Woods romped home from 10 yards out. The Als were attempting a punt after several long passes failed and Frank Andruski blocked it.

Wayne Harris fell on the loose ball. A few plays later, Liske threw to Terry Evanshen who flipped it to Woods.

STRIKE TO SHAW

Calgary doubled their points at 3:37 of the second quarter moving 70 yards in five plays before Liske threw a 21-yard strike to Shaw.

The Alouettes got on the scoreboard seven minutes later with a 12-yard field goal from David Ray. They had rushed to the Calgary two-yard line where quarterback Carroll Williams bobbled the ball.

A second drive by Calgary less than two minutes later resulted in Harrison taking a four-yard pass from Liske for six more points. Robinson made it 21-3.

LONG MARCH

The third quarter scoring was held to one point for Calgary when a 32-yard field goal attempt by Robinson went wide for a single.

Robinson's field goal early in the last quarter and a conceded single on Stewart's punt put Calgary up 26-3.

The Alouettes' only touchdown was done in style. A long pass attempt from Liske to Evanshen was intercepted in the Montreal end zone and the Als marched it 100 yards for Gray's touchdown and a convert by Ray to end the scoring.

Sawchuk Traded Back to Detroit

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With the opening of the National Hockey League season less than 48 hours away, Toronto Maple Leafs have no captain and Detroit Red Wings have another goalie.

Maple Leaf captain George Armstrong has retired and coach Punch Imlach has yet to name a successor.

However, if Maple Leaf Garden president Stafford Smythe has his way Armstrong will be a non-playing captain.

CARLETON SIDELINED

Meanwhile, Imlach learned Wednesday that the Leafs, fifth-place finishers in the Eastern Division last year, will have to open the season in Detroit Sunday without winger Wayne Carleton. He has a hairline fracture of the wrist and will be out of action for about two weeks.

Terry Sawchuk returned to Detroit Red Wings Wednesday after a four-year absence while he played for the Maple Leafs and Los Angeles Kings.

The Wings gave up Jim Peters for the veteran goalie.

It will be Sawchuk's third stint with the Wings. He was with them from 1950—when he won the Calder Trophy as Rookie of the Year—until 1955 and was an All-Star in each of the five years.

Traded, he stayed with Boston Bruins for two years, and returned to the Wings in 1957. He remained with the Wings until 1964 when he was drafted by Toronto. Then he was picked by the Kings in the expansion draft.

HOLDS SHUTOUT MARK

A four-time winner of the Vezina Trophy—he shared it with Johnny Bower of the Maple Leafs in 1965—he has a record 102 NHL shutouts.

The Red Wings now have three goalies in camp, but general manager Sid Abel said he intends to open the season in Boston Friday with Roger Crozier and Roy Edwards.

Elsewhere, coach Red Sullivan of Pittsburgh Penguins of the Western Division, said his club's pre-season record of one win and one tie in seven starts is no cause for concern.

He said much of the time was spent experimenting and this year the Penguins have improved offensively and defensively. Last year they finished fifth in the six-team expansion division.

Gulls Topple Spurs On Two-Goal Surge

DENVER — San Diego Gulls scored a pair of goals just 44 seconds apart near the midway mark of the third period Wednesday night to snatch a 4-2 win from the new Denver Spurs in the Western Hockey League opener for both teams.

Bruce Carmichael and Willie O'Ree slammed in passes from Alex Faulkner to snap a 2-2 tie.

Dave Richardson and Warren Hynes tied the game for the Gulls after Denver had twice taken the lead on goals by John Rodger and rookie Jim Shires.

An opening Denver crowd of 4,023 saw the Spurs outshoot the Gulls 38 to 34.

San Diego goalie Bob Champoux left the game early in the first period with a cut chin and was replaced by Jack McCartan.

Hockey Bucks Suspend Four

PORTLAND (AP) — Portland Buckaroos announced Wednesday the suspension of four players who have not signed contracts for the Western Hockey League season, which started Tuesday.

Harry Glickman, club president, announced the suspension of goalie Dave Kelly, centre Norm Johnson and forwards Bill Saunders and Cliff Schmautz.

Hal Laycoe, general manager, said Chicago Black Hawks are sending Bob Sneddon, 24, as a replacement for Kelly as goalie. Other replacements are being sought, Laycoe said.

Lolich Goes Against Gibson After Tigers Square Series

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Mickey Lolich and Bob Gibson went into their seventh-game World Series date today with a bit of apprehension. But neither was backing off from the confrontation.

Gibson, ace of St. Louis pitching staff, was to work the deciding game with three days rest instead of his customary four between starts, while Detroit's Lolich was coming back with only two days off—one less than he is used to.

Both were going for their third Series' victory and were less than delighted to be working with short rest.

UNABLE TO COMPARE

"Anytime you break a routine . . . do something out of the ordinary, or something you're not used to, it will affect you somewhat," said Gibson who beat the Tigers in the fourth game with just three days rest.

"I couldn't judge from that game what difference the short rest had. The weather was so bad. With conditions like that, you can't compare a game with any other one."

Sunday's fourth game was played in a steady rain.

DIDN'T EXPECT SEVEN

Lolich, who won the second and fifth games, said he was surprised to be working again.

"I figured the fifth game was it," he said after the Tigers had tied the Series with a 13-1 romp behind Denny McLain Wednesday.

"I'll be able to go out there and throw," Lolich continued, "but I won't be as strong as with three days rest. It depends on what kind of game it is."

"Pitching with two days rest," said Lolich, "I'd prefer a bigger ball park."

Busch Stadium wasn't big enough to hold the Tigers Wednesday.

They exploded for a record-tying 10-run third inning and McLain coasted to his first Series victory after two losses.

HITS GRAND SLAM

Jim Northrup walloped a grand slam homer—the 11th in World Series history—and Al Kaline stroked two singles, driving in three runs in the big inning. Kaline later added a homer, lifting his average in his first World Series to .440.

Kaline, with 11 hits, and Lou Brock of St. Louis with 12 both had a shot at the record for most hits in a series—13 held by Bobby Richardson of New York Yankees, and Gibson was after a record-shattering eighth straight Series victory.

KALINE STARTED IT

It was Kaline's first hit that drove in the Tigers' initial run in the third and knocked out starter Ray Washburn. Dick McAuliffe had opened with a walk and Mickey Stanley singled him to third. After Kaline's hit brought McAuliffe home, Norm Cash, who had three hits, singled Stanley across.

Willie Horton walked, loading the bases and Northrup, who had four grand slams during the regular season, unloaded them.

Two walks and a hit batsman loaded the bases again and three straight singles by Kaline, Cash and Horton brought four more runs across.

After that, it was all downhill for McLain.

And it meant it would be all uphill for Gibson and Lolich today.

Denny Thanks Them All

ST. LOUIS (AP) — When Denny McLain makes his pitch for a six-figure baseball contract in 1969, Jim Northrup would like to go along for the ride.

McLain would be happy to have him aboard—along with all the rest of the Detroit Tigers.

"I want to thank every guy on this club," McLain said Wednesday after going from two-time World Series goat to just-in-time hero as the Tigers pummeled St. Louis Cardinals 13-1 with the help of Northrup's grand slam homer.

"I wish I could take the whole gang into salary negotiations with me," said the Tigers' sore-armed pitching ace, who scattered nine hits while atoning for two series beatings and setting up the seventh game showdown today.

RECORD EQUALLED

Northrup, meanwhile, keyed a record-tying 10-run Detroit burst in the third with a bases-loaded blast into the upper deck in right field.

One of the other happy Detroit players was big catcher Bill Freehan, who collected one hit to end a 0-for-16 slump through the first five series games.

As Cards trooped into the clubhouse after the defeat, catcher Tim McCarver shouted: "Hey get 'em tomorrow, men, get 'em tomorrow, dammit!"

Other Cardinals had little to say, except for manager Red Schoendienst who recalled dreaming up a character named Leroy after Tigers' 10-run outburst, and wishing he'd come in and pitch.

"For that one inning I was hollering 'give the ball to Leroy'," Shoendienst laughed.

"I don't know who Leroy is, but I wanted to give the ball to somebody."

Canadian Team Fifth In World Golf Event

MELBOURNE (CP) — Marvin Giles fired a blistering five-under-par 68 today to lead the United States into a two-stroke lead at the half-way mark in the world amateur team golf championship in this Australian city.

The United States has a 431 total, Britain and Mexico are tied for second with 433, Australia is fourth with 438 and Canada fifth with 440.

Australia, defending champion of the Eisenhower Cup, had a two-stroke lead over Britain after the opening round Wednesday but none of the Australian golfers broke par today.

Briton Peter Oosterhuis and Ernesto Perez of Mexico are tied for individual honors after two rounds with 141 totals. Oosterhuis shot a 71 today and Perez had a 69.

Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., also had a 69 today and is tied with Giles for second place after two rounds. They have 142 totals.

The competition is played by four-man teams, with the best three scores counting each day.

Other Canadian scores today were posted by Jim Doyle of Winnipeg, 73, John Johnston of Vancouver, 75, and Robert Wylie of Calgary, 73.

VIKING VIEWS

By STEVE HUME

With the hectic run-around of registration pretty well out of the way, University of Victoria teams are settling in for another winter of competition.

Nine teams are gearing up for weekend activity, but only one squad will travel over the Thanksgiving holiday.

A seven-man team from the university's sailing club will journey to Seattle Friday for three days of competition.

The Uvic sailors will race against eight other teams in the Northwest Inter-collegiate Yacht Racing Association event.

* * *

Soccer, field hockey, rugby and ice hockey teams will all see action at home.

The soccer Vikings tangle with Canadian Scottish at Topaz Park Sunday, while the Norsemen will test Kings in second division play at Gordon Head.

Saturday the women's varsity field hockey squad tangles with Mariners at Topaz, while the university second team takes on Grasshoppers at Victoria High School.

The men's field hockey team plays an exhibition match Sunday against Oak Bay at Gordon Head.

* * *

In rugby, the Vikings, still shaken from a 19-3 beating at the hands of Vancouver Meralomas, mix it up with Oak Bay Wanderers Saturday.

The Victoria Rugby Union first division game is scheduled for Layritz Park at 2 p.m.

The Norsemen rugby team faces Cowichan at Gordon Head at 2 p.m. in second division action.

A rookie-laden Vikings hockey club opens regular play in the Vancouver Island Hockey League Friday at 7:45 p.m. in the Esquimalt Sports Centre with a match against Queen's Own Rifles.

Kamloops Trimmed By Vernon

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Aggressive stickhandling by Vernon Essos foiled late-starting Kamloops 9-6 Wednesday night in a British Columbia Junior Hockey League game before 800 fans.

Jack Marsh, Wayne Dye and Lawrence Quechek scored twice each for Vernon in period leads of 3-0 and 5-2. Gerry Vachon, Bob Mayer and Don Mansen contributed a goal each.

Don Stewart led Kamloops with four goals and Larry Peteneaude and Larry Simon also scored.

RETURNING from vacation, Peter Wheaton is scheduled to step back into Pacific Coast Soccer League action with Victoria O'Keefes Sunday at Vancouver. Currently in third place, O'Keefes will tangle with Columbus at Callister Park.

North Shore In 0-0 Tie With Croatia

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Croatia and North Shore played defensive soccer Wednesday night and recorded a 0-0 tie in a rain-soaked Pacific Coast Soccer League game before 350 spectators.

Vancouver Firemen lead the league with eight points. University of British Columbia has seven, Victoria four, Burnaby and North Shore three each, Vancouver Columbus, New Westminster and Croatia two each and Vancouver Eintracht one.

City Players On B.C. Team

Four Victoria players from the Vancouver Island Ladies' Field Hockey League will join one of two provincial sides slated to compete in the Canadian tournament in Winnipeg, starting Friday and ending Monday.

Jill Boyd, Carolyn Penn and Jill Hawkins will come from the Mariners while Oak Bay is sending Janice Holmes.

The two B.C. teams will compete with two from Ontario, one from the Maritimes, one from Quebec, one from Alberta and a Manitoba-Saskatchewan combination in a round-robin tourney.

Hornets Grab Share of Lead

Bounced from the unbeaten ranks into a deadlock for first place Wednesday, Claremont faces another rugged Inter-High School Soccer League challenge on Friday.

Riding the crest of a six-game winning streak, the Claremont kickers went tumbling Wednesday when Mount View Hornets hammered out a 2-1 triumph and grabbed a share of the lead with the Cs.

The two leaders are six points in front of Victoria High Tyees, but the Tyees, idle Wednesday, have a game in hand and have been impressive in recent starts. They'll tangle with the Cs Friday at Claremont while the Hornets go shooting for another victory against Mount Douglas.

ESQUIMALT WINS

Mount Douglas was tripped in the other match played Thursday as Esquimalt stayed in the playoff race with a 4-2 win. Oak Bay collected a victory by default when Belmont was unable to field a team.

Bill Walker fired the winning tally for Mount View after Claremont had come from behind and seemed almost assured of a draw.

Gary Clarke sparked the Hornets with a penalty goal at [illegible] minutes and claremont ended an uphill struggle when Ted Clarke evened the score with only four minutes remaining.

Winger Rob Alexander set up three goals as Esquimalt fashioned a 4-0 lead.

Alexander provided passes for scoring shots by Doug Casperson and George Pakos in the first frame while George Twamley netted a penalty goal. Casperson received help from Alexander again in the second half before Mount Douglas staged a rally.

Russians Hope To Oust Avery

MEXICO CITY (CP)—When Olympic officials disclosed Wednesday that 540 female athletes had been given sex tests—all passed—a new controversy came into the open while a calm but heavily-guarded Mexican capital awaited the opening of the Summer Games Saturday.

Berge Phillips, Australian president of the International Swimming Federation, called that kind of girl-watching shocking and degrading and said his worldwide body wants no part of it.

Prince Alexandre de Merode of Belgium, president of the International Olympic Committee's medical commission, said every federation except swimming has agreed to voluntary tests, with 540 of 962 women here already passing them.

Canada's hopes for a swimming gold medal or two are pinned on such stars as Elaine Tanner of Winnipeg and Vancouver and Angela Coughlan of Burlington, Ont.

The IOC also was locked in a bitter battle over whether to re-elect Chicago millionaire Avery Brundage to a fifth four-year term as its president. The vote comes up today and the Russians are leading a Communist-bloc movement to dump him.

The odds, however, favored the re-election of Brundage, now 81. He has held the Olympic reins since 1952, and ruffled many feathers along the way.

While the IOC argued, Mexican organizers were putting the finishing touches on their showpiece production, built at a cost of $150,000,000.

Student riots against the government that took upwards of 50 lives last week gave the Games a lot of bad publicity and left Mexican officials bitter.

Thousands of striking students at the University of Mexico and the National Polytechnic Institute, who demand government reforms, are pondering their next moves. Some rebel student leaders have banned further mass demonstrations like the one a week ago that ended in bloody strife when the army crushed it.

Whether there will be new mass rallies during the two-week-long Games to take advantage of the Olympic world spotlight remains to be seen.

BOWLER OF WEEK

One of city's most consistent pinspillers, Anne Goodman has captured women's tenpin award for sixth successive year in "Bowler of the Week" competition. Anne extended her streak in first week of sixth annual Times-sponsored contest by topping distaff trundlers with 196-179-196—571 effort in Ladies' Classic League at Mayfair Lanes.

Leeds Returns to Top As Arsenal Held to Tie

LONDON (Reuters) — Leeds United returned to the top of the English League First Division Wednesday night with a 1-0 soccer victory at Sunderland.

Liverpool, who took over the leadership Tuesday night, now are tied with Arsenal at one point behind Leeds.

Arsenal threw away a great chance to head the table Wednesday night when it could only draw 1-1 at Manchester City. John Radford put Arsenal ahead after 44 minutes but Colin Bell snatched the equalizer early in the second half.

Leeds can thank Mick Jones for its victory at Roker Park. Jones, back after an injury, scored the vital goal but it was a lucky effort.

The gates were closed 20 minutes before the kickoff of the Tottenham-Manchester United match. Spurs shook the European champions in the eighth minute when Welsh international Cliff Jones, probably playing in his last game for Tottenham, scored.

COMPLETES COMEBACK

When Alan Gilzean scored another after 22 minutes it looked all over for United, but Pat Crerand reduced the arrears with a great 25-yard shot in the 35th minute and Denis Law completed the fight back with a 54th minute goal for a 2-2 tie.

Biggest win of the night was gained by English Cup holders West Bromwich Albion. They beat Coventry, 6-1. Mark Lazarus celebrated his return off suspension to score Crystal Palace's goal in a 1-0 victory at Norwich in a Second Division game. Norwich now has lost three successive home matches.

In Scotland, Glasgow Celtic and Hibernian qualified for the final of the Scottish League Cup. Celtic, the holders, beat Clyde 1-0 and Hibernian had a 2-1 victory against Dundee.

The new Moffat Gourmet is available in electric and gas models.

How would you like to broil a great big steak without a great big mess?
You can, with a new Moffat Gourmet range.

Moffat invented the Gourmet for people who love to broil and hate to clean.

It has a fantastic new kind of cooking compartment where you broil and rotisserie roast without a mess.

Quick, radiant heat seals in meat juices. Meat shrinks less. Tastes better.

It's more tender. And spatters never get a chance to spatter.

With this new compartment it's easy to keep an eye on things. Because it's right up top at eye level. (You might say we've raised broiling to a new height.)

Down below there's a full-size, regular oven. You use it for your "clean cooking." Cakes. Casseroles. Cookies and pies. And never worry about a messy oven again.

Wherever you cook on this new Moffat range, you're sure to be served more compliments with your meals.

After all, we don't call it a Gourmet for nothing.

Time Running Out On Soggy Harvest

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Frustrated by a cold, wet autumn, many Prairie wheat farmers are running out of time in which to bring in the 1968 crop before the first heavy snowfall.

Some farmers are waiting for a break in the weather but others are threshing wet grain rather than risk having their crop snowed under.

A survey by The Canadian Press shows Alberta the hardest hit.

A mid-September estimate of yield by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics placed the 1968 Prairie wheat crop at 607 million bushels, about 32 million bushels or six per cent more than the 1967 crop.

But it is unlikely that a full harvest will be realized.

A recent Alberta wheat pool estimate says 70 per cent of the province's wheat is still in the field. Saskatchewan and Manitoba have 60 and 70 per cent of their respective crops harvested.

An official of the Saskatchewan wheat pool said of the farmers:

FARMERS ARE NERVOUS

"They've got the jitters and I think they're going to get that crop in by hook or by crook."

Paul Babey, president of the Alberta Farmer's Union, said that in many instances the Alberta harvest has become a "salvage operation."

He said wheat in some parts of Alberta is "dripping wet" and, barring an early break in the weather, harvesting is almost at an end.

The department of agriculture in Manitoba reports that some areas need at least three weeks of ideal weather to complete a proper harvest.

R. L. Kristjanson, Canadian wheat board commissioner, said terminals will probably give priority to damp grain.

The commissioner also said the carryover of grain and the grain handlers' strike have not affected shortage at the Lakehead. Much grain has been shipped out since the end of the strike, leaving space in the interior terminals.

Woman Died From Skull Fracture

A 23-year-old Victoria mother killed in a two-car crash early Sunday died from skull fracture and brain damage a coroner's jury was told Wednesday.

Dr. Garth Walter, a St. Joseph's Hospital pathologist, was testifying at the inquest into the death of Mrs. Dorothy Schofield, 404 Superior.

After the medical evidence and identification of the body the inquest was adjourned until Nov. 14, at 7:30 p.m. in the Law Courts when additional witnesses will be available.

Before the Magistrate

Mary Tucko, 732 Kings was fined $250 after she pleaded guilty to a charge of keeping liquor for sale.

Court was told a police search of her house on Aug. 11 turned up 11 cases of beer, six 26-ounce bottles of rye, vodka and rum, two 13-ounce bottles of rye and sherry, 200 ounces of wine. Two cases of beer were in a car outside the house which police said she admitted owning.

Det. Peter Voth said most of the liquor was hidden in a leanto shed on the west side of the house underneath a stair landing. Eight males were at the premises at the time of the search and an officer who had previously kept the house under investigation had noticed several persons coming and going court was told.

Johnathon O'Neill, 550 Johnson, was sentenced Wednesday to one day in jail and fined $250 on a charge of theft.

Police said he took $80 from the pants of a man visiting his hotel room Sept 24.

Magistrate William Ostler said it appeared the offense was committed under unusual circumstances and while the accused was under the influence of alcohol.

He said O'Neill appeared from the pre-sentence report to be a good worker and it was significant that none of his previous offenses involved dishonesty.

Five persons were fined after they pleaded guilty to violations of boat regulations.

Earl Thompson, 538 Lampson, and Philip Durell, 739 Connaught, were each fined $10 after court was told they failed to have licence numbers displayed on their boats.

William Elliott, 392 Walter, and William Blair, 3160 Mars, were each fined $20 after court heard they failed to carry adequate life jackets in their boats while in use. Frank Page, 2850 Rockwell, was fined $15 on the same charge.

Nanette Newstead, 1684 Burdette, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a one-year $500 good behaviour bond on a charge of theft.

At an earlier hearing court was told she took a sweater from Woodwards without paying for it.

Magistrate Ostler said she had experienced a lot of troubles for a girl of 18.

Israeli Ambassador Dies in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Israel's ambassador to Canada, Arieh Eshel, was found dead in an east-end parking lot Wednesday night and an embassy spokesman said today he "apparently had a heart attack."

Mr. Eshel, 56, had attended a reception at the German embassy earlier in the evening and it is believed he collapsed while going to get his car to drive home.

The ambassador's wife, Tamar Eshel, is a member of Israel's delegation to the United Nations. A spokesman at the Embassy here said she was returning to Ottawa from New York today to make arrangements for the ambassador's funeral.

The spokesman said it was hoped arrangements could be made with the Canadian government to fly Mr. Eshel's body to Jerusalem for burial.

Mr. Eshel was born in Germany and settled in Palestine at an early age. Before his posting as ambassador to Canada in December, 1967, he was assistant director-general of Israel's ministry of foreign affairs.

He has served as ambassador in Brazil and Uruguay, and as consul-general in New York.

The spokesman said Mr. Eshel had suffered two earlier heart attacks and during a trip to Newfoundland some months ago he required treatment for what was described as "cardiac insufficiency."

Decision Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Decision was reserved Wednesday in a slander suit brought by Teamsters' executive Ed Lawson against another labor leader who allegedly called Mr. Lawson a labor faker and a Judas.

A decision by Mr. Justice D. Seaton of British Columbia Supreme Court is expected within a week.

Mr. Lawson, president of the Teamsters' regional council, seeks unstated damages, claiming a speech by Syd Thompson, president of the Vancouver local of the International Woodworkers of America, was character assassination and was motivated by malice.

The speech Sept. 20, 1966, following the reading of a letter which alleged that Mr. Lawson had viewed a film of pickets during a strike at Lenkurt Electric Co. in suburban Burnaby and identified labor leaders taking part.

Jobs at Minimum Report Indicates

TORONTO (CP) A federal government study indicates that more labor-saving machines and an upgrading of the productivity of present personnel is contributing to the slow increase of employment opportunities in Ontario.

The study of the Ontario manpower situation, conducted by the department of manpower and immigration, says that although business expects rising sales and higher profits in the second half of 1968, work forces will remain at their present level.

"In order to remain competitive in the face of rising labor costs, many companies . . . will accelerate the substitution of labor-saving machinery for manpower," the report says.

"SELECTIVE HIRING"

"Additional recruitment will be kept to a minimum, with emphasis on selective hiring of highly qualified, experienced staff and on upgrading the productivity of their present personnel.

"In consequence, employment gains will continue to be moderate."

The report predicts that about 118,000, or four per cent of the labor force, will be unemployed in the second half of 1968. This is less than the 121,000 jobless in the first half, but 28,000 more than the jobless total for the same period last year.

The report says the decline in job opportunities stems in part from continued large wage demands and labor costs rising more rapidly than productivity.

The "red snappers," one of many kinds of colorful fish to be seen at the Vancouver Public Aquarium, are fed paprika to maintain their coloration.

Heart Problem 'Breakthrough'

By STUART AUERBACH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A New York doctor has reported what he termed the first "breakthrough" in 100 years in the treatment of angina pectoris, one of the most common and most painful symptoms of heart disease.

"I think it's a major breakthrough in this area. I've been looking for it for 25 years and never thought I would find it," said Dr. Henry I. Russek of St. Barnabas hospital.

He delivered his paper, "Breakthrough in Angina Pectoris Therapy," here during the tenth international congress of diseases of the chest.

Angina is marked by sharp spasms of excruciating and disabling pains, described as feeling as if death is just around the corner. These pains occur when the arteries fail to supply enough blood to the oxygen-starved heart muscles.

The traditional treatment with amyl nitrate and similar drugs, which relieve the pain by increasing the flow of blood to the heart, was first discovered 100 years ago. Nitroglycerin was one of the original chemicals used to treat angina.

Since then, said Russek, "there has been virtually no progress' in the medical treatment of angina.

In searching for a substitutes for the nitrate family of drugs, Russek picked propranolol, an English-made drug used mainly to treat arrhythmias—abnormal heartbeats.

This drug, he said, reduces the oxygen requirements of the heart by slowing down its beat. But it failed to relieve angina any more than the newer, long-acting nitrates do.

Alone, neither drug appeared to do the job, and each one produced distressing side effects. The nitrates tended to induce tachycardia, an abnormally fast heartbeat that uses up oxygen, while propranolol cause a constriction of the arteries.

Combined, however, the drugs blocked each other's side effects and increased the relief as if "one plus one equals four," Russek reported.

EARLY BIRDS were waiting at 4 p.m. Wednesday in the Queen's Printer offices to pick up the first public copies of the Wootton Royal Commission report but insurance industry wasn't rushing to comment today.

Commission Raps Government For Lack of Safety Programs

By JIM HUME

The Royal Commission on Automobile Insurance sharply criticizes provincial and federal governments for their lack of interest in driver safety programs.

The three man commission headed by Mr. Justice R. A. B. Wootton termed incongruous the lack of funds made available for safety programs while making billions of dollars available for defence.

"From 1954 to 1966, 46,000 were killed on Canadian roads," the commission report states. "This is 4,000 more than all the servicemen Canada lost in the entire World War Two.

"It seems incongruous to the commissioners that billions of dollars of Canadian tax revenue are justifiably spent on defence against possible war and its resultant toll in life and injury, and yet only a comparatively negligible expenditure is made to prevent like casualties on our highways.

LITTLE CO-OPERATION

"It is incomprehensible that so little co-ordination is carried out by provincial or federal governments of such traffic safety programs as are in existence."

The commissioners also issued a sharp rebuke to the provincial departments of motor vehicles and the department of highways.

Noting that in 1966 there were 428 accidents blamed on road defects, 436 accidents attributed to road obstructions and 339 in which the cause "road under repair" was listed, the commissioners expressed grave concern that so many accidents could be caused by road repair programs.

PROBE ACCIDENTS

"The commissioners were even more disturbed when they were advised that there is no direct communication between the department of motor vehicles and the department of highways that would make it possible for a representative of the highways department to investigate immediately the cause of the accident with the view to remedying the fault."

The commissioners called for further study on fatigue as a prime cause of accidents.

"The highest incidence of accidents in British Columbia is between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. when people are returning from work, presumably in a tired and frustrated state," the report says. "The same people going to work in the morning hours have less than half as many accidents. Fatigue and frustration could well be the cause also of the increase in accidents towards the end of each week.

"Whether driver temperament is the real cause also for the increased incidence of accidents at these periods, and, if it is, what preventative measures, if any, may be taken, certainly warrants further study."

As a means of cutting down accidents caused by impaired drivers the commissioners suggest the start of an intensive education warning campaign.

In addition to spot broadcasts and TV exposure the commissioners recommend that all cocktail bars and beer parlors be ordered to post warning notices listing the amount of alcohol that can be consumed before a driver becomes impaired.

It also recommends that labels be placed on all bottles sold via the Liquor Control Board warning "you must not drive within one hour of consuming a certain number of ounces of liquor, or cocktails or glasses of beer."

DRIVER TRAINING

The commissioners also called for changes in the approach to driver training and driver testing.

"If there is to be an effective cutting down of the number of accidents and the casualties resulting from the errors of young drivers, it is imperative that a few lessons from a member of the family or a friend, and the memorizing of a booklet, should not be considered adequate before turning a new driver loose on the streets with a 200 horsepower 'juggernaut.'"

The commissioners wrote the special chapter on highway safety because insurance rates are geared to the highway accident ratio.

B.C. HEADS LIST

And, said the commissioners, while British Columbia's position is close to other provinces when it comes to fatal accidents the West Coast heads the list when it comes to the casualty ratio and is second only to Newfoundland when it comes to property damage.

"British Columbia's high ratio for property damage may well result from the relatively higher repair costs in this province. But is is difficult to justify the considerably higher ratio of accidents, casualties and deaths in comparison with Ontario, which has a comparatively greater traffic density than B.C."

The commissioners said they could not emphasize too strongly to the provincial government and the general public "the gravity of this economic loss in manpower and material, and the urgent need for a co-ordinated effort to reduce this senseless waste."

Spared No Effort In Gathering Facts

The B.C. Royal Commission on Automobile Insurance spared no effort in gathering and sifting information on which to base its report, above and beyond the submissions it received during its public hearings.

Helping the three commissioners, besides the usual general staff of nine persons including commission counsel and executive secretaries, was a full-scale research team headed by two professors with a technical adviser, a firm of actuarial accountants and eight research assistants.

Besides sifting through some 350 exhibits, the testimony of more than 70 witnesses and dozens of submissions through letters and bulky briefs, the commission and its team conducted it own research for more than a year encompassing the products of other inquiries on the subject, scores of textbooks and position papers and innumerable statutes from various countries.

And the commission made direct inquiries to government, university or private agencies in the 10 Canadian provinces and federal government, 31 states and federal government of the U.S., five states and federal government of Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, United Kingdom, France, Denmark, Belgium, West Germany, Irish Republic, Italy, Mexico, The Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland.

DRAMATIC CONTRAST

Young drivers—those under 25—will notice the most dramatic contrast between their present auto insurance premiums and the ones they would pay for the compulsory basic policy proposed by the Wootton Royal Commission.

The commission's report said an analysis of 1967 "area" and "risk" rating practices by the auto insurance would have this premium impact on a 22-year-old driver of a pleasure car who has driven for several years without a claim against his policy.

* * *

In Vancouver, he could pay $184 for the minimum limits on third-party liability to protect himself from a damage claim in event he was involved in an accident causing death or injury. In Victoria it would be only marginally lower.

The same young man could pay $16.76 under the Wootton plan, if his record was equally clean in both accidents and traffic violations, for self-insurance providing $20,000 death benefit or $50-a-week disability allowance for his non-driving dependants as well as himself.

And if he hit anyone else, they also would be covered by the same benefits at least.

If his past driving record had up to 10 demerit points, he would have paid $26.45 for the same coverage.

And if he had a worse record than that, present insurance practice might levy a premium of more than $1,000—but still allow him on the road—the commission noted.

* * *

But under the Wootton plan, he would be ruled off the road with a licence suspension that could not be watered down by discretionary permission from a magistrate to drive to and from work—and part of the process for getting his licence back would be graduation from a remedial driving course and a regular driver test.

The premium contrasts would be heightened in the cases of drivers younger than 22 because the present practise in the industry virtually rests on the principle that below 25, the lower your age the higher your premium—even with a good driving record.

Lack of Price Competition Cited in Insurance Industry

By AB KENT

A virtual absence of effective price and policy competition and unjustified cost factors were cited as major failures of the B.C. auto insurance industry by the royal commission on automobile insurance.

In an exhaustive and painstakingly careful examination of the auto insurance industry, royal commissioners concluded "without doubt, the sizeable sums presently being spent to provide protection do not represent an effective, much less optimum, use of such moneys."

The prevailing system, their report found, both falls short of achieving adequate compensation and discriminates against personal injury cases, in the latter showing greater bias when losses are more serious.

Rate-Making

To reach its conclusion, the commission dealt with rate-making, gathering of statistical information, the methods of financing by the industry, competition, costs to insurance companies, to insured persons and to the public generally.

Some 240 pages of analysis and research were devoted to this particular aspect of the inquiry, in effect the bulk of one volume of the two-volume report.

The commissions' brief conclusions as a result of the detailed study note that "clearly, the greatest burdens are being borne by those more seriously afflicted."

"Such victims are able to shift but a small fraction of their total economic loss," the report said.

High Costs

Besides that, the commission found the present approach entails relatively high overhead cost.

"Motorists are paying roughly $1.60 (via premiums) for each $1 of settlements paid by automobile insurers."

And acknowledging the feasibility of a "no-fault" reparation system, "the commission concludes that the present reparation system is unnecesarily expensive to administer."

The burden of the Traffic Victims Indemnity Fund, and the different methods of dealing with their contractual obligations, to name two additional cost factors, gave the commission further support in its finding of protection at too high a price.

But the most telling criticism of the industry was the conclusion that competition is so watered down by practices that apparently have had support from superintendents of insurance, that it is ineffective.

A consumer looking for insurance coverage at a reasonable price is faced with premium rates that vary little from one another, the result of pricing by rating bureaus.

Commissioners recognized that a large number of firms delegate pricing authority to these bureaus, supported by associations within the industry, and common to many countries.

But while they are understandable in continental Europe where highly organized cartels are well established, "their existence in the United Kingdom, the United States and Canada, where public policy has a well established tradition of hostility to restraints of trade is more remarkable."

Three bureaus are active in B.C.—Canadian Underwriters' Association, Independent Insurance Conference, and Insurance Bureau of Canada—all headquartered in the east.

Equitable Rates

For example, the CUA is set up by letters patent to include in its functions "establishment and maintenance of equitable premium rates commensurate with the hazard," along with setting standard policy wording, collection of data, prevention of rebating and other work that would reduce company expenses and insurance cost to the public.

Although required to register in Ontario as a rating bureau, the IBC professes not to be one, the report notes; rather the IBC claims it was organized in response to concern expressed by the federal superintendent of insurance about underwriting losses of fire and casualty companies.

The federal superintendent in his 1964 report said the bureau, having about 70 per cent of premium volume in Canada, had a major objective of collecting statistical data from members and subjecting it to analysis so that results could be published and serve as a guide for rate-setting.

"The formation of the Insurance Bureau of Canada is a welcome and forward-looking move," he said.

If publications of the IBC were broadly based and adequately analysed, "they should be used as a guide by member companies and others in the determination of premium rates for business in Canada," he said.

"This is not to say that all companies should necessarily charge the same premium rates," he pointed out. "It does suggest, however, that all companies should base their premium rates so far as their loss costs are concerned, on the statistics produced by the bureau unless a company has good reason to expect a pattern of loss costs than are different from the average."

He thought most companies would not have sufficient experience to be able to do this.

The bureau, meanwhile, had been careful to say it was not involved in promulgating of rates and that members had made no prior agreement to accept and act upon its reports.

Effect on Rate

When the IBC in 1964 first proposed in its terms of reference to make recommendations regarding rates and other matters of interest to members, the director of investigation and research for the Combines Investigation Act said there was "serious risk" the bureau "would offend" against the act and in "at least some segments of the insurance market."

The objects were then amended to delete the reference to recommendations.

Commissioners found that publication of IBC's analyses of premium rates had an immediate, observable effect on auto insurance rates starting in 1966.

Prior to that downward deviations were the pattern for IBC minimum rates compared with CUA rates, but in 1966 they were identical. And nearly all independents belonging to IBC also adopted the CUA rates.

IBC analyses were "regarded by at least one company as 'rate-making recommendations'," the commission found, quoting a letter written by Home Insurance Company.

And as a further indication the commission referred to a speech given by the superintendent of insurance for Ontario, then president of the Association of Superintendents of Insurance for the Provinces of Canada, given here in September 1966.

Industry Threatened

This man referred to the Insurance Bureau of Canada's "recommendations to the industry as a whole" in providing "guide lines that will prevent the industry cutting its own throat by excessive competition and thus injuring the insuring public."

He acknowledged the bureau must also watch provisions of the Combines Act.

But whatever the legal implications, the commission report said, "it is clear that the impact of the formation of the IBC had produced identical rate structures over a very wide segment of the automobile insurance industry."

Arguing its case, the IBC said that prior to 1964 there had been reckless competition based on inadequate cost knowledge that threatened solvency of the industry.

According to the B.C. Insurance Act, each company doing business in the province must file with the superintendent of insurance of designated statistical agency a record of automobile premiums and its loss and expense costs in the province.

A joint committee of superintendents (though their association) and industry representatives prescribes the form, and it is known as the superintendent's statistical committee. But the superintendent for Ontario, who with the Quebec superintendent of insurance have been the sole government representatives on the committee at least since 1959, regards the group as an advisory committee of industry.

'Green Book'

This was made clear in a letter from the Ontario superintendent to the commission, in which he said the statistical agency acts independently of the CUA in compiling auto insurance experience in the "green book," which is filed with each provincial superintendent.

The commission found that despite the 1957 Nova Scotia royal commission report on auto insurance, views of the Combines Act investigator and federal insurance superintendent, and enabling statutory provisions in B.C., there is no expense data gathered by the statistical committee.

No 'Buddy-Buddy' Ties Seen in Proposed Plan

By JOHN MIKA

The auto insurance industry is neither a natural monopoly nor rife with wickedness so there is no imperative need for the government to go into the business itself.

That's the conclusion of the Wootton Royal Commission's survey of the pros and cons surrounding the argument over private versus public insurance agencies.

But the commission also made it clear that it would not hesitate to recommend government entering the business if the private industry should try to frustrate a decision to accept the proposed "no-fault" system of compulsory driver insurance.

* * *

It pointed out that government supervision—through the proposed British Columbia Automobile Insurance Board—would enable private enterprise to provide the desired minimum coverage while retaining the benefits of lower prices or better service generated by competition.

On the other hand, it said a government insurance agency would likely be more rigid and limited in innovations so that some of the benefits of greatly reduced premiums would be lost.

The proposed system would still provide the consumers with substantial savings over present costs for better coverage so at least initially the private firms which have pioneered insurance in the province should be allowed to operate under the new setup.

The report added that neither "guilt or improper conduct" had been uncovered by the investigation and the government had never found it necessary to give official warning of dis-satisfaction to the industry.

"Before a takeover or entry into competition by government, in the opinion of the commissioners, the industry is entitled to some gesture of dissatisfaction by way of warning or notice," the commission said.

"However, if the industry shows a disinclination to participate in the offering to the public of the new types of contracts recommended by the commission, and the conditions it has proposed or other conditions satisfactory to the government, or at a later date shows disinclination to compete, then the government of British Columbia should take over the sole selling . . . of all automobile insurance."

The report stressed that the government board should keep "careful and continuous scrutiny" of the industry's operations to ensure the public's needs are served.

And it also made clear, in another context, that there should be no buddy-buddy relationship between the industry and its government regulators.

During a critique of the All-Canada Insurance Federation brief's claim that government and the industry are working as congenial partners in meeting the people's auto insurance needs, the commission made this sharp retort:

* * *

"The commissioners deplore the suggestion that the government of British Columbia and the insurance industry could have a relationship resembling partnership.

"The duties of government are the protection of the people, amongst other things, and the business of requiring the industry to give satisfactory and honest service could only be embarrassed by a partnership between government and the industry.

"However, the commission cannot say it found evidence of partnership and deplores that such a suggestion was made."

Here's Like It Is . . . in the Book

The Royal Commission on Automobile Insurance took almost a quarter of a million words to make its report.

As expected from royal commissions investigating complex and technical subjects, the literary style is convoluted, couched in specialist jargon and shorthand expressions that add to the problems of non-specialists attempting to follow the threads of argument.

But sprinkled among the pages of the two volumes there are some relatively brief passages which illuminate the philosophical flavor of the report.

The nub of the new proposal lies in two little-understood concepts — driver insurance and no-fault compensation — and the following selected excerpts outline the commission's reasoning in its own words as it arrived at recommending both.

P. 9—The commissioners have concluded that a great problem of the state is the conduct of motor vehicle drivers which reflects itself in insurance rates and expenses.

If the disease to be cured is to be identified, then it is to be identified as the conduct of drivers of motor vehicles.

The cure, therefore, must be the elimination of bad conduct by drivers and the improvement of their skill and responsibility while in charge of motor vehicles.

P. 735—The present approach to compensating persons injured in motor vehicle accidents was found to be no deterrent whatever to the negligent or erratic conduct of a motorist.

P. 578—The commissioners are convinced that elimination of bad drivers from the road should not be the function of insurance companies.

P. 12—It is quite obvious to anyone that a motor vehicle is itself of little danger to the community. When it is not in motion . . . the vehicle is of little or no potential danger but as soon as the driver has started the movement of the vehicle, whether with engine running or not, immediately there is a potential danger.

P. 587—None of the spokesmen for the industry who oppose changing the form of insurance from coverage on the vehicle to one on each driver has voiced the following as one of his arguments.

Nevertheless, it is the opinion of the commissioners that perhaps the principal stumbling-block to making the change, which has been discussed within the industry for many years as being advantageous, is the one of finding a jurisdiction in which such a desire for change existed to the extent that companies felt warranted in changing, for the one area, the several insurance forms and the underwriting practices that the industry has succeeded in making uniform between themselves and the various international markets to which the companies cater.

P. 735—The punishment of those guilty of misconduct, of whatever form, causing or contributing to accidents and inevitable losses must be left to the appropriate courts or other designated authority.

This consequence must not be borne by the facility of insurance. The withholding of compensation may only, as it so often does, inflict suffering upon innocent persons — the spouse, child or guest of the insured.

P. 63—The system of fault lends itself to delays. After an accident, where fault must be established before a claim may be settled, there is inevitably the question of who was at fault.

The determination of that very important question may often take a very great deal of time. This will always be so unless the facts of the accident are such as to enable a speedy conclusion to be made of the issue of fault.

P. 88—Where the victim of a motor vehicle accident experiences delay in receiving compensation, the delay causes him to suffer an economic loss.

Originally, with few motor vehicles, the business of claims for damages were reasonably encompassed by the tort (fault) law. It was a choice of fault or no-fault then.

The former prevailed, only to embarrass the situation when traffic conditions caused by the proliferation of the motor vehicle outdistance the effectiveness of tort law with the duty imposed by it of determining in all cases the question of fault.

P. 525—Hence, progressively the (insurance) industry is proposing, from time to time, changes which expand the doctrine of no-fault.

In the view of the commissioners, this signifies growing acceptance of the fact that it is becoming recognized that there is more accident than definable cause in the conflict between cars upon the highway.

Further, with the proliferation of the motor vehicle upon the highway, when it is in motion either upon or off the highway, the danger of accident is immediate.

Indeed, it is not going too far to say that this is true in congested traffic whether or not due care and attention is paid by drivers.

P. 499—The principal merit of the fault system would appear to be the theory that negligence is well known . . . and is understood in a general sense by the public at large.

P. 501—It (Fault-finding through civil court) is, of course, the system which has grown up in the law over a period of many years and unless there is greater merit in a no-fault approach, change should not be recommended.

P. 116 — It is very clear to this commission that the present system of reparation, a patchwork combining accident insurance and liability coverage, has failed to prove British Columbia with optimal protection per dollar of premiums paid.

Put succinctly, the present approach is marred by a combination of excessive operating expenses, discriminatory allocation of moneys available for reparation and delays which impede rehabilitation.

Mix of these failings stem from determined, if incomprehensible, attempts to preserve the tort reparation system in the area of automobile injuries on grounds that, besides distributing money, it serves as a negligence deterrent and that it punishes the guilty.

P. 538 — The fact that under a fault law there may be found some reasonably clear decisions upon who is liable for the injuries does not appear to the commissioners to be sufficient to warrant the continuance of the fault rule in the face of a scheme whereby many more persons may recover substantial amounts by reason of a comprehensive scheme of insurance coverage upon a no-fault basis.

P. 563 The conclusion of the commissioners, in the light of all the evidence and after the submissions made, is that the fault system cannot adequately protect the general public insofar as the automobile accident is concerned.

They are firmly convinced that by a system of no-fault cover, aided by other factors, the motorist and the general public will be better served.

. . . PRICE COMPETITION

Commission counsel examining B.C. superintendent of insurance Thomas Cantell shed "a revealing picture of the role of provincial superintendents generally" regarding the committee.

"It was brought out that the provincial superintendent has no means of checking the green book's contents and that the government in no way contributes to the cost of its publication.

Further, when the committee approves of the green book's classifications, Mr. Cantell agreed, it is approving for all superintendents without them having actual knowledge of any change.

Mr. Canetell told counsel for the commission during the hearings that he would be guided by the committee's recommendations concerning the filing of expense costs, even though he had no knowledge that the statistical committee had ever considered the question.

The green book reflects automobile loss experience across nine provinces (saskatchewan reporting alone) and by means of applying differentials, probabilities, multipliers and other factors to the information, premium rates are ascertained. Substantial elements of underwriting judgment also are used, the report found.

On the broad subject of competition the commission reported that consumer satisfaction is an important consideration to profit-motivated private enterprise.

Exploit Freedom

But left to its own devices, business may exploit its freedom at great cost to consumers and the public.

Controls are occasionally necessary to facilitate operation of competitive markets and protect against abuse, the commission said.

But controls should be looked on as adjuncts to and not substitutes for discipline of competition, it said.

And where competition is thwarted and monopoly inevitable while regulation is ineffective, "the alternative of public enterprise should be considered as preferable."

The commission observed the only price war of note in the Canadian auto insurance industry occurred in the 1930s and is unlikely to be repeated due to increased knowledge.

Conditions today are such that there is no reason to expect competition to lead inevitably to price wars, nor that it should lead to insolvency of companies.

Not Restricted

Even so, price competition should not be restricted, it was felt.

The commission did not see a valid reason for abandoning competition as a norm against which to judge performance of the auto insurance industry.

Workable competition would require independent action by companies to increase their own profits, but even with partial cartelling, there could be effective competition if non-collaborating firms are sufficiently large, aggressive and numerous, the report said.

There would also have to be freedom from actions designed to exclude competition, such as exclusive deals and predatory pricing, and evidence in the market of active price competition. Price leadership, where one firm follows another, is evidence of the absence of this factor.

Product differentiation is a fourth requirement, giving relative market position flexibility.

Dealing with the cost of providing insurance by the industry, the commission found that significant economies of scale do not exist in operating expenses.

It found that in the period 1953-65 the rating formula in use provided excessive allowance for expenses and was therefore inappropriate.

Expenses Vary

Looking ahead, the commission viewed with disfavor any illustrative or otherwise — which assumes implicitly that all expense items are a constant percentage of total premium. Logically, premium should be calculated as though expenses are more nearly equal, reducing unequal loading.

"Certain expenses vary directly with premium volume; others do not," the report said. It would be desirable if a new approach to protection could be developed to release a greater share of the premium dollar for payment of claims, the report suggested.

The greatest non-monetary cost, to insurers, the report said, is the antagonism directed at auto insurance companies by third party claimants. Dissatisfaction of claimants having to deal with another person's insurer came to light with the commission's investigations.

"The extent of aversion to another party's insurer was surprising . . . and adversely affects the public image of automobile insurance companies." Whether understandable or not, as the third party claimant is an "adversary," "such hostility represents a real cost to insurers."

Area and age differentials also are imposed on premium prices as a result of experiences and the commission found that discrimination may occur.

But all undesirable instances of price discrimination may be eliminated in several ways, "notably through the prodding of meaningful competition."

The report found weaknesses in the vehicle classification structure, which it called arbitrary and blamed design changes for certain accident frequency and severity, disproportionate repair costs and across-the-board premium increases.

The commission was critical of discriminatory aspects of merit rating, of inequities in the use of nine rating territories of the province, over-use of the assigned risk plan, of severe rating of newly licensed drivers, and of insurers' failure to take proper account of driving convictions.

There was lengthy discussion of repair costs, which in 1966 in B.C. totalled 35-40 per cent of the $74 million in premiums written, a conservative estimate.

Insurers have been conscientious in controlling hours of labor, the commission found, leaving insured persons well represented.

When autos are no longer categorized by original list price, but rather on costs of repairing various models, manufacturers and importers will give greater attention to cost of parts, the report said.

Charge-Out

The insurance industry was knocked for not examining more carefully the charge-out rates of repair shops.

It was unfortunate that such costs are simply passed on to consumers in the form of higher premiums.

Evidence showed a markup of at least 100 per cent on the hourly rates paid to repairmen in order to arrive at the shop's charge-out rate in Vancouver, using union wage scale without fringe benefits.

The commission had insufficient evidence to decide whether the chargeout rates were excessive or inadequate, but "what is vexatious is that the insurance industry, despite available evidence from abroad of insurer initiative and success in reversing the unfavorable trend in automobile repair costs has apparently, in British Columbia at least, taken no steps to accomplish this," the report said.

A Swedish example of improving efficiency-to-cost relationship was cited.

Speaking of company costs in another place, the commissioners reported that average company expenses, not counting direct-writing firms, are significantly lower than allowed by the current 67-33 loss-expense ratio.

"Thus, many companies which are at present not deviating (in pricing) possess the potential to do so."

No Competition

This further supported the view that effective competition is absent.

It also was found that rate regulation under protection of an umbrella of industry-wide rates could be expected to continue until entry of a new competitiive force with aggressive conduct.

Substantial productivity increases were held to be indication of competition, but the insurance industry's low rate of productivity increase "is an indication of a state of competition too comfortable to be effective," the report said.

Creation of the Insurance Bureau of Canada, to which the other two major associations belong, was cited as a turning point in rate-fixing.

In the short run the IBC "effectively eliminated price competition over a larger segment of the industry than was the case with any other price-fixing arrangement of the past decade."

And because of that the commission found the position of the federal superintendent of insurance in respect to the bureau's formation and policing of rates "an enigma."

Both faulty judgement and inadequacies in rate-making technique were blamed for erratic pricing in B.C.

While there was need for certain rate increases in B.C., "rate variations actually imposed lacked justification," the commission said.

Investment Income Use Criticized

The use of investment income of insurance companies to subsidize premiums set at too low a figure for the type of risk involved was criticized by the royal commission on auto insurance.

It was felt by commissioners that since investment income is a major source of revenue of the insurance companies, this income should be formally recognized in the rate-making process.

Otherwise, it was a "hit-or-miss method of employing investment earnings," the report said.

Investment returns expressed as a percentage of shareholder equity in stock insurance companies was calculated at 34 per cent, before taxes.

Breweries and food retailers, by comparison, show a return of 17.1 and 16.4 per cent respectively, while building construction is as low as 6 per cent.

After-tax return for the insurance companies was estimated at 17 to 21 per cent, compared with a 15.6 per cent appropriate return for U.S. insurance firms.

On its underwriting, the Canadian insurance industry had showed 10.2 per cent profit, which the commission found excessive. Even 2.5 per cent was considered unjustified.

Peter Bunn Edged Out

VANCOUVER — Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn missed by a narrow margin Wednesday winning a senior post with the B.C. school trustee's association.

He finished third among five candidates for the two directors' seats voted on this morning at the annual meeting.

James Campbell of Saturna Island was elected association president by acclamation Tuesday.

Peter Powell of North Vancouver was elected vice-president. Jim Lamont of Castlegar and Jack Smedley of the Delta school board were elected directors.

OTTAWA (CP) — A young mother and her two small children suffocated to death today when fire destroyed a rundown house owned by the city of Ottawa. Lucienne Lalande, 21, and her children, Rachel, four, and Robert three, were found dead by police in second-floor bedrooms.

LIABILITY VOLUNTARY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Ontario all have financial-responsibility laws providing protection for motorists involved in accidents with uninsured drivers, but none has compulsory liability insurance.

Henry Muggah, Nova Scotia's deputy provincial secretary and provincial superintendent of insurance, said the last study on automobile insurance in that province was carried out in 1965 by the public utilities board.

"The board really didn't go into the question of public, government or compulsory insurance," he said.

SOUND PRACTICES

"In general, their conclusion was that the methods used by provincial insurance companies in their rating practices were sound and rates not excessive."

In 1963, a select committee of the Ontario legislature looked into all aspects of automobile insurance in the province, the first extensive study of its kind since 1930.

The committee accepted an insurance industry proposal that coverage on death benefits, dismemberment and loss of sight, medical payments, funeral expenses and weekly payments to the totally disabled be a mandatory part of every insurance policy.

It also recommended that these benefits be available to those making claims against the government's motor vehicle accident claims fund.

Without specifying a new figure, the committee recommended that an increase be made in the $20 provincial fee charged the uninsured motorist and placed in the accident claims fund.

NOT IMPLEMENTED

The latter recommendation was not implemented.

The province itself is not in the insurance business.

The lowest coverage policy that can be sold to an Ontario motorist is $35,000. This costs $70 for a 26-year-old single male driver who never had an accident. If he is married, the basic cost is $48.

In Nova Scotia, Muggah said that although there is no compulsory liability insurance, the financial responsibility law provides protection.

Under this law, any driver without insurance proved to be at fault in an accident has his licence suspended immediately. Damages to the injured party are paid with the first $200 deductible, from a judgment recovery fund maintained by the provincial insurance underwriters.

In Prince Edward Island the situation is similar, with no actual compulsory liability insurance, but with a financial responsibility law.

Minimum liability insurance required before a driver can have his licence reinstated is $35,000.

Lorne Monkley, P.E.I. deputy provincial secretary said the minimal premium for such insurance to a 26-year-old male with an accident-free record is $32, the same as in Nova Scotia.

Two Owners Balking At Selling

Ald. Percy Frampton said Wednesday he was hopeful that construction of a new swimming pool to replace the Crystal Garden would commence in 1969.

"Things are moving along much faster now and quite smoothly," he said. "We have acquired much of the land required and have options on the balance. In fact we only lack two parcels to complete the picture. Unfortunately we don't seem to be able to arrive at agreement with the owners."

Ald. Frampton declined to reveal the exact site of the new pool but during early discussions on the project the general vicinity of Central Park and Royal Athletic Park was named as the ideal site to tie-in with other recreational facilities.

As a prelude to pool design city council and the recreation committee will meet Oct. 18 to view film showing the latest in wave making machinery.

'FINEST IN CANADA'

Mayor Hugh Stephen has advocated the new-look in swimming pools to make the Crystal's replacement the finest in Canada.

The Crystal, listed as obsolete a year ago, is scheduled to disappear as a city landmark in late 1969 or early 1970.

No cost figure has yet been arrived at for the new pool which will be financed through the next five year capital budget due for presentation next year.

In the near future Ald. Frampton and recreation and community services director Jack Morgan will attend a national recreation and parks conference in Seattle.

"We are going over specifically to pick other people's brains on swimming pool design and construction," Ald. Frampton said. "After we get back we should have some specific ideas to offer."

Landlord to Evict 22 Tenants

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tenants of a city apartment block who collectively refused to pay increased rents have collectively been given their eviction notices.

Mrs. Eva Virtue, owner of Rosemont Apartments, said eviction notices have been sent to 22 tenants of the 30-suite block who refused to pay rent increases ranging from $2 to $12 monthly. The tenants were ordered to vacate by Nov. 1.

Speaking for the Tenants' Association, Peter Halford predicted "there is going to be some real action around here."

The battle started last month when Mrs. Virtue asked for $25 deposits against damage to suites and announced the rent increases.

"My rents aren't unreasonable," she said in an interview. "They are lower than any other apartment in the area."

She denied Mr. Halford's claim that tenants had attempted to negotiate the rent increases with her. She said most tenants had previously paid deposits of varying amounts and she only wanted to standardize them.

Beauty of Berried Shrubs

By HILDA BEASTAL

Berried shrubs are as much a feature of our coastal gardens as colored foliage. A great number of these plants will grow and berry only in these milder climates and therefore are not well known elsewhere in Canada.

Hilda

At least one writer in England has produced an entire book on this subject, called whimsically Berried Treasure. This is well worth reading by local gardeners for most of the material mentioned can be grown and berried even more successfully here than in the cooler, wetter summers of Britain. I believe the book is still on the public library shelves.

Two or three genera contribute most of the shrubs which bear berries profusely.

One is the genus cotoneaster. Two dozen varieties and probably hundreds of hybrids (for these hybridize freely) give a wide selection of gracefully arching branches, or low spreading kinds, as well as stiffly upright forms suitable for hedges.

Some lose their leaves by late fall, others retain them thus adding further interest to winter gardens.

Variation also occurs in size and color of leaves, and in the arrangement of the berry clusters, which are various shades of red and as large as holly berries.

Of quite different character are the berries of berberis. While the shrubs themselves are brilliant in their fall foliage which remains into winter, the berries are much smaller and colors may be scarlet, black, purple or shades of blue.

In our experience, they are also less freely produced.

Frequently seen as trained wall shrubs is a third genus, pyracantha or firethorn.

The leaves are small dark green, retained in winter to form a perfect background for heavy clusters of bright scarlet, yellow, or orange berries.

All berries are food for birds in winter, and if we wish their co-operation in control of garden pests, we must not grudge the food to provide them with the vigor to go through the winter months.

We must learn to share what we have with other living things.

Now He Drives 74 Vintage Cars

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP)—Jim Leake grew up on a central Oklahoma farm and dreamed of the day he could own and drive a fancy car — perhaps a 1924 Buick like a neighbor owned.

Today Leake owns not only a 1924 Buick—"a real smooth running one"—but also 74 other vintage cars—including 23 Rolls-Royces, believed to be the most in private hands. Many of the cars are significant historically.

There's his personal favorite, a 1911 Rolls-Royce Silver Wraith ceremonial phaeton built for the Maharaja of Mysore in India. Another is his Humber Pullman limousine used by Winston Churchill until his death.

Others include a 1934 Packard formal sedan and a 1900 De Dion Bouton that had the first high-speed engine with the De Dion rear-end assembly that still is the format of types used in racing cars today.

"I drive them all whenever I can, to keep them loose," says Leake, now president of three television stations and other business interests. "I love to tinker with these cars and I just wish I had more time."

The favorite of Leake's wife is a 1923 Ford speedster which the couple's daughter, Nancy, also likes to drive. Their son, John Griffin Leake, and another daughter, Jean, also drive the antique cars around Muskogee frequently.

There's a 1935 Duesenberg delivered to Dan Topping, the former owner of baseball's New York Yankees.

Leake owns a 1901 Oldsmobile, one of only 300 or 400 made.

"That's the car that inspired the song, My Merry Oldsmobile," he said.

There is a one-cylinder 1904 Rea that he keeps in England for the annual London-to-Brighton run for cars of 1905 and older.

There are three Bentleys in the collection and a prize 1920 Minerva from Belgium.

He also has four Packards, a 1925 Locomobile, a 1919 Pierce Arrow, 1917 Dodge, 1918 Reo, 1925 Marmon speedster, 1922 Hupmobile, 1902 two-cylinder Maxwell, 1912 Argo Electric touring car, 1935 Alvis touring, 1936 Cord phaeton, 1924 Hudson sedan and a total of five Fords—all collected with a bit of history in mind.

But parked in the middle of the fleet of big cars—and ready to be taken out for a spin—is a 1929 Austin Roadster.

"It's the first car I ever owned," he said. "I bought it for $85 while I was in college."

Champlain's Firearms Didn't Beat Iroquois

By BOB BOWMAN

Like most of the early explorers, Champlain's ambition was to find a waterway to the "western sea" which would provide a short route from Europe to the Orient.

The best way to explore was to get the Hurons and Algonquins to guide him and, in return, Champlain helped them in their wars against the Iroquois. It was an unfortunate alternative and was one of the factors that led to France losing Canada to Britain because the Iroquois were much better fighters than Champlain's allies.

The first expedition in 1608 was a great success. The Iroquois had never faced gunfire before, so Champlain helped his Indian friends win a battle at what became Lake Champlain.

However, in 1615 the Hurons wanted a repeat performance and Champlain accompanied them to Onondaga country near present-day Syracuse, N.Y. This time the Hurons were over-confident and would not take any advice from Champlain.

On Oct. 10, they attempted a frontal attack on the Iroquois stronghold and suffered heavy casualties. Many of the Iroquois were killed by Champlain's guns, but they held their position until the Hurons gave up the attack.

GODS FROZEN

Champlain was wounded by an arrow in a leg and had to be carried back to the canoes on the shore of Lake Ontario. Then his friends, greatly disappointed by the defeat, refused to take him back to Quebec as originally promised. He has to spend the winter with them at Cahaigue near Orillia, Ont.

This was an unpleasant, but interesting experience for Champlain. He learned many things about the Indians that he would not have known.

The Indians were afraid to talk much in the summer because they believed that the gods perched on their shoulders and overheard everything they said. In the winter, however, the gods were frozen in the ice, so the Indians talked freely.

Other events Oct. 10:

1710—First Anglican service in Canada was held at Halifax, N.S.

1792—Alexander Mackenzie, first man to cross the continent, left Lake Athabaska to prepare base for trip to the Pacific.

1806—William Weeks, member of Upper Canada legislature for York, was killed in a duel.

1849—Manifesto urging annexation to U.S.A. was published in Montreal.

1878—Conservatives under Sir John A. Macdonald returned to power after defeating Liberals led by Alexander Mackenzie.

1911—Conservatives under Sir Robert Borden formed government after defeating Liberals under Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Population Levelling Off Anticipated

OTTAWA (CP) — A scientist who has studied the rise and fall of insect populations predicts the human population explosion will level off—but the process may not be pleasant.

Dr. D. G. Harcourt of the federal agriculture department's entomology research institute believes that the key factors which come into play when insect populations increase too rapidly are emerging to control the explosive growth of the human population.

Studies during the last decade have led to improved predictability of insect population explosions, Dr. Harcourt said.

"They have also provided an interesting basis for understanding the regulation of human populations, since the type of mortality factors acting at the time of an insect population increase can in many cases be recognized in man, a species much later to evolve."

FACTORS IN PLAY

Among insects, enemy species, migration, disease, weather, food supply, social behavior, stress and fertility potential are all factors that come into play to slow population growth.

Starvation and war are factors already at work among humans, and the effects of both could be drastically increased through explosive political situations arising from bans on population movements from over-crowded to relatively affluent countries.

In humans, family size is linked to the standard of living.

"The more people earn and learn, the less they are dependent upon children for fulfilment of their socio-economic needs," Dr. Harcourt said.

The demand for more education also delays the time at which a person in the developed countries starts raising a family. An increase of five years in the education period in India would reduce the birth rate by 20 per cent, Dr. Harcourt predicted.

VICIOUS CIRCLE

Some developing countries, however, are caught in a vicious circle as the new affluence from their growing industrialization is used up coping with the expanded population.

The stress of urban living contributes to population control in two ways—increased deaths from heart disease and reduced fertility. Dr. Harcourt said the severe stress of war has been known to reduce the female-fertility period by as much as 10 years.

"It is apparent that man's present rate of population growth cannot be sustained. Just as insects have, in the course of evolution, come into equilibrium with their environment, man must reach similar reconciliation with his resources."

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Vincent Wajtyna, age 12, of Butler, Pennsylvania, for his question:

What is the difference between iron and steel?

Iron and steel have many different properties, and it may surprise you to learn that these differences are only a matter of refinement. Durable, crack resistant steel is actually a purer form of brittle iron.

The making of steel begins with the making of iron, and the basic ingredient is iron ores found in the ground. As you know, the element iron tends to oxidize in the air and crumble away in rusty red flakes of iron oxide. It is one of the earth's plentiful elements but nature never leaves chunks of it lying around. We find it mixed with other elements in mineral compounds. Deposits of hematite and magnetite, limonite and several other mineral compounds are rich enough in iron to be worthwhile ores.

The next step is to separate the metallic iron from the other elements in the ore. This requires tremendous heat but if limestone is added to the mixture, the mixture will separate at lower temperatures. A furious blast furnace, maybe 90 feet tall, is heated by four seething stoves. Perhaps 20 carloads of iron ore, 10 of limestone and 10 of coke are fed into the seething giant. The coolest level at the top of the furnace reaches 400 degrees Fahrenheit while the bottom level reaches at least 3,000 degrees.

The heat triggers chemical changes in the ingredients. Some of the unwanted impurities are driven off as gases, while others float to the top of the molten brew. Because it is heaviest, the iron sinks to the bottom. The molten metal is drained off into troughs at the bottom of the blast furnace. When cool, the iron becomes a rough and tough metal, strong and unbending and rather prone to crack under stress. Its brittle quality is caused by 4 per cent to 5 per cent of carbon and other impurities that the furious furnace failed to remove. When these unwanted materials are reduced, we get a finer grained metal with the strength of iron plus a pliable quality that yields under stress. It is steel, more malleable, stronger than iron, less brittle and more likely to yield than crack.

Prevents Rust

Steel is made by removing most of the carbon and other unwanted ingredients from ordinary iron. This mammoth job is done by loading iron and scraps of steel into a super furnace and heating the mixture once again to furious temperatures. This produces ordinary carbon steel, so called because its carbon content is reduced to about 1 per cent. This metal is fine for a multitude of everyday duties. But steelmen want steels with extra qualities for a variety of special duties. These super metals of the machine age are alloys of steel mixed with other metals.

Stainless steel alloys made to resist rust and corrosion contain chromium and perhaps other metals. Traces of chromium also add extra hardness to steel alloys. Nickel added to the recipe provides extra toughness and makes the alloy more resistant to heat and acids. A trace of vanadium metal makes a more springy alloy. Manganese adds strength and durability and molybdenum adds strength and resistance to heat.

* * *

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Mara L. Crowell, age 10, of Sherrill, New York, for her question:

What is a sundog?

No, it is not a beagle or any kind of hound. A sundog is a very rare spectacle in the sky and as a rule, it appears as one of a pair. The two sundogs look like two small suns, one on each side of the big sun in the middle. Actually, only the big sun is real. The small twins are merely reflections of its dazzling image. The massive, starry sun is, as always, almost 93 million miles away from us. The sundogs are bright little pictures in the atmosphere just a few miles above our heads. Maybe ordinary folk called them sundogs because they appear like a pair of poodles beside their mother.

The reflections that cause the rare sundogs to show their faces are caused by hazes of miniature ice crystals high in the atmosphere. These icy fragments act like specks of shiny glass and play sparkling tricks with the sunbeams on their way down to the earth. Zillions of tiny reflections of the sun are angled together to form each sundog image of the real sun. If you ever get a chance to see the sundogs, remember not to let your naked eyes look directly at them. View them through very dark glasses or a screen of smoked glass because the direct rays of the sun are dazzling enough to blind human eyes.

Condominium Housing Sure To Catch on, Realtors Told

By GERALD CLARKSON

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT. (CP) Condominium housing will overtake any previously-known form of building develoment in Canada, Toronto lawyer John A. Geisler told the annual conference of the Canadian Association of Real Estate Boards Wednesday.

He said condominiums, buildings in which each occupant is the freehold owner of his own apartment, may soon be extended to offices and shopping centres.

In this way, a man could own his own home above an office which belongs to his company or his partners, he said.

Mr. Geisler said present condominium legislation in Canada is derived from Australia and the United States.

British Columbia and Alberta passed legislation in 1966 on the Australian model, while Ontario followed last year with a different act which is closer to some American states.

So far there have been 150 condominium units built in British Columbia, more than 50 in Alberta and about 100 in Ontario.

Paul H. Rittle of Pittsburgh, a vice-president of the U.S. Institute of Real Estate Management, said of condominiums: "No type of real estate development has more need of professional management."

He said that although all the occupants of a block can enjoy home ownership, the scheme has some disadvantages.

These were the continual payments for keeping up the building, which the occupants had to share with each other, and the fact that property taxes were often assessed at a higher rate than if the block were treated as a single unit.

He also said the legal status of this novel form of private property still needs testing.

In other business, Vancouver and New Westminster, B.C., delegates made a seven-man minority protest against the adoption of the association's new bylaws.

WANTS STUDY FIRST

Alfred Buttress, last year's president of the Greater Vancouver Real Estate Board, said the group wants the bylaws delayed until a $50,000 university study on CAREB's future has been released.

The study, commissioned two years ago from Dean Philip White of the faculty of commerce, University of British Columbia, will be available in a month.

A CAREB spokesman said the old bylaws had to be revised because of the changes occurring in the real estate business since CAREB was founded in 1943.

In particular, the non-sales personnel and specialists in property management, mortgages, appraisal work and industrial real estate had to be recognized.

The other British Columbia delegates who voted against the bylaws were Hugh Clee, John Woodward, Frederick Ruffell, Bert Edwards, A. Jeffs and M. Johnson.

Gallup Tops Poll

PARIS (Reuters) — George H. Gallup, inventor of the Gallup public opinion poll, was awarded the 1968 Christopher Columbus International Communications Prize, it was announced Wednesday. The French Institute of Public Opinion said that Gallup's use of statistical measurement of public opinion introduced an entirely new method into journalism and the dissemination of information.

JOHNSON TAKES STEPS TO SELL ISRAEL JETS

TEL AVIV (Reuters)—Premier Levi Eshkol today welcomed as "a step in the right direction to deter aggression" the announcement by President Johnson Wednesday authorizing negotiations for the sale by the United States of supersonic fighter aircraft to Israel.

"I hope the negotiations for the sale of the Phantoms will be speedy and that Israel will soon receive the aircraft she needs for her defence," Eshkol said.

In a statement published in the evening newspaper Maariv, Eshkol said the indiscriminate flow of Soviet arms to the Middle East has increased the aggressiveness of the Arab countries.

Bombing Defence Of Saigon Costly

SAIGON (AP) — United States Air Force B-52 bombers blasted Viet Cong base camps threatening Saigon with heavy raids Wednesday and today, boosting to more than 700 the number of missions flown in the last four months in defence of the capital.

The B-52 campaign to blunt an attack on Saigon has become one of the biggest and most expensive of the war—perhaps costing $250 million since June 1.

The eight-jet stratofortresses have dropped more than 125,000 tons of explosives in 705 missions against base camps, infiltration corridors and other targets in the outlying provinces of Saigon. Each mission averages about six bombers each carrying 20 tons of bombs at an average cost of $2,000 a ton.

In the latest strikes the B-52s mounted seven missions against troop concentrations, long-time base camps, bunkers and infiltration routes along the approaches northwest and northeast of Saigon.

The closest raids to Saigon were 24 to 31 miles northwest of the capital.

But U.S. sources said there were no indications that any of the three Viet Cong divisions based north and northwest of Saigon were moving on the capital.

Elsewhere, South Vietnamese infantrymen killed 44 Viet Cong troops late Wednesday in heavy fighting in the Mekong Delta 54 miles southwest of Saigon.

U.S. Army helicopter gunships supporting the South Vietnamese accidentally fired into the government troops, killing four and wounding six. No South Vietnamese casualties were reported from the fighting itself. An investigation is under way.

One of the popular displays at the Vancouver Public Aquarium, is the alligator and gets its name from the Spanish "El Lagarto" which means "The Lizard."

Grandmother Ends Fast With Visit to PM's Office

By SUSAN BECKER

CULHANE
. . . cup of soup

OTTAWA (CP) — A cheerful, grey-haired grandmother Wednesday ended a 10-day fast, to protest the Canadian government's Vietnam policy, with a call on Prime Minister Trudeau and a cup of chicken soup.

Mrs. Claire Culhane of Montreal has spent 24 hours a day on Parliament Hill since her fast began to "point up the hypocrisy of profiteering from the sale of war materials while pretending to send aid to the Vietnamese people."

She spoke with Prime Minister Trudeau in his office for a few moments before heading a march to a nearby hall to break her fast early in the evening.

The prime minister had been invited to attend, she said, but since he had a prior engagement he had asked to talk to her.

"He said he wished to show his respect for what I was doing," she said.

LEAVES THE HILL

Afterwards Mrs. Culhane left Parliament Hill with about 60 persons, most carrying candles which were soon snuffed out in the chill breeze.

Mrs. Culhane, a former hospital worker with the Canadian external aid office in South Vietnam, wore a parka over her hospital uniform and white slacks made in the style worn by Vietnamese women. She looked tanned and relaxed.

"I feel marvellous because I've done something," she said as she walked, accompanied by Mrs. Therese Casgrain of Montreal who is a former Voice of Women president.

At the hall she took a seat on the platform with two women supporters and gave a short speech before drinking a small cup of soup and eating homemade bread, loaves of which were passed among those present.

Her fast, Mrs. Culhane said, was nothing compared to the hardships endured by the Vietnamese people. She looked forward to the day when the war was over and she would return to the country.

Louise Casselman, 22, a student, read congratulatory telegrams and then an external affairs department communique giving External Affairs Minister Sharp's statement that day to the United Nations general assembly.

The statement reiterated Canada's view that the bombing of North Vietnam had to stop.

Another Threat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two Pan American Airways passenger planes were turned back in flight, and two others were held on the ground after a male voice on the telephone said: "There's a bomb on one of your planes." No bomb was found. The planes, all Boeing 707s, resumed their flights later Wednesday night.

Uvic Students Vote Friday for Officers

By BOB MITCHELL
Uvic Correspondent

Uvic students go to the polls Friday to elect 18 representatives to student government.

They will choose members for the representative assembly from 31 candidates.

Fourteen first-year students will be bidding for four seats in the assembly, seven candidates will seek six second-year seats, and eight senior students will try for the six combined third and fourth-year positions.

At the executive level, two candidates will compete for the position of student campus development chairman, which translated means Student Union Building director.

Former Academic Guidebook editor, Bob Higinbotham, was last week elected academic affairs chairman by acclamation.

Last Thursday, 24 hours before the nomination deadline, it was touch and go whether an election was even necessary. Only nine candidates stood ready to campaign.

But a last-minute flurry of nominations late Thursday and all day Friday boosted the number of hopefuls to 31.

NEW EXECUTIVE committee of Community Planning Association of Canada shake hands during convention in Victoria. From left they are: Paul Melin, Saskatoon, vice-president; R. G. Murray, Halifax, past-president; A. G. Moffatt, Winnipeg, president; John Powlie, Ottawa, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, councillor, and Claude Langlois, Laval, Quebec, vice-president.

'Human Values All Around Us'

The theme of the annual convention of the Community Planning Association of Canada was challenged at its final session Wednesday by a well-known B.C. planning authority.

Dr. H. P. Oberlander, director of the University of B.C. school of community and regional planning, also challenged the theme of the panel discussion at which he spoke.

Theme for the convention was Building Human Values into the Community. Theme for the final panel discussion was Setting the Climate to Achieve Human Values in the Community.

"I don't think you can really build human values," said Dr. Oberlander. "Setting the climate is equally not posssible. It reminds me of manipulating the situation.

"As a planner, I'm a pragmatist. I'm deeply concerned about whatever it is we call human values.

"Is it possible to recognize human values there is obviously a reflection of human values all around us.

"These values make us make choices and these choices are based on values. The value system is implicit, not explicit. But acting as a community, in shaping our environment, we must make our values explicit."

Dr. Oberlander said people spend more money on cat food than baby food and shiny cars and television sets can be seen in slums.

"This shows value judgments by people."

He said this is possible because society has devised a credit system which make it easier to buy a television or a car or a washing machine than a home.

"If you really want to solve the car-created congestion in our streets—allow only cars actually paid for to travel on the streets," he said amid laughter.

Two other factors were the bombardment of the public by the printed and visual media and each individual trying to make life a little more tolerable for himself, hence the television set in the slum setting.

"We know how to build better communities, so why then are our communities deteriorating?" he asked.

It was patently untrue that we cannot afford it. It simply meant that as a society, somewhere and at some time, "we made a choice. If we really want a better community, the question is one of making that possible."

RACES meet during interval at the annual convention of the Community Planning Association of Canada, which ended Wednesday in Victoria. Gus Gottfriedsen, a councillor with the Kamloops Band (left); Chief Campbell Brass, of the Regina Peepee Kisis Band, and Tony Arcand, of the Edmonton Alexander Band, talk with Hedley Toogood, of the Community Planning Council in Ottawa.

Planners Increase Member Dues

The Community Planning Association of Canada, heavily subsidized by a federal government agency, voted Wednesday to raise its membership dues.

The decision followed a warning by one delegate that more money will be requested from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

The financial report for the year ended Dec. 31, 1967, shows CMHC provided a grant of $120,000 while membership dues brought in $22,577.

New membership dues will be $7.50 for individuals and $35 for sustaining members compared with $5 and $25 respectively under the old schedule.

During the year ended Aug. 31, 1968, CPAC membership increased to 6,772 persons from 3,857.

Wallace Visits Seattle Rally

SEATTLE (AP)—George Wallace, third party presidential candidate, will speak at a rally here Saturday night during an overnight visit, his state headquarters announced Wednesday.

The former Alabama governor is scheduled to arrive at the Seattle-Tacoma International Airport at 4 p.m. Saturday from Boise, Idaho, where he will make a brief stop.

Wallace, on the ballot in Washington as the American Party's presidential nominee, plans to leave Sunday for California on the campaign trail, his headquarters said.

FORMER MISS VICTORIA HERE ON VISIT

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wyatt and their tiny son, Peter Lance, are seen at the Adanac Street home of Mrs. Wyatt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. V. M. Petersen. Mrs. Wyatt is the former Miss Vivi Petersen, who became Miss Victoria in 1959 and went on to become runner-up in the Miss Canada contest of the same year. The Wyatts live in Berkeley, Calif., where Mr. Wyatt is attending the University of California. They head for England in January, where Mr. Wyatt will study in London under a Canada Council Fellowship. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Advice on How to Enjoy the Olympic Games Given by Director of Mexican Department

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP)—If you are going to Mexico for the Olympic Games, you should be able to eat and drink anything you want if you exercise a little restraint.

Gonzalo Moreno, director of the Mexican government tourism department in Toronto, looks pained at any suggestion that Canadians must have digestive problems in his country.

"My wife is Canadian and I make her drink the water and eat Mexican food when we are there—and nothing happens.

"There is nothing the matter with the water, but it is always advisable to avoid changes in drinking water.

"Remember, too, that Mexico City is 7,400 feet above sea level. One alcoholic drink has the effect of three or four back home.

"The air is thinner, food takes longer to digest and eating hours are different. You can have tacos or enchiladas with tomato sauce rather than pepper sauce.

"People say the vegetables make them sick. Well, many of the tomatoes and strawberries imported into Canada come from Mexico, and if people don't get sick in Canada, how come they get sick in Mexico?

"The best advice is for people to make sure the restaurant is clean and to be sensible in their eating and drinking habits."

ASK DOCTOR

If you are really concerned, Mr. Moreno says, check with a doctor before you go. There are medications you can take that may help.

What do you need to take with you besides digestive tablets?

"A Canadian who wishes to visit Mexico requires a passport and tourist card. You can get the card from Mexican tourist or government offices across Canada."

For the period of the Games only, people who need visas to enter Mexico can take a passport to a Mexican consul and get a visa in a few days instead of several months.

If you are driving, you need your car registration and an application for a customs permit.

"Canadian car insurance is not acceptable in Mexico. You would probably be wise to get Mexican insurance through an auto association or at the Unites States border. The cost varies from 80 cents to $2 a day, depending on what coverage you get."

Mr. Moreno says the temperature in Mexico City will probably be in the high 70s during the day, the 50s at night, and the weather should be dry.

NEED COAT AND TIE

A tie and jacket for men is mandatory in most good restaurants. Clothes generally are less casual than in the coastal resort areas.

"In Mexico City, ladies don't wear shorts and slacks. There is no law against it, they just don't do it."

In the coastal resorts, sports clothes are the general rule, and the weather is warmer and more humid.

If you have decided at the last minute to go, you may still be able to get rooms in private homes. Your chances now of a hotel room are slight, unless you can join a packaged tour.

The tourist office in Toronto, at 85 Richmond Street West, or in Montreal, in the Place Ville Marie, may be able to help.

There are no more mail-order tickets for the Games, but some are available at the banks in Mexico City and at the stadium box office.

There are cultural events scheduled as well as the Olympic Games, and extras in connection with them. For instance, when the Olympic torch arrives in Teotihuacan Oct. 11, there will be a folk festival with about 100 dancers from many parts of the world.

Wife of Britain's Prime Minister Nominated as Oxford Professor

OXFORD, England (Reuters) — "If I can write before I die one line of purest poetry, or crystallize for all to share a thought unique, a moment rare: Within one sentence clear and plain. Then I shall not have lived in vain."

Such homespun verse may make critics wince, but the author has been nominated to follow in the footstesp of such literary lights as Robert Graves and W. H. Auden.

The poet is Mary Wilson, 52, wife of Prime Minister Harold Wilson. She has been nominated for a three-year term as Oxford professor of poetry.

The poetry chair is a largely honorary post.

Mrs. Wilson has not yet said she will run for the post, but the necessary nomination has been filed by two holders of Oxford master of arts degrees.

The only other contender for the poetry chair so far is Barry MacSweeney, an unemployed youth of 20 who lives in the back streets of a north England industrial town.

He has drawn a critical response described as ranging from "delirium to doubt" with such avant-garde verse as:

"Tulips drip blood gouts, children pick sunshine, adults burn bread. Let's tear down forests, drain the sea dry, take off every stitch of clothing, sprawl in the corn. Madness."

Mrs. Wilson once won a prize from the Soviet newspaper Izvestia for her poem "After the Bomb" in which she envisaged the devil and his fallen angels crowing over the "charnel-house" of London after a nuclear war.

The poetry professor will be elected next month by holders of master of arts degrees from Oxford.

MAINLAND RECEPTION

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor crossed to Vancouver today in order to attend a reception, to be given by the consul-general of China to mark the National Day of China. Reception will be held at The Mings, on East Pender Street.

Celebrate Anniversary

Guests were welcomed by the new president, Mrs. Gladys Pettersen, when the Victoria Branch of the Association for Childhood Education celebrated its 21st anniversary with a wine and cheese party at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Mrs. Pettersen outlined the group's major projects since its inception in 1947. These included the establishment of the Children's Gallery at the Art Gallery. Annual contributions are still made to this project. Another project was the establishment of the Marian D. James Memorial Scholarship, which is awarded annually to an education student. This year the branch plans to assist the International Village Society which will be hosting a Children's Village on Vancouver Island, next year. A charter member of the club, Miss Ulah Jacobson, cut an anniversary cake at the party. Other charter members attending were Miss Peggy Bell and Mrs. Amy Adams.

Travelling In Europe

Many Victoria residents have signed the book at British Columbia House in London during their travels in Europe. Recent signatures include those of Mr. Harold H. Smith, Major and Mrs. Harry Seale, Mrs. Laura B. Low, Mrs. Mary E. Janz, Mr. Charles Staples, Mrs. E. C. Goodday, Mr. and Mrs. L. Clarke, Mr. R. R. Whitfield, Mr. Douglas S. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. James Audain, Mr. and Mr. V. C. Longridge and Mr. Barrie G. W. Goodwin, all of Victoria. Other Vancouver Island residents signing included Miss Olive Odgers, Nanaimo; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Russell, Port Alberni; Miss Phyllis Crampton, Saanichton; Miss Diane McNab, Duncan; Miss Joan Whitaker, Shawnigan Lake, and Mr. P. Daryl Erickson, Qualicum Beach.

Bride-Elect Honored

Mrs. G. L. Brown and Mrs. R. S. Aust recently gave a shower in the Browns' home on Cedar Hill Road in honor of bride-elect Miss Julie Gray, who received coral carnations en corsage. Her mother, Mrs. David Gray, was presented with a corsage of yellow chrysanthemums. A similar corsage in bronze tones was received by the groom-elect's mother, Mrs. E. Michaux. Invited guests included Mrs. D. Ross-Jones, Mrs. C. Dowman, Mrs. I. Dowman, Mrs. N. Worsley, Mrs. E. Alberg, Mrs. E. Davis, Mrs. J. MacDermitt, Mrs. K. Rix, Mrs. H. Youson, Mrs. G. Michaux Sr. (the groom-elect's grandmother), Mrs. R. Richter, Mrs. R. Wirth, Mrs. J. Musgrave, Mrs. R. Dunn, Mrs. S. J. Kearns, the Misses Corrinne Dunn, Louise Michaux, Dana Jones, Mary Worsley, Dorothy Worsley and Christine Brown.

Double Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. N. Glover Jr. held a quiet family dinner in their apartment, 1057 Wychbury Avenue, last Thursday evening to celebrate the coincident anniversaries of their parents. Mr. and Mrs. W. S. N. Glover Sr, 808 Intervale Avenue, were celebrating their 51st anniversary. Their golden anniversary celebrations had to be cancelled last year because of illness. Mrs. Glover's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ball, 1155 Lugrin Place, were celebrating their 26th anniversary.

Attends Baptism

Mrs. S. I. Haynee, 1911 Stanley Avenue, has just returned from Edmonton, where she attended the christening of her first grandson, Douglas Mathew, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kitson. Douglas is the first great-grandson of Mrs. Frances Martin, also of Stanley Avenue.

Plan Bazaar For Saturday

Victoria Purple Star Lodge No. 104, Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association, will hold a bazaar and tea on Saturday, October 12 in the Bay's Douglas Room. The Orange Queen, Miss Wendy Lysne, will officially open the event at 2 p.m.

Co-conveners are Mrs. F. Blanco and Mrs. E. King. Mrs. B. Wambolt is in charge of tea arrangements.

During the afternoon a drawing will be made for the Centennial quilt, made by members of the Past Mistresses Club.

This New Shampoo Comes in Barrels

By PENNY SAVER

Jayne was nowhere to be seen when I dropped over the other day, but she certainly was everywhere to be heard. The house reverberated with her voice raised in the old, and very un-Jayne-like song, "Roll Out the Barrel." I traced the source of the singing to the bathroom and knocked loudly. Jayne stopped singing long enough to ask who I was and to pop a very sudsy head out and say, "As you can see, I'm shampooing my hair. Grab a coffee, or, better yet, start a pot, and I'll be right with you." The coffee was perked by the time she emerged, head swathed in a towel, and still humming that tune. "What's with the barrel?" I asked as innocently as possible. "Shampoo," she replied enigmatically.

Jayne was trying a new shampoo that comes in a novel plastic barrel. Why a barrel? Because this shampoo is made with beer. For years, maybe even centuries, women have known that a beer rinse will leave their hair shining and manageable. They used eggs, too, and the shampoo companies were quick to enrich their products with that protein-filled commodity. But so far as I know this company (which by the way is English) is the first to incorporate beer into their product. It is a cream-type shampoo with a light, and not at all beery, scent. The manufacturer claims it is a one-step shampoo that doesn't require a conditioner or setting lotion—these are "built-in." It won't strip the color from tinted hair so can be used no matter what condition your hair is in. Just to try it out, Jayne bought a 15-cent package that holds one shampoo. She is planning to go back for another. A 69 cent barrel holds up to six shampoos while the $1.96 barrel holds up to 24.

Nylon Tip Pens for Modern Scribes

Nylon tip pens are the big thing now. For centuries western man has transferred ink to paper with metal instruments (or quills which break easily.) Then they invented the rolling ball technique, fine as long as the ball stayed round and rolling. The tapered nylon tip however gives a fine line (or a thick one if you turn the tip on its side) without this mechanical fuss. All you have to remember is to cap your pen after each using. Unfortunately most of these pens don't look as attractive as the regular ball-point, but one company has solved this. For $1.95 you can buy a sturdy metal and plastic case much like a fountain-pen case. The metal lid comes off and the body of the pen opens to let you insert an ink refill with a nylon tip. This refill seems to last as long as a regular ball-point refill. One comes with the case in the original $1.95 package and refills will be available for around 50 cents. One of my daughters uses this kind of pen exclusively and loves it.

Late nights can wreak havoc with the most rugged of complexions, but for one friend of mine they can cause disaster. She is one of those people who is prone to dark bags under the eyes and her ordinary makeup base just wouldn't cover them effectively, nor could she "patch" it on when she otherwise wanted to go "bare-face." Finally she took the advice of a beauty columnist and tried one of the new highlighter sticks. These are $2.25 each and are the size of a lipstick. They come in white (for extra bright highlights), natural, fair, medium or tan, so that they can match any skin. After some experimenting, my friend found that if she put the white under her regular make-up the circles seemed to disappear while the blonde shade tones them in with her un-made-up skin.

Please call 382-3131 if you would like to know where to shop for these items.

Bursaries Aid Nurses To Continue Studies

The alumnae of St. Joseph's Hospital School of Nursing has awarded more than $2,000 in bursaries this year, through the Sister Mary Anna bursary fund. The bursaries assist four graduates of the School of Nursing to continue post-graduate studies.

Mrs. Margaret Mada is in her final year at the University of British Columbia, in the Bachelor of Science in Nursing program.

Miss Christine Scott is enrolled in her second year in the same program, while Miss Louise Bell is in the diploma program in Public Health at UBC. Miss Bonnie Halvorsen will be awarded a bursary in January to assist her in preparatory work toward her Bachelor of Science in Nursing at the University of Washington.

The Sister Mary Anna Bursary fund honors the foundress of the Alumnae, and seeks to improve patient care by encouraging post-graduate study.

Colwood Church To Hold Sale

St. John's Anglican Church at Colwood will hold a sale of used articles Saturday, Oct. 19. The sale will begin at 9 a.m. in the parish hall on Cemetery Road, Colwood. Sale items will include used clothing, utensils and appliances.

Further features will be a home-baking stall, doughnuts and coffee. The proceeds will go toward the hall extension fund.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"What a rough week!... Get out my pajamas and set the alarm for Monday."

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Establish Good Health Habits in Your Home

Lowman

Family health is one of the most important jobs a woman must manage. The pediatrician and the school remind her that the children are due for their physical checkups. The dentist reminds her that he should be visited twice a year. There is no one, however, to remind her that adult members of the family should also have physical examinations periodically.

Many people coast along for years without seeing a doctor. Doctors are considered by most to be important only for treatment of disease. Many people seem unaware of their valuable role in the prevention of illness.

Tuberculosis, syphilis, heart disease, and cancer are some of the diseases which can either be cured or effectively controlled if they are identified in early stages. The woman who assumes responsibility for family health can spare members of the family great suffering and expense if she insists on regular visits to the doctor and the dentist.

Autumn is the season when many women devote much of their time to organizing their homes and families for the ensuing winter months and the school year. This is the time when children usually have their physical checkups before entering school. It is an ideal time for the parents to have their annual checkups as well.

A trip to the doctor can also furnish relief from anxiety the patient may have experienced over an annoying and persistent physical discomfort. I know a man who was anxious in general about starting a new career at the age of 40. He felt an old-timer among the newcomers.

Also for several weeks he had complained of a gnawing and rather persistent pain in the area of his navel. It was particularly noticeable after he had eaten. His good wife was finally able to persuade him to see their doctor about it. The source of his discomfort was diagnosed as being a new belt buckle which became particularly imposing after a hearty meal. Needless to say, he was relieved as well as amused.

In addition to seeing that members of the family visit the dentist and go for a physical checkup regularly the lady of the house should also look out for weight changes in members of the family and try to control incipient weight problems by serving lower calorie meals than may have been customary in the home. It is better in most cases not to consult the husband about this. Many men are not interested in dieting (which they think means starving).

You could serve poultry, fish, or lean beef. These would be better choices for weight control meals than pork or ham. Broil or bake them and add low calorie seasonings to make up for lack of gravy and rich sauces.

Serve fairly generous helpings of these. Also remember that there are many vegetables such as spinach, greens of all sorts, broccoli and tomatoes, which are relatively low calorie and can be eaten in large quantities. The same is true of salads consisting of lettuce and other salad greens, cabbage, cucumbers, celery and radishes. These are filling and people in general do not feel that they are dieting if they are served a large amount of anything.

Of course, if a woman is to enjoy success in gracefully managing her family's health, she must be interested in her own health as well. The habits of good eating and medical care which she establishes in her home will not only contribute to her family's health and longevity, but will establish for her children standards of behavior which will benefit them in their adult lives.

DEAR ABBY . . .

She Faces Guilt With Confessions

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What is wrong with a wonderful, extremely well educated, good looking woman of 40 who becomes engaged, then proceeds to tell me, her future husband, all about her previous love affairs in detail?

The next surprise she handed me was that although she is "in love" with me, she has not been able to discard a collection of pictures of her ex-boyfriends, and when I insisted that she throw them away she suggested breaking our engagement.

All of this was done with the full permission and approval of her psychiatrist who felt it would be "good" for her to tell me whatever came into her mind.

FINISHED AND DISGUSTED

DEAR FINISHED: Surely you must realize that the woman is in therapy and is attempting to face her problems squarely in an effort to resolve them. Her confessions were not very pretty, I agree, but her past adventures were probably causing her to feel guilty and unworthy, hence the truth session. If she is truly "wonderful," have a talk with her doctor for a better understanding of the situation.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 14 years. She quit working when we got married because we had a family soon after. Now that the children are in school she's taken a part-time job. This is what bothers me. In the past all our money was placed into a joint account for both of us.

Now that she's working, she puts her earnings into a separate account for herself. She says she wants a "nest egg." Why should a wife need a nest egg? I don't have any such separate funds. Maybe you can understand a woman's reasoning. It eludes me.

DON'T GET IT

DEAR DON'T: Don't assume that because a wife wants a "nest egg" she is going to fly the coop. Those nest eggs which frugal wives stash away in sugar bowls are usually used to buy gifts for husbands and kids.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion which I respect highly. I have been going steady with a boy for two years. Ira is 20 and I am 17. My parents have a summer home at the shore, and on weekends Ira has been our houseguest.

One day after playing ball Ira asked me to wash his socks out. It is true, he was my guest, but I think that a 20-year-old intelligent boy should be able to wash his own socks out.

I told him "no," and we didn't have an argument or anything like that, but a few weeks later his parents brought it up to me in jest.

Was I wrong not to have wash his socks out?

IRA'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: No. Ira needs a lesson in manners, and if he doesn't know how to launder his socks, it's time he pulled 'em up and learned.

Actors' Committee To Greet Patrons

The possibility of holding a dance next spring was discussed at the October meeting of Bastion Actors' Committee, held in the studio, Blanshard Street.

It was announced that members of the committee will be in the foyer of the McPherson Playhouse, Friday and Saturday, to greet and give information to interested patrons attending The Crucible.

Mrs. Sheila Conway, Miss Cathy Conway and Mrs. R. E. Mayer were welcomed as new members.

Pooling of Passengers In Jumbo Jets Suggested

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — After three days of speeches and discussions, the Canadian Tourist Association's Challenge of Change annual meeting ends today with talks on convention and tour businesses.

Facilities was a panel subject Tuesday. A woman's travel representative for the Canadian Pacific Airlines, Kay Simons, said closer co-operation rather than competition is required for airlines to serve the public efficiently.

"If airlines pooled passengers in the jumbo jet, many difficulties could be solved. The capacity of one full jumbo could replace three of our present-day aircraft."

Logical-thinking citizens asked: "Why should five carriers leave Paris for New York almost simultaneously and only carry half-loads. Why don't they pool passengers like train companies did in the past? Why should airlines lose money on half-empty aircraft merely to offer the public multiple departures? The public convenience is not served when arrival is delayed in New York because of congestion."

Miss Simons said airport requirements have been seriously underestimated and airports are five years out of date when officially opened. At peak hours they could not cope with parking, baggage and passenger loading. She said Canada needs co-ordinated research in transportation by all levels of government.

A catering manager, Heinz Rosenberger of Hotel Brunswick in Moncton, had this advice for keeping restaurant guests happy: Good food and courteous, friendly service in clean, attractive surroundings.

More people must be trained effectively to meet the demands confronting the food and restaurant industry, he said. Eating out was becoming more of a way of life but bankruptcy of restaurants would become common because they did not change fast enough to keep up with the times.

An authority on the travel business, Walter Johnson of New York, said it could grow almost 300 per cent in the next decade. He is chairman of the board of Infoplan Inc., an international public relations organization.

Mr. Johnson said the importance of the business traveller had not been recognized.

The Ontario minister of tourism, and information, James A. C. Auld, questioned the practice of the provinces concentrating 70 per cent of their advertising in the spring months while tourist promoters were encouraged to operate on a year-round basis.

$700 Million Boost For P.E.I. Economy

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government and Prince Edward Island are expected to sign in mid-November an agreement for a multi-million-dollar overhaul of the province's economy, officials said Tuesday.

One informant said the plan will cost some $700,000,000 over a period of 15 years.

Another official, however, said the only accurate assessment of costs so far is some $25,000,000 a year for the first five years.

Though the government has not yet taken a formal decision, informed sources said implementation of the plan likely will mean scrapping of the proposed nine-mile, $300,000,000 causeway to link Prince Edward Island with New Brunswick.

The Prince Edward Island plan is expected to be the first massive attempt by Prime Minister Trudeau's government to try to eliminate regional economic disparities, one of Trudeau's main election promises.

The plan, it is understood, will completely restructure services in the province and revamp land use.

One authority said Prince Edward Island's government would like Ottawa to take on all expenditures in the province. However, this could not be done constitutionally. Education, for one thing, was under provincial jurisdiction.

Opposition Tories Attack U.K. Curbs on Pay, Prices

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) —Britain's Opposition Conservative party approved unanimously today a demand for an end to Prime Minister Wilson's curbs on prices and incomes.

The move by the opposition party at its annual convention follows similar rejections of the government's key economic policy by Wilson's own Labor party and by the trade unions.

The Conservative vote came after an appeal by former colonial minister Iain Macleod who now speaks for the party on economic affairs. Attempts to control prices and wages, he said, have been "complete failures" in every country in which they have been tried.

Such a policy "has been rejected everywhere." Only Britain's foreign creditors, Macleod said in an argument heard often last week at the Labor party conference, support the policy in Britain "but none of them would dream of applying it in their own countries."

The Tory conference also called by a unanimous vote for a reform of the tax system, to switch from direct taxation to the indirect method more generally favored in the countries of the European Common Market.

Macleod said the party's research organization is studying the advisability of adopting the Common Market's value-added system of taxation.

Cleveland To Improve Police Dep't.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mayor Carl B. Stokes, troubled by racial unrest in Cleveland, announced Wednesday a $17 million program to improve law enforcement.

The Negro mayor also relieved Police Chief Michael J. Blackwell, 68, and gave the $22,125-a-year post to Deputy Inspector Patrick L. Gerity, 49.

Blackwell, appointed police chief when Stokes took office last November, turned down an offer to become a consultant to the police department and said he would rather go back to being an inspector.

Stokes told a news conference he would ask city council for funds to overhaul the police communications system and to establish a modern command centre to co-ordinate police response to crime calls.

He said he would give full details of the program later but the immediate aim was to correct the "internal breakdown of police morale and discipline."

Relations between members of the 2,200-man police department and City Hall became strained after the July 23 sniper incident when 10 persons, including three white policemen, were killed after a group of black nationalists opened fire on police.

Degree Given To Turner

FREDERICTON (CP) — Justice Minister Turner Wednesday became the third member of his family to receive an honorary law degree from the University of New Brunswick.

The honorary degree was conferred on Mr. Turner by UNB president Dr. Colin B. Mackay during fall convocation exercises.

Mr. Turner's mother, Mrs. Frank M. Ross, former chancellor of the University of British Columbia, was given an honorary degree at UNB in 1960.

Her husband, a former lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, was presented a similar degree by the university in 1956.

CHIEF CALLS CHEMICALS 'HUMANE'

HONOLULU (CP-AP) — Chemical devices are the "most humane way to handle disorders," says Police Chief Leonard G. Lawrence of Hamilton, Ont., president of the International Association of Police Chiefs. "They are preferable to other means of restraint."

His endorsement of chemical spray devices was typical of the reaction of police chiefs interviewed today at the 75th annual conference of the association.

However, he said the association believes an "exhaustive investigation is needed to determine the best chemical to use."

NEW WESTMINSTER PLAN APPROVED BY PROVINCE

Premier W. A. C. Bennett said Wednesday the provincial government has approved in principle a proposed $16,400,000 urban renewal project in the city of New Westminster.

The project involves clearing and assembling of land for new traffic arteries, a school site, development by private investors, and for high-density residential and commercial and light industrial purposes.

The premier also said approval in principle had been given to provision of 60 units of public housing in the city of New Westminster required to accommodate families displaced by the project.

The housing would cost $800,000, with details to be worked out with the British Columbia Housing Management Commission.

'Red-Paint' Culture Uncovered

By DON McLEOD

PORT AU CHOIX, Nfld. (CP) — More than 50 graves unearthed in this northern Newfoundland community have yielded the first skeletal remains of a branch of the "red-paint" religious culture dated at 4,180 to 4,400 years ago.

Excavation last fall for a pool hall exposed a wealth of information for anthropologists. Traces of the culture have been found on the eastern seaboard as far south as Maine but only a meagre supply of tools and other artifacts was available for evidence until now.

The discovery here also was a bonanza for James Tuck, 28, assistant professor of anthropology at Memorial University in St. John's, Nfld. He was barely settled in January from Syracuse, N.Y., before Memorial asked him to check out reports of the cemetery.

Dark red stains in the earth, from ochre dust spread over the graves, indicated immediately its significance. This summer, with four graduate students, Dr. Tuck gleaned several thousand artifacts and, more important, 100 skeletons from 52 graves spread over 4,000 square feet of beach, 250 feet from the sea.

Last month's radio carbon tests are to be rechecked with more early next year to pinpoint the dating. A manuscript is expected to be prepared next spring outlining the most detailed picture possible of these earliest-recorded inhabitants of Newfoundland.

COLLATE MATERIAL

Meanwhile, Dr. Tuck and other researchers are piecing together bits of bone and other material at Memorial. They will try to eliminate, culturally and biologically, some of the myriad theories already offered about the origin, history and fate of the culture.

Fragmentary indications are given of short, heavily-set Indians, plagued by arthritis but generally healthy and not hostile.

A vast array of tools indicates a relatively sophisticated culture although there is "no comparison" between it and the Indians met by white men in North America.

Also, Dr. Tuck says the lack of information about some other cultures makes comparison difficult.

"With some cultures, we have practically nothing to go on but here we have almost a complete inventory of their tools—axes, knives, needles, even combs . . ."

One of the groups which left little behind was the Beothucks. The last of them, a woman, died in St. John's in 1829. Her people were severely persecuted by white men in Newfoundland.

The non-acid soil here, which contains thousands of seashells, is credited with helping greatly to preserve the remains. Calcium in the shells neutralizes acids which can destroy bone.

Dr. Tuck said the graves also were covered with stones, apparently so they could be found again by the Indians, and this kept prowling animals from destroying the graves' contents.

FIND IS ACCIDENTAL

Bits of bone and curiously-carved rocks had been found in this area for years before a bulldozer operator from nearby Hawke Bay opened the graves accidentally last fall. They were at a depth of about two feet.

Port au Choix is a village of 600 persons located about 100 air miles north of Deer Lake, a town on the Trans-Canada Highway 30 miles from the west coast Newfoundland city of Corner Brook. It faces the Gulf of St. Lawrence on the great northern peninsula coast, where a gravel road two years ago broke centuries of isolation for a 200-mile string of fishing villages.

At the tip of the peninsula, Norwegian explorer Helge Ingstad has been excavating for several years what he believes was a Viking settlement at L'Anse aux Meadows dating from about 1,000 A.D.

The Indians that used the cemetery here apparently existed about 2,000 years or so before the Dorset Eskimos, a warlike people, who lived in Newfoundland. Did the Dorsets, perhaps, exterminate the red-paint people?

END NOT KNOWN

"We're starting to exchange ideas and somebody suggested that the other day," Dr. Tuck said in a weekend interview. "We just don't know what happened to these people. Maybe they just died away."

It is suspected the red ochre dust over the graves was meant to signify life-giving blood or the sun.

Along the eastern seaboard of the continent, one of the things which the red-paint people of different regions had in common was a practice for burying their dead on hillsides which faced the rising sun.

Hunting weapons and other possessions found in graves here apparently were placed with the corpses for use in another world.

Dr. Tuck's team believes it has cleared the cemetery of the remains, but an even bigger prize remains undiscovered, he says.

"Somewhere in that area there has to be a living site. We looked for it but we couldn't find it. Maybe somebody will."

All-Canada Film Loudly Acclaimed

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Can Canadian films compete with those of Hollywood and Europe?

Most reviewers say they can and the New York critics have been particularly loud in their praise of Isabel, an all-Canadian feature film produced in Montreal and on Quebec's Gaspe Peninsula.

Isabel will have its Victoria premiere at the Royal Theatre Friday.

Playboy Magazine called it a triumph for Genevieve Bujold, a native of Montreal. Ladies' Home Journal described the film "brilliant." Cue Magazine called it "suspenseful and haunting."

The New York Posot and New York Daily News joined in the general chorus of praise. The only adverse comment, ironically, came from a Toronto critic.

Isabel was written, produced and directed by Paul Almond of Montreal and stars his wife, Genevieve Bujold.

Mr. Almond, one of Canada's leading TV drama directors, wrote the story in Paris two years ago for his bride-to-be.

Miss Bujold, who began acting in Montreal's French-language theatre, was internationally acclaimed for her role in the award-winning French film, La Guerre est Fini.

Couples Afraid Of Marriage Course?

If you sign up for a marriage preparation course what will your friends say?

Is it a sign of fear or lack of confidence?

Chairman of the course being offered by the YM YWCA here, Ralph Williams, thinks some couples are afraid to sign up for fear they will be scoffed at by friends.

Dr. Murray Morrison and Dr. Pierre d-Estrube, a psychiatrist, spoke Tuesday night about physical and psychological aspects of sex and marriage.

But only 12 couples attended.

The course, sponsored by Greater Victoria Council of Churches, discusses housing, food and budget problems, male and female attitudes, insurance, law and investments.

It also probes the meaning of love. Roman Catholic Bishop of Victoria, Remi De Roo, says it would benefit most couples contemplating marriage.

It's held each Tuesday night at the Y.

St. John Honors Pearkes

Former Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes and Mrs. Pearkes were among old friends Wednesday night.

They were guests of St. John Ambulance — an organization they have ardently supported and encouraged during their active public lives.

And in recognition for their services, Mr. Pearkes, a Knight of the Order of St. John, was presented with a gift by the uniformed members of the Victoria, Vancouver, Nanaimo and Kamloops brigades.

Mrs. Pearkes also received a gift and a bouquet of flowers.

INFLUENCED BY ORDER

"I was influenced all my life by the ideals of the Order," Mr. Pearkes told some 90 members present. "I first read about the work of St. John Ambulance when I was a school boy in England. It impressed me."

He recalled that he had seen members carry out many outstanding services to their fellow men.

"I hope you will continue to encourage the youth of the country to uphold the ideals and principles of the Order and to train them in First Aid," he stated.

At the same time, Mr. Pearkes presented to cadet Carla Beckett, 4484 Markham, a Grand Priory award for proficiency in 12 different subjects.

200 HOURS WORK

Donna Tyre, a crusader, 1213 Craigflower, received a special shield for 200 hours of service in St. John Ambulance work. This may include work in hospitals, for the blind, retarded children and baby sitting for elderly people.

Col. J. W. D. Symons, chairman of the Victoria branch, chaired the meeting. Provincial commissioner J. D. Taggart, QC, of Vancouver, made the presentations to Mr. and Mrs. Pearkes.

Museum Closed On Thanksgiving

The Legislative Buildings will close Monday for the Thanksgiving Holiday.

The Provincial Museum will be open Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and on Sunday from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. It will be closed Monday.

Novacek	Perpetuum Mobile
Ravel	Piece en Forme Habanera
Wieniawski	Scherzo-Tarantelle, Op. 16

Everything those of us who heard Steven Staryk in his concerto performance with Victoria Symphony, had been led to expect of the violinist was realized, often beyond expectation in his Wednesday night recital.

Qualities hinted at were explored in depth. Fresh delights were revealed, astonishing phases of bow technique and sheer bravura, the latter, notably in the scintillating Wieniawski and the Paganini Concerto No. 2 which he gave as an encore.

Throughout, the artist dominated the virtuoso. Staryk uses his fluent and easy mastery of his instrument—except in the two or three purely show pieces—only for the lucid and sensitive evoking of musical thought and meaning.

His bow is a joy to watch with its sweep, assurance and elegance.

More than that, it seems a part of his physical and intellectual self, lifting lovely bits of color from the strings, flicking a delicate phrase into the air, manipulating intricate passages of double-stopping, pianissimo or fortissimo, with equal ease.

Another of the great pleasures of this gem of a recital was the presence of Robin Wood at the piano.

The two artists blended ideally in the sonatas, the duo numbers in which each is equal. Mr. Wood is a marvellous ensemble player and an extraordinarily fine artist at any level.

Until this week, the two artists had not met as a team, but the balance, the unity of thought could not have been more ideal, the choice of dynamics more accurately and sensitively judged.

And again, in performance of the group of five pieces, the artistic partnership brought nothing but the most complete satisfaction.

Staryk produces a beautiful, smooth golden tone which was further enriched in the sonatas by the mellow velvetyness of his Del Gesu Guarnerius violin.

For the final group he used the somewhat brighter-toned 1733 Stradivarius which sounded particularly luminous in my own favorite—except for the Beethoven and Schumann—the charming Oriental-tinged Chant de Roxane.

Happily, Staryk further emphasized his beautifully modeled phrasing and musicianly craftsmanship by playing as his final encore, a Bach unaccompanied Partita.

Pins Awarded Long-Time Hospital Workers

Long-time employees of the Royal Jubilee hospital were honored at the annual dinner Wednesday.

Gold pins for 25 years of service were presented to Elizabeth Burrows and Mary Irving. Courtney Haddock, chairman of the board of directors, made the presentations.

Silver pins for 15 years service were presented to Mrs. Ruth Boyd, Mrs. Eugenie Louie, Mrs. Pauline Morrish, Mrs. Bertha McHaffie-Gow, Mrs. Elizabeth Maddock, Mrs. Barbara McNeish, Mrs. Edith Boshware, Mrs. Rose Pethick, Mrs. Eleanor Sutherland, James Clements, Anthony Toriglia, Jack Brown, George Deighton and Albert Laycock.

Mrs. Lydia Maier, Mrs. Kathleen McNaughton, and Donald Robinson were also given silver pins.

Three members of the staff with over 35 years service, Charles Ward, J. Edwin Smith, and William Haslam were given special mention by the chairman.

PLAY TO FEATURE MEN IN THE RAW

LONDON (Reuters)—Hot on the heels of the brief nude scene in the American musical "Hair", which marked the end of theatre censorship in Britain, more stage nudity—exclusively male—is to be seen here shortly.

This will occur in Toronto-born John Herbert's "Fortune and Men's Eyes", which is set in a prison. The play is to be transferred to the West End October 27 after a two-month run at a theatre club.

While in "Hair" a dozen boys and girls face the audience stark naked in a half-light, in "Fortune and Men's Eyes", three actors are seen in various stages of undress on a fully-lit stage.

Alberta Eyes Sunday Drinking

EDMONTON (CP) — Industry Minister Russel Patrick said "legislation for liquor with meals on Sunday at restaurants will be introduced at the next session of the Alberta legislature."

Mr. Patrick told 400 delegates at the two-day Canadian Restaurant Association convention that such legislation would generally improve food service in the province.

"Visitors to Alberta frequently say that the Prairie provinces are behind central Canada and the United States when it comes to permissive drinking laws," Mr. Patrick said, adding that if Alberta introduced Sunday drinking with meals, then the other Prairie provinces would follow suit.

Johnson Book Out

MONTREAL (CP)—A new edition of the book Egalite on Independence — written by the late premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec, was launched Tuesday at the Renaissance Club, Montreal headquarters of the ruling Union Nationale party. The members of the Johnson family, including Mrs. Johnson, gathered at the club and listened as Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand paid tribute to "the man who was my political brother."

Portrait of the Author as Victim

A SCAR IS BORN

By Eric Nicol. On the evening of Friday, October 6th, 1967 at the Brooks Atkinson Theatre in New York, "A Minor Adjustment" had its official opening. On the evening of Saturday, October 7th, 1967, "A Minor Adjustment" had its official closing. "For the first time in my life I envied the longevity of 48-hour 'flu,'" writes the author. This is the touching, yet hilarious story of a Canadian play's brief visit to Broadway and the author's misadventures in New York while awaiting its production. 'Name a Problem . . . We've Encountered It'

By BOB THOMAS

ANET, France (AP)—"Name all the bad things that could happen to a film company, and they happened to us. Plus a few things that nobody thought of before."

This was the bemused comment of Blake Edwards, the youthful-looking movie veteran—Days of Wine and Roses, The Great Race—who has been filming—or trying to film—Darling Lili since March 18. Now the leaves are beginning to turn gold, and he still hasn't completed the European shooting.

The day's work in this French village near Paris was an example of Edwards' trials. He required only two brief scenes: one in which Julie Andrews and Rock Hudson strolled beside a stream; another in which Miss Andrews, portraying a First World War spy, entertained wounded veterans. All morning long, clouds dodged around the sun, making idle the cast and crew of 250.

"And both these shots are retakes," Edwards explained with controlled exasperation. "I filmed them once before, but the camera was defective."

Such troubles have added $5,000,000 to the cost of Darling Lili. Edwards now estimates the final total at between $16,000,000 and $17,000,000—provided there are no more catastrophes.

Edwards listed some of the calamities that have befallen Darling Lili.

"In Brussels we had a full-scale riot; 1,500 extras put on a demonstration for more pay. Naturally we had to pay them. So I shot the sequence—and the film was ruined. I shot it again—and the film was ruined once more. So I shot it a third time.

"You wouldn't believe the amount of film that the London lab has ruined. And the weather! The worst within memory. We have sat around for days waiting for the sun to appear. This scene I'm trying to get today—this is the fourth day we have been waiting for sun.

BEAT BY WEATHER

In Ireland I figured I would lick the weather. I knocked myself out re-writing the scene for cloudy weather. So what happens? We encountered the hottest 10 days in recent Irish history. That was when Charles Bludhorn, chairman of the board of Paramount's parent company, Gulf and Western, chose to arrive.

"What are you doing?" he asked. I had to tell him I was waiting for the sun to go away.

"Finally I gave up on Ireland and came to France to shoot a sequence of an airplane landing on a green field. Then I found out they have mowed the fields and they're all brown. I have toured all of France in a helicopter and cannot find a suitable field. Now I will have to go back to Ireland to finish the sequence before we can go back to Hollywood and finish the picture."

Edwards admitted that all the travails—and the extra $5,000,000—will be forgotten if Darling Lili is a hit. And with Julie Andrews, who happens to be Edward's own darling in real life, its chances are good. With the all-time top moneymaker, Sound of Music, to her credit, as well as such blockbusters as Mary Poppins, Thoroughly Modern Millie and Hawaii, the lady appears unable to do wrong.

Tax Men To Get Tough

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is gearing up for tougher prosecution of tax evaders, sources indicated Wednesday.

In the process, out-of-court tax settlements will become rare.

All cases in which tax evasion is indicated by investigation, and in which prosecution is deemed to be warranted, will be put in the hands of the justice department.

In the past, it has often been revenue department practice to launch action but settle for recovery of taxes owed, together with a penalty, before a case is pushed to its conclusion.

Sources said this practice acted as a deterrent to repeated offences by the individual or company charged, but did not have the value of a court decision to deter others.

The initial charge could be published but the out-of-court settlement could not be announced and this has been regarded as another disadvantage.

WILL TAKE CHARGE

The hard-line approach will be directed by James L. Gourlay, 47, senior legal adviser on taxation in the justice department who has just been appointed director of the special investigations division in revenue's compliance branch.

Mr. Gourlay has a record of vigorous prosecution of offenders during 16 years as legal counsel in government.

He takes over a program shaped by the revenue department's reorganization of December, 1966.

An offender still may avoid prosecution if he makes a voluntary disclosure of his tax position before investigative action has begun. In such cases, only taxes, penalties and interest due must be paid.

The special investigations division employs about 200 men in 25 district offices investigating taxpayers believed to be evading taxes.

The Income Tax Act provides for maximum fines of $10,000, plus up to double the amount of tax being evaded, and imprisonment for up to five years for each offence. An additional civil penalty of 25 per cent is automatically added to the total tax evaded.

France Cuts Price On Wheat?

OTTAWA (CP) — A reported sale of French wheat to Japan at cut-rate prices stirred a lively exchange Wednesday in the Commons.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, answering Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary Centre), said such a sale would be contrary to the Canberra agreement recently signed by wheat-producing countries. Canada would protest if it were found to have taken place.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) was called to order by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux when he demanded to know what else Canada is doing about the reported sale.

The Alberta member rephrased his question.

Mr. Pepin replied there is a "mutual allegation society" among wheat-producing countries and he would want to look into the matter before concluding that a violation had taken place.

●

RCMP Probing Over-Delivery

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP is investigating reports that some western farmers over-delivered on their wheat quotas, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin informed the Commons Wednesday.

Replying to Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville), Mr. Pepin said it will be decided on the basis of police findings whether prosecutions should be instituted.

Mr. Pepin's department has jurisdiction over the Canadian wheat board, which administers the quota system.

Canon's Wife Dies at Sidney

Mrs. Margaret A. Vaughan-Birch, wife of Canon Vaughan-Birch of St. Andrew's Anglican Church, Sidney, died at Sidney Tuesday.

Born at Victoria, she has also lived at Calgary and High River, Alta. She is survived by her husband and one daughter.

Funeral services will be held at St. Andrew's Church, Sidney, Friday at 2 p.m. Archbishop Harold Sexton and Rt. Rev. George R. Calvert will officiate.

Requiem Mass

LONDON (CP) — Canadian High Commissioner Charles Ritchie and other dignitaries will attend a solemn requiem mass Oct. 15 for the late Daniel Johnson, premier of Quebec. The mass will be held at Farm Street Church in Mayfair, the Roman Catholic parish church of the fashionable district in which Quebec House is situated.

TV Debate Bill Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democrats forced passage Wednesday of legislation that could set up televised debates by major presidential candidates after cracking an all-night Republican filibuster with extraordinary lockup tactics.

Only after 27 hours and 45 roll calls and a minor scuffle between Rep. Robert Taft Jr., (R—Ohio, and a doorkeeper, was the House able to approve the measure 280 to 35.

In the end, the bill got substantial support from Republicans who had claimed all along they opposed it—not on its contents—but as a means of forcing the Democratic leadership to take up congressional and election reform measures.

35 AGAINST

All 182 House Democrats who were present voted for the bill. They were joined by 98 Republicans on final passage. Thirty-five Republicans voted against it.

The bill, approved in what is believed to have been the second longest session in House history and with the members locked in the chamber to insure a quorum, now goes to the Senate, which is expected to tailor its own bill, approved earlier, to conform to the House measure.

The House measure would change temporarily the federal law to permit the three major presidential candidates to debate on a national network broadcast without lesser candidates having the right to claim "equal time."

REJECT AMENDMENT

Before final passage at mid-afternoon, the House rejected, 204 to 112, an amendment that would have provided for the three main candidates to appear separately rather than on the same program.

So effective were the Republicans' repeated demands for quorum calls that it took nearly 24 hours to complete reading of the journal of Monday's proceedings—a routine that usually takes but half a minute—and begin consideration of the television campaign debate bill.

Democratic national chairman Lawrence O'Brien, who is Humphrey's campaign director, issued a statement accusing House Republicans of a "desperate effort to spare Richard Nixon from having to go before the voters on television with Hubert Humphrey."

If there are further delays in the Senate, O'Brien said, "you can rest assured that Nixon's tre one who has caused them."

Finland's Socialists Defeated

HELSINKI (AP) Finland's socialist parties suffered a surprising defeat in local elections Sunday and Monday, dropping seven per cent of their earlier strength to conservative and liberal parties.

About 3,000,000 voters cast ballots under an electoral law that had lowered the voting age to 20 from 21. Some 240,000 young people voted.

The non-socialist parties gained 57 per cent of the vote while the socialists gathered only 43 per cent, a sharp decrease from the 50 per cent won in municipal elections in 1964.

The outcome surprised most political observers after the Social Democratic election victory in Sweden Sept. 15, when the non-socialist parties dropped seven per cent to strengthen the Social Democratic government to a position it has not enjoyed since the Second World War.

Congo Executes Rebel Leader

KINSHA (AP) — The Congo government announced that rebel leader Pierre Mulele was executed by a firing squad secretly at 5:30 a.m. Wednesday.

A leftist, Mulele had led a band of pro-Patrice Lumumba rebels in Kwilu province after the premier was slain in 1961. Mulele led one of the bloodiest uprisings in The Congo's eight years of independence from Belgium before fleeing to the Congo Republic, the Congo's French-speaking neighbor, four years ago.

Mulele returned to The Congo in Sept. 8 on a safe-conduct provision under the country's amnesty laws.

How to Run Clubs Subject of Course

A course designed to assist club officers is being given by the Parliamentary Study Group of Victoria.

Information regarding the course may be obtained from president Mrs. J. J. Wiart at 388-4712, or from Mrs. R. M. Creed, secretary (384-6388).

The course includes discussions and lectures on how to become a successful president and the responsibilities of a secretary and treasurer.

AUTO INSURANCE REPORT HIGHLIGHTS

Total abolition of the present system of third-party liability insurance on vehicles including statutory scrapping of civil court suits to determine proportions of damage pay-out on the basis of blame for an accident;

Establishment of a government-supervised system of compulsory "driver insurance," replacing automobile insurance, on "no fault" basis;

Underwriting continued by private insurance companies with government moves encouraging more effective competition but, if the industry balks at the new scheme, government to go into insurance business directly;

Insurance pay-out of death and injury benefits automatically and usually within one week of an accident regardless of whose fault it was;

No civil litigation over blame — any culpable driving causing the accident to be punished solely through police court actions and insurance to cover damages of the insured only not a third party;

A compulsory "basic" insurance policy to be required as a condition of obtaining a driver's licence — hence each driver in a family or a firm to have his own insurance policy;

An estimated 86 per cent of all B.C. drivers to qualify for cheapest premium — $16.76 a year — of the compulsory basic policy;

Basic policy to provide $20,000 death and $50 a week disability insurance for driver and his dependents no matter where or how they come to harm on a B.C. road;

A special fund to cover persons who do not have a driver in the household so that every British Columbian, and visitor to the province, automatically is covered by the basic death and disability benefits whether in a car, riding a bike or walking across the road;

Basic benefits go with British Columbians wherever they may be on the North American continent—but B.C. drivers going out of province will have to take out regular third-party liability insurance when driving a car beyond provincial borders if they want protection against damage suits elsewhere;

Supplementary policies for more death and injury benefit and coverage of collision damage repairs to insured's own vehicle to be made available on normal basis with voluntary purchase of policies by drivers who want more than the basic coverage;

But even the voluntary supplementary policies to make pay-out on a "no fault" basis to eliminate litigation;

Basic compulsory policy to cost a maximum of $16.76 to $26.48—depending on driver's record as determined by the new Motor Vehicles Branch "penalty point" system;

Premiums for basic policy to be set by a new three-man B.C. Automobile Insurance Board which also will hear appeals against insurance company actions, keep statistics on drivers and make recommendations to government on changes in plan;

An independent safety research laboratory to be operated by the board, and with it a special fund to cover non-subscribers financed through increase of less than a cent to the present 13-cents-per-gallon gasoline tax and 15-cents-per-gallon diesel fuel tax;

Minimum driver age stepped up from 16 to 18 years of age but 16-18 group may get licence if approved driving school course is completed satisfactorily;

Eventually, all persons applying for first B.C. driver's licence to be required first to pass a driving school course;

Drivers licences to be renewed annually instead of every five years as at present with both licence and compulsory basic insurance issued on individual's birthdate;

Quebec Prepares to Debate Republic Plan for Canada

QUEBEC (CP) — A proposal that Quebec become a republic within a larger Canadian republic is to be studied by the Quebec legislative assembly's constitutional committee, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand announced Wednesday.

The premier said at a news conference the proposal, contained in a "working paper," had also suggested name for the Canadian republic—The Canadian Union.

The constitutional committee, which likely will meet after the opening of the provincial legislature Oct. 22, includes Liberal leader Jean Lesage and Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Mouvement Souverainete-Association.

Mr. Bertrand said the "working paper" was not binding on the province's Union Nationale government.

The paper suggests Canada become an association of two nations or a federation of 10 states—any member of which could choose republic status—while remaining within Commonwealth and possibly maintaining the "monarchical system" with a Canadian president.

Mr. Bertrand said the 52-page document was submitted July 24 to the permanent federal-provincial committee of the constitutional conference established early this year.

SENT TO TRUDEAU

The document was also sent Oct. 2 to Prime Minister Trudeau and the provincial premiers and had been distributed to members of the Quebec legislature.

He said it would be discussed in the assembly, and he had no objection to the assembly's constitutional committee discussing it prior to the proposed Dec. 9-11 provincial leaders' constitutional conference in Ottawa. Quebec has agreed to such a conference on the dates already proposed by Mr. Trudeau.

The document says it would be "preferable" for the Canadian Union to become a republic within the Commonwealth, but it adds also the following six points:

1. "At this point, a Canadian president heading the union would be more conducive to Canadian unity than is the British Crown.

2. "Because it is more easily associated with sovereignty of the people, the republican form of government is more closely allied with most Canadians' conception of the nature of their political institutions.

3. "Adoption of a republican form of government would provide the ideal opportunity to reform several of our political institutions so as to make them more effective.

4. "A republican form of government would render Canada's sovereignty and independence more evident to the rest of the world.

5. "However, this reform at the union (federal) level is not of such importance that an overall priority should be attached to it.

6. "As for Quebec, she would like to have the power immediately to become a republic within the Canadian union."

LATVIA TRAMPLES FLOWER POWER

MOSCOW (Reuters)—The Latvian Communist party newspaper Sovietskaya Latvia reports that a blossoming colony of flower people in Riga has been stamped out.

The "home-grown imitators of American and English loafers" now are all at work or in school, and their parades through the streets of ancient Riga in gaudy clothing have ended, it says.

Riga's hippies, the newspaper says, had their own little world of clothing designers, specialists in long hair styles, poets who exalted the hippie life and singers of Western songs, learned from "radio stations that are hostile to us".

The newspaper does not explain how the hippie movement was suppressed.

Quebec Seeks To Legalize Foreign Pacts

QUEBEC (CP) — Education, social security, health and manpower are exclusively related to the provinces under Quebec's proposals for a new Canadian constitution.

The proposals, presented last July to a permanent committee of the Canadian constitutional conference, would also empower the provinces or states to enter into agreements with foreign governments in matters under their jurisdiction.

The province outlines in the document a list of the powers it feels must come under the jurisdiction of the member states of a proposed new "Canadian union":

Defence and armed forces; foreign policy and diplomatic relations except in matters under state jurisdiction; central and commercial banking; money and exchange rates; customs tariffs and international commerce; regulation of monopolies and restrictive practices in private enterprise; weights and measures; bills of exchange and promissory notes; patents, trademarks, and copyrights; Canadian citizenship; the post office, maritime navigation, international and interprovincial air traffic and international and interprovincial railways; the federal public service; establishment of state corporations for federal aims, and establishment of private companies in specifically federal jurisdictions.

As matters of joint jurisdiction, Quebec would include agriculture, immigration "although assimilation of immigrants would come under state jurisdiction", statistics, census, bankruptcies, radio and television broadcasting and film making, the marketing of agricultural products, food and drugs.

SPECIFIES 'STATE' DUTIES

Quebec also proposes that the constitution should specify that federal powers not include the following but that they be added to powers now under provincial jurisdiction:

Marriage and divorce; establishment of companies and corporations with the exception of those mentioned as falling under federal jurisdiction; trading in stocks and shares and control of financial institutions other than banks but including savings and loan institutions;

Insurance companies, co-operatives, foundations and trust companies; labor relations and working conditions in all private enterprises within the state's territories; road transportation no matter what the origin or destination; integration of immigrants;

All works and labor within provincial boundaries except for those falling under federal jurisdiction; rehabilitation of prisoners; exploration, conservation or exploitation of natural resources; territorial management; municipal organization, urban development and housing and recreation and sports.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

South's jump to four hearts announced a minimum opening bid with very good trumps. In other words, it said, "Partner, my hand calls for play in hearts. If you have enough high cards to go along with my good trumps, we have a slam; otherwise we belong in game only."

Opening lead—♦Q

North might have simply jumped to the heart slam but North decided to make some effort to get to seven. Hence his bids of four and five no-trump. South had told his story and settled for the small slam.

South looked over dummy carefully and counted his winners. There were just 11 of them. He could get a 12th easily by taking the double finesse in clubs or he could get the 12th by setting up dummy's fifth spade. The odds that West would hold at least one of the club honors were 3 to 1 in South's favor; the odds that spades would divide 4-2 only about 8-to-5, so that if only one play could be used, it was up to South to try the club finesse.

On the other hand there was a way for South to try both plays. He started by winning the diamond in dummy. Then he entered his hand with the queen of trumps. Next came a spade to the ace and the ruff of a spade. Back to dummy with the king of trumps and the ruff of another South drew the last trump and showed his hand, conceding a club.

It was just as well that he gave himself that extra chance. The spades did break but both club honors were wrong.

INTRODUCING

The latest edition of the famous Ford Lawn and Garden Tractor Line — the Model 70 (manual) and 75 (electric).

Not a "riders" mower — rugged, tough, eye pleasing little tractor built to do the job with an outside adjustable 36 inch cut. Outstanding features such as:

Universal Quick Hitch of Attachments.
Visible fuel gauge in hood top.
Puncture proof front tires.
Wide base terra type tubeless rear tires.
Comfort seat with back rest.
Easy to use parking brake.
Fully float and pivot front axle.

NEW MACHINES

Still a few left in the famous Atco and Ransomes lines, at 25 per cent off our regular price:

2 only Atco 24", regular [illegible], now [illegible]

3 only Ransomes Sprite 14", regular $125, now [illegible]

1 only Atco demo. battery electric model, was $165, now [illegible]

USED MACHINES

7 Atcos from 14" to 20", all reconditioned and guaranteed, ranging in price from $75 up.

4 Ransomes from 14" to 18", from $69.95.

Terms up to 24 months with low down payment.

We also have a few other makes, all reconditioned, going for rock bottom prices from $29 up.

We welcome your trades. We have an efficient staff of expert mechanics to service your mower.

We are as near as your phone. Call 386-7704.

Nigeria Issue Follows Sharp

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — External Affairs Minister Sharp returned to Ottawa Wednesday night after nine busy days as head of Canada's United Nation delegation.

The capital is unlikely to prove any refuge for Sharp from the problem on which he spent many hours here—Nigeria's civil war and its heavy toll of lives from starvation and sickness, particularly in secessionist Biafra.

The Commons external affairs committee is immersed in urgent meetings on how to get speedy relief to the civilian victims of the strife. The UN Children's Fund at the end of September estimated 8,000 to 10,000 persons a day were dying of malnutrition and disease.

In a wide-ranging address to the 125-member General Assembly Wednesday, Sharp said Canada intends to play a strong role in providing immediate relief in the strife-torn African country and in reconstruction which must come with peace.

Sharp made no move to ask the UN to arrange a ceasefire in Nigeria, a policy urged on him Tuesday by two MPs who last week spent 36 hours in Biafra.

Andrew Brewin, NDP member for Toronto Greenwood, and David MacDonald, Conservative MP for Egmont, failed to convince Sharp during two private meetings here that a UN initiative is desirable.

Sharp recalled that he had told the Commons some time ago that Nigeria ceasefire efforts had been undertaken by the regional peace-keeping organization, the OAU, made up of Nigeria's neighbors.

On exploring later whether the UN should take some action, he had received an OAU recommedation against it.

And Secretary-General U Thant, replying to a Canadian inquiry as to how it could help in Nigeria, had said the OAU is the appropriate body to deal with the fighting, but that humanitarian relief would be welcomed from all.

Students, Government Talking

MEXICO CITY (Reuters) — Student leaders met secretly with government representatives Wednesday night in the first move to ease tension before the opening of the Olympic Games Saturday, informed sources said today.

The sources said six members of the National Students Strike Council organizers of demonstrations in favor of a bigger voice in the government of President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz, met at a private house with two politicians close to Diaz to discuss how students could start talks with federal authorities.

The sources, close to both the government and the student movement, said the move paved the way for a quick solution.

48 DIED

Student unrest began late in September, ostensibly in protest against alleged police brutality. But it became increasingly anti-government and erupted into clashes with troops and police in which at least 48 persons died, more than 500 others injured and 2,000 more arrested.

The student leaders are demanding that Diaz or his representative publicly discuss with them a six-point petition of grievances that includes demands for disbandment of the riot police corps, dismissal of city police chiefs, release of political prisoners and repeal of a penal code clause outlawing potentially subversive public assembly.

As a condition to the talks, the student leaders are seeking withdrawal of troops from some of the 126 city polytechnic and university schools still under military control, release of students jailed in the riots and an end to government harassment of student meetings.

Strom Enters Alberta Race

EDMONTON (CP)—Municipal Affairs Minister Harry Strom, 54, Wednesday announced at a news conference he will seek the Social Credit leadership at a convention here in December.

Raymond Reierson, 49, minister of labor and education, earlier announced he also will seek the post.

Premier E. C. Manning announced last month he will retire after a successor is chosen.

Canada's Aid To Biafra Slow Leaving Ground

By CARMAN CUMMING

OTTAWA (CP) — It may be several days before any Canadian aircraft takes part in the Biafra relief airlift, officials here report.

After Nigeria's surprise move in agreeing to let Canadian aircraft fly into Biafra under Red Cross markings, the government is seeking details on how the airlift will work.

Prime Minister Trudeau announced Nigeria's agreement Tuesday and later it was reported that two big Hercules aircraft were tentatively scheduled to leave today.

But officials said Wednesday night a number of points still are being clarified about flights into the blockaded territory.

The Red Cross was being asked the type and location of landing fields that will be used, what unloading equipment and support staff would be needed and how the supplies would be sent to forward relief areas.

The officials said they want to be sure the airfields can handle the $2,500,000, four-engined planes which can carry up to 40 tons of supplies.

They also said only one aircraft, not two, has been placed on 48-hour standby alert to take part in the Biafra run.

It is at Namao, Alta., and Red Cross markings were to be painted on it today.

Also unclear is whether the plane will take relief supplies from Canada when it goes. The officials said as many as 33 men might have to go, along with loading and support equipment.

CARRY DOUBLE CREW

The plane, along with any others put into the service, would carry a double crew of 14 men to cope with the high probability of disease.

Once in Nigeria it presumably would remain some time flying a shuttle service within the country, the officials said.

The government announced Sept. 30 that it had offered the Red Cross one Hercules for flights within Nigerian-controlled territory. On Wednesday External Affairs Minister Sharp reported from New York, after discussions with Nigeria's foreign affairs commissioner, that Nigeria would not object to flights into secessionist Biafra as well.

The Commons external affairs committee today is to question External Affairs Minister Sharp on the issue of relief in the wake of his discussions at the United Nations in New York.

Also under continued questioning will be two opposition MPs, David MacDonald (PC—Egmont) and Andrew Brewin (NDP — Toronto-Greenwood) who visited Biafra last week.

Mr. Brewin told the committee Wednesday there are "genocidal implications" in the war, although he was not accusing the Nigerian government of committing genocide.

And the situation is so unsettled that acts of genocide might take place if the war continued, he said.

Mesachie Lake Residents Take on Self-Government

DUNCAN — Action is expected Wednesday in transferring the village of Mesachie Lake from a company town to a self-sustaining unit within the Cowichan Regional District.

Regional Director Allan Anderson said meetings will be held then with officials of Hillcrest Lumber Company which in September closed down its sawmill and logging operations at Mesachie.

Company secretary John Coleman told an earlier regional board meeting that Hillcrest Lumber was willing to hand over the village utilities such as the water system for a nominal $1 sum.

Mr. Anderson said:

"It would be quite tragic if the neat, tidy and pleasant village was allowed to deteriorate because it was no one's responsibility to maintain services."

PORT ALBERNI — A deadhead was responsible for partially sinking an airplane moored on the Port Alberni waterfront Wednesday.

Owners of the plane, Ocean-Air Ltd., at first attributed the sinking to vandals or a boat collision, but after raising the five-passenger craft it was found a pontoon had been struck by a deadhead.

Fishermen and boat owners have made numerous recent complaints about deadheads in the canal.

CAMPBELL RIVER — Inadequate night police protection in the downtown district has prompted the Chamber of Commerce to seek a meeting with Campbell River council.

Dagmar Christensen of Dagmar's Gift Shop told a chamber meeting Wednesday her shop has been broken into three times recently.

She said the RCMP told her nothing could be done unless more men were added to the detachment.

Snap Shop proprietor George Scoffield said the area "definitely" lacks adequate police protection at night.

DUNCAN — When an extended care unit is added to Cowichan District Hospital it should be of concrete and not frame construction.

Cowichan Regional District Board went on record Wednesday evening as being unanimously behind the local hospital board in demanding government permission to build in concrete.

The local hospital board has presented to the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service a sketch plan for a 50-bed, one storey building. It would allow for addition of four more storeys.

NANAIMO — Northfield and East Wellington ratepayers will have a second chance to vote on the bus subsidy by-law Oct. 29.

There are 1,333 ratepayers in Area D, Northfield and East Wellington to share the total $4,320 which would go to the subsidy. The bylaw will need a 60 per cent majority on Oct. 29.

The only dissentient vote at Tuesday's board meeting was from George Milford, who said East Wellington should not have to pay for a service it is not getting.

Mr. Milford said Northfield fire protection district ratepayers had presented a petition with 272 names to have the bylaw reconsidered. But East Wellington defeated it by 60 to 16 votes.

East Wellington is not served by a bus service.

DUNCAN — Margaret Smith, 18, Stratfords Crossing, a first year nurse in training at Victoria is the recipient of the annual Eagles' busary.

The occasion was the 22nd anniversary banquet of the Duncan Aerie (No. 2546) of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. The presentation was made by the Duncan president, Thomas Clough.

Miss Smith is the daughter of Michael J. Smith, past president. About 150 attended the dinner, including a strong delegation from the Nanaimo Aerie. Speakers included Mayor Quaife of Duncan and Mayor Morton of North Cowichan.

CROFTON — Volunteer firemen here will build a swimming pool at the firehall.

Fire Chief Gordon Vye said: "The main object will be to provide facilities for Red Cross swimming instruction.

"In the past when there has been poor weather in the summer the youngsters haven't been able to complete their instruction courses. With a heated pool they will.

"Eventually we hope to have the pool covered and be able to offer year-round instruction."

One of the firemen's money-raising projects is a pig and whistle variety night at Crofton Community Hall Friday, Oct. 25.

DUNCAN — The only home-built aircraft in the Cowichan Valley has successfully taken to the air.

The happy pilot-cum-builder is millworker Joseph Horse.

He put the French-designed Maranda together in his Herd Road basement over the past six years.

Mr. Horse's plane was recently accepted by the transport department and he hopes soon to receive approval to carry a passenger.

He is now restricted to a 25-mile radius from the private airstrip at Drinkwater Road.

Excluding the many hours of labor the Maranda with its four-cylinder 125 horsepower engine cost $2,800.

PROWLING BEARS FORCE COUNCIL TO MOVE DUMP

GOLD RIVER—Council has been asked to relocate the town garbage dump after the British Columbia Wildlife Service was forced to kill several black bears, an act the service described as "a waste of our wildlife resources".

The service was called in after RCMP received 15 complaints of bears prowling the dump.

In a letter to council, the service said bears in such circumstances are relatively safe. The danger is in the liberties a person will take in a bear's presence.

Council agreed to seek a new location for the dump.

Flood Control Plan Compromise Likely

DUNCAN — A compromise scheme of flood control for the lower reaches of the Cowichan River is on its way.

But chairman George Whittaker of Cowichan Regional District said Wednesday there will be no action until next spring. He said the provincial water rights branch will not make a further move until a federal fisheries department report is available in April or May.

Mr. Whittaker said the compromise would be between the proposals to straighten and dredge the river, and to provide a system of set-back diking.

He said: "We of North Cowichan expressed our opinions pretty strongly at a joint meeting last month and won some agreement, particularly regarding the straightening of the river below Somenos Creek.

'GO ALONG'

"We would go along with the compromise if it included straightening of the river at this point and lowering of the Somenos Creek outlet 4½ feet.

"This would make a great deal of difference to the flooding situation in the municipality."

The water rights branch plan for set-back diking would encompass a 400-acre area of Indian reserve. Cowichan Indian band manager Ross Modeste said there would be objections from a few of his people.

Boats Out For Some B.C. Lakes?

NANAIMO — A transport department official said Wednesday that planned small craft regulations could include prohibition of boating on some lakes and in some areas and could regulate water skiing in parks.

Herbert Buchanan, Vancouver marine services regional director, told the Canadian Port and Harbor Association the regulations, for the benefit of municipalities, will be introduced next summer.

He said the regulations will mean water resources can be used by more people.

Charles Gress of the Windsor, Ont., harbor commission was elected president and N. W. Bowmen of Ottawa vice-president. Bill Rest of Toronto was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

FORT ST. JOHN—A 14-year-old Ladysmith youth was killed near here Wednesday in a hunting accident on the Alaska Highway.

Martti Jaako Rulio was moose hunting with his father when he stepped in front of the senior Rulio's rifle. His father was aiming at a moose at the time, police said.

The accident occurred at mile 228 of the Alaska Highway.

Duncan Calls Tenders For Water Extension

DUNCAN — City council is calling tenders for extension of its water lines south of the Cowichan River.

The only territory south of the river within the city boundaries is Cowichan Indian Reserve.

But Mayor Jim Quaife said Tuesday: "We have had a request from the Eagle Heights subdivision water board and this is being taken into consideration in our plan."

Eagle Heights is in unorganized territory and part of an area south of the river which in 1966 voted not to join the city.

Mayor Quaife said: "We have no immediate plan for adding to the city but if we received a request the matter could be open to negotiation.

"But this extension has nothing to do with Eagle Heights joining or not joining the city.

"We will provide service from these extended lines to those people south of the river who apply for it."

SOME PROFIT

Mayor Quaife explained that under the terms of the public utilities commission council is allowed to make a small margin of profit from its waterworks and this can be used for capital improvement and extension.

He said the estimated cost of the proposed extension is $30,000 and the distance involved are subject to determination by the city's consulting engineer.

Chairman of the Eagle Heights water board Vic. Billings said that a year ago then Mayor Jack Dobson explained council's policy was not to sell water beyond its boundaries.

He said: "Mayor Dobson told us the city would supply the subdivision in the case of emergency, but this year it seems to be a different proposition.

He said: "We do not necessarily want to buy city water but in July and August when the river is at its lowest and consumption at its peak we are a little bit pinched."

At present Eagle Heights residents pay $5.20 a month for water, and the waterworks board would still set the price if it decided to buy water in bulk from the city.

The city water rate is $3.40 a month.

'Fastened Seat Belt And Began to Pray'

PORT ARTHUR, Ont. (CP) — "I had to decide whether to wait for help or fly myself out. I prayed and fastened my safety belt."

And with pain and prayer as his only companions, his right arm severed just below the shoulder, Brian Steed started his float plane on a 15-mile race against death.

The 28-year-old flying-missionary-turned-bush-pilot told his story, sitting up in his bed in Port Arthur General Hospital where he was admitted last Saturday after an ordeal that began on a lonely northwestern Ontario lake.

Steed, on a fuel-oil shuttle to Green Water Lake for the International Nickel Co., made a pontoon landing on an unnamed lake close by to scout the shoreline for Inco.

SLIPPED ON PONTOON

As he stepped on the pontoon, he slipped into the path of the still-whirling propeller of his single-engined Beaver.

"The plane prop hit my forehead and arm and I came to when I hit the water. I surfaced and the plane's pontoon was going by me and I knew I had to grab it.

"I said a silent prayer and tried four times to haul myself on to the pontoon before I realized my right arm was gone and I was bleeding profusely.

"I crawled into the cockpit and the arteries in my arm were spraying blood all over the interior. My arm was cut off just below the shoulder and I knew I had to stop the blood flow or I could black out and bleed to death.

"I tried three or four times to wrap a rope around the stump but it kept slipping off. I just prayed for God's help.

"I finally tied the rope around the stump, leaning my head toward my right shoulder and wrapped the rope several times around my neck. I pulled my head back and this was the pressure for the tourniquet.

STEED
. . . race against death

"The flow of blood was cut by the tourniquet, I had to decide whether to wait for help or fly out myself. I prayed and fastened my safety belt.

"I suddenly realized again I was without my right arm when I instinctively tried to fasten my safety belt. I fumbled around but got it buckled and started to work the throttle and control with my left hand."

FINALLY STARTED AWAY

Fighting nausea, Steed taxied to the end of the small lake for an attempted takeoff.

"I made an extra pre-flight check and let her go and up I went. It all happened in a matter of 15 or 20 minutes. I flew the 15 miles from Green Water Lake nearby and just watched myself for signs of a blackout."

Steed's destination was Lake Shebandowan, where his Austin Airways employers maintain a base, and he landed there safely about 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

The Shebandowan base had no advance warning of his arrival.

"We didn't know he was coming, he just came in," said Bob Gauthier, an Inco engineer who has a private pilot's licence.

NO EXPERIENCE

It was Gauthier, though he had no previous pontoon experience, who flew Steed and the Beaver the remaining 60 miles to the Lakehead and medical aid.

As the former flying missionary for the Penticostal Assemblies Church of Canada told of his flight for survival, his mother, father and wife Nora fought back tears.

Mrs. Steed was at home in South Porcupine, Ont., and his parents were in Fort Erie, Ont., when they learned of the accident. The parents drove to Port Arthur, picking up Mrs. Steed on the way.

The Steeds have two children: Evan, 3, and Maureen, whose first birthday was Saturday.

"My career as a commercial pilot is over but I got this far and with the grace of God I'll make out," said Steed. "You couldn't go far wrong if you said it was a miracle."

One advantage going for him is that he is naturally left-handed.

HISTORY BOOK 'SAVAGES' OUT OF FAVOR

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Chretien told a group of Indian mothers Wednesday night he has written to the 10 provincial ministers of education asking them to change "unfortunate references" to Indians in history books.

Mr. Chretien was replying to a question from one mother who criticized school textbooks for calling Indians savages.

He said French Canadians also got rough treatment in some history books and he sympathized with the mother's complaint.

"I have written to all of the education ministers, telling them the unfortunate references to Indians should be corrected," the minister said.

'Little Crime' At Uvic

Advocates of law and order will be relieved to hear the crime rate at the University of Victoria is minimal compared to other universities.

"Because of the university's location, and the students' social background we get very little crime on campus," said traffic and control supervisor Tom O'Connor.

"Other universities, and we keep in touch with them, have some serious problems, but at Uvic it's all pretty quiet."

Biggest theft last year was $130 taken from an Alma Mater Society cashbox. And $19 was stolen from the Uvic Radio Society.

There was a wave of thefts from a campus motorcycle parking lot. Twelve helmets were lifted from parked machines before security patrol surveillance put an end to it.

There was also an outburst of wallet thefts from the gymnasium locker rooms and the field-house, until the security men began to keep an eye on the area.

The traffic control office recorded 18 on-campus traffic accidents between January and December of 1967, but there were only four cases of stolen tail-light assemblies and hub-caps.

There have been no reports of assault or violence, Mr. O'Connor said.

Must Skirts Cover Girl's Body? Controversy Rages in U.S. Schools

By HAL COOPER

NEW YORK (AP) — The annual fracas between school officials and students over classroom attire raged across the United States today, spiced by glimpses of stocking tops, panties and even navels.

Each of the embattled sides, a spot survey disclosed, had won some, lost some, and the ultimate outcome might fairly be described as uncertain.

There was hot and generally unresolved controversy over a number of burning questions:

—At what point do a girl's culottes become so brief that they are, so to speak, more like sans-culottes?

—Is a T-shirt underwear or outerwear?

—Where is the torrid zone on mini-skirts?

—Should a girl wear a Nehru jacket with nothing underneath but panties?

—What is a reasonable length for male sideburns?

BUGGED BY BEADS

School principals from coast to coast were bugged by love beads, and rode off in several directions. Some insisted that the wearing of love beads by males would not do. Others held that love beads, if worn, must be tucked inside shirts. Others said go ahead wear 'em any old way.

Culottes, a sort of split skirt, were taboo last year in Chicago's Morgan Park high school. This term they are permissible if they extend to within two inches of the knee.

At Hollywood, Calif., High, culottes must be full enough to look like unsplit skirts, and three inches up is the limit.

On T-shirts, the official rule at Mandan, N.D., High School is: "They're underwear and not proper school apparel."

But at Radford high school, near Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, approval as long as they do not bear words or pictures.

SKIRT LIMITS VARY

Officially fixed mini-skirt lengths range from two inches above the knee in Jefferson Parish, La., to four inches in Glendale, Calif. But there are other less specific views.

The Westport, Conn., school board ruled simply that skirts must cover the girls' "undergarments and their torsos."

The Phoenix, Ariz., high school system ran into Nehru jacket trouble and had to put its foot down.

Explained Mick Heraog, the system's community relations director: "The girls were wearing them with nothing but panties on underneath, which turned everybody on.

"The boys came to school with short Nehru jackets, no undershirts and open at the midriff, allowing their navels to show."

Some rulings on sideburns:

Glendale, Calif.: No lower than the tip of the ear.

Hollywood, Calif.: Must end at midear.

Pasadena, Calif.: Down to the bottom of the ear.

Astoria, Ore.: Not allowed.

$100,000 Grant For Research

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff Reporter

VANCOUVER — School trustees in B.C. will continue to support research projects in education but only on a partnership basis.

They voted a provisional $100,000 grant at their annual meeting here Wednesday to the Educational Research Institute of B.C., an organization they founded two years ago.

It is the third annual $100,000 grant but this time the money is to be allocated to projects only where a matching amount has been donated by another source or sources.

A total budget of $414,000 for 1969 was approved on the final day of the 64th annual convention here. The funds come from school boards, on a sliding scale, depending on the size of their district.

Of this $25,000 will go to support a new teacher qualification council being set up jointly by the B.C. School Trustees Association and the B.C. Teachers Federation and made necessary when the provincial government withdrew from teacher evaluation this year.

The budget allocates $10,000 for hiring a specialist who will assist school boards in introducing new teaching methods.

Another $10,000 was approved for a survey of methods used to determine teacher salaries. This was proposed in a late resolution put forward by the Greater Victoria school board.

Province Rolls Out Red Carpet

Seventy travel agents and travel writers were arriving in Victoria today from the United Kingdom and Europe.

The visit is a joint promotion by the B.C. government and Air Canada to show overseas agents that British Columbia is an attractive travel spot.

The visiting group includes 20 of France's leading tourist promoters.

They will travel by bus to Vancouver Saturday and drive up the Fraser Canyon for an overnight stop at Kamloops. They will return Thanksgiving day by way of the Okanagan Valley and the southern trans-provincial highway to Vancouver.

John Buckley, assistant executive director with the Department of Travel Industry and Harry Harrod, a travel representative will accompany the visiting agents.

Youth Injured In Spectacular Car Crash

Two teenagers walked away without injury Wednesday after their car sheared off a telephone pole, rolled over into a 20-foot ditch and was demolished.

A third youth Robert Coste, 17, of 2209 Happy Valley was released from St. Joseph's Hospital after treatment.

Colwood RCMP said the accident happened on the Sooke Road, at a curve near the Dewdney Flats. The car was eastbound and was driven by a 16-year-old juvenile. Police said it apparently went out of control while rounding a corner.

'Honest Mediocrity' Plagues Quebecers

QUEBEC (CP) — Claude Ryan, publisher of the Montreal French-language newspaper Le Devoir, said Wednesday that "French-Canadians maintain an honest mediocrity which often prevents them from assuming management posts, especially in business."

Mr. Ryan was speaking at a conference of the Petit Seminaire de Quebec which is celebrating its 300th anniversary.

The newspaper publisher told the conference that in working out their future, French-Canadians must remain conscious that they are not as rich as their neighbors.

If they do not remember this, he said, "they risk suicide or assimilation."

AWARE OF WEAKNESS

Mr. Ryan said that for the last two years, the rest of Canada has not been worried about separatism because it is aware of the economic frailty of Quebec.

He said the quality of the Quebec government could be improved, but it would require a change in the whole of Quebec society.

The present Quebec government had too many adventurers and second-rate personalities but this could be changed only if Quebec society accepted the idea that government officials perform important and worthy work. Society had to place its best elements in government posts.

On the Quebec language issue, Mr. Ryan criticized supporters of unilingualism for not investing the same amount of research in economic considerations as they have placed in linguistic considerations.

He said French-Canadians must not forget economics.

"We need English-speaking persons in the (economic) domain and they need us, but a good number of English-language enterprises nevertheless have no need to negotiate with us to carry on."

Blood Clinic Will Meet City Objective

The 400 pint ojective set by Red Cross officials for the three day blood donors clinic will be easily met, supervisor A. T. Lashmar said this morning.

"By last night we had collected 364 pints", he said. "The way things have started out this morning we'll be over the 400 pint objective soon."

The clinic opened at Red Cross House Tuesday and 215 pints were collected that day.

Wednesday afternoon the clinic moved to William Head prison where 54 pints were given. Wednesday evening an additional 95 pints were collected at the Fort Street headquarters, bringing the total to 364 pints.

HER FORTUNE IS BETTER

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Police are searching for an amateur door-to-door fortune teller who had the odds in her favor.

The woman knocked on the door of an unidentified 71-year-old man, asked directions then told him: "You are about to make a big discovery in the near future."

When she left he found his wallet missing.

Working Evangelist, Mrs. Hansen, Dies

She repaired old Bibles and sent them wherever they were most needed.

Mrs. Eunice Hansen, who died in St. Joseph's Hospital Tuesday at the age of 71, rescued more than 1,800 dilapidated Bibles from the scrap heap.

She also made new clothes from old.

"Mother would take a full-length evening gown, long discarded, and make three children's dresses out of it," Mrs. Hansen's daughter, Mrs. Don (Ruth) Rusman, said today.

"She worked quietly on her own, without help from any church or organization. Her repaired Bibles were sent to prisons all over Canada and the United States.

"She gave many to the Salvation Army and the clothes she made out of old garments were sent to needy people at home and abroad.

"Mother was a working evangelist rather than a preaching evangelist."

Born at Wetaskiwin, Alta., Mrs. Hansen lived at Enderby, B.C., before coming to Victoria 20 years ago.

Besides her daughter and a grandson, Stuart, at 765 Beaver Lake Road, she is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Mabel Gill and Mrs. Alice Garner at Kelowna, B.C., and a brother, Maurice Jensen, Port Mann, B.C.

Pastor Clifford Fawcett of North Douglas Pentecostal Church will conduct funeral services at Sands Mortuary Friday at 3:15 p.m.

Interment will follow in Hatley Memorial Gardens.

Spur Line Approved For Sulphur Plants

OTTAWA (CP) — The senate gave first reading Wednesday to a bill authorizing the CNR to build a $12 million spur line in northwestern Alberta to two sulphur recovery plants. The bill was given final approval in the Commons earlier in the day.

Senator A. W. Roebuck (L-Ontario) objected to an amendment approved by the committee earlier in in the day that would restrict applications to the Supreme Court of Canada for writs of habeas corpus.

Such writs require imprisoned persons to be brought before a judge or into court.

Under legislation, the high court would only deal with habeas corpus applications when they are on appeal from provincial courts.

Senator Roebuck said the bill would tighten restrictions on the court for no particular reason except for the court's convenience. This was not a good principle.

Students Have 'Left-Out' Feeling

A feeling of being left out and having no power in making decisions lies at the root of social problems today, a psychiatrist working with emotionally disturbed children said Wednesday night.

Students drop out of school because they feel they have no influence on decisions which affect them Dr. Charles Gregory said.

Head of the Island Centre, he was addressing an audience of about 150 persons in the hall of Christ Church Cathedral on the school drop-out phenomenon.

Students are trying to say they are "fed up to the back teeth" with being ordered around with no say in decisions. The dropouts are examples of those who feel they are powerless to do anything about what affects them.

"I'm inclined to think there's no such thing as a dropout, when it comes to school. I think there are force-outs, and there are spin-outs who get nothing but confused at school.

"Kids leave school because there's a reason, or else they leave because they're confused and bewildered," Dr. Gregory said.

"I feel this is at the root of our social evils today — that the individual in society feels he has no part in it and no influence over it," he said.

Students in high schools believe they have no say in what affects them. Those in universities felt the same way until recently, he said.

Large institutions make the major decisions and the individual has little control. Worse still, he feels he has no control.

Teachers have always given information out but are only starting to listen to the students, Dr. Gregory said.

Insurance Firms Silent On Revolutionary Plan

Court Cases Would Be Cut

The private insurance industry in B.C. today reacted to the proposals for radical changes in the Wootton Royal Commission on Automibile Insurance report with watchful silence planned in advance.

Several spokesmen for various insurance associations who had presented the bulk of submissions to the inquiry, and also individual insurance company managers and agents who were contacted, all declined comment on the same ground: They need time to read and consider the report's ramifications.

But there was immediate reaction from other quarters both praising and condemning the report and also revealing an unexpected bonus "spin-off" benefit that would follow implementation of the "no-fault" driver self-insurance proposal.

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen hailed the report as a major breakthrough in rationalizing compensation protection and giving hope that bad drivers would be ruled off the road more systematically to reduce the accident rate.

But T. O. Griffiths, president of the B.C. Trial Lawyers Association which made a strong plea for more legal recourse for traffic victims, said the commission was so "preoccupied with social theory" that it had recommended a "terribly retrograde step toward anarchy" through abolition of lawsuits over traffic accidents.

New Democratic Party Leader Robert Strachan condemned the commission for not recommending that the government enter the insurance field directly instead of compelling motorists to buy some insurance from private companies.

But NDP deputy leader Alex Macdonald, who presented a brief to the commission, said at least the party had won "half a Victory" with acceptance of its argument that compensation only should be the insurance principle.

Attention Centres on Industry

Victoria Bar Association vice-president Kenneth Murphy revealed the "spin-off" impact of eliminating car accident lawsuits from court calendars.

He said the proposal would cut down the present load on the court system by 25 to 33 per cent and therefore should speed up the system for other types of litigants who sometimes have to wait long periods before coming to trial.

Attention, however, centred on the silence of the private insurance industry which, collectively, was reported to have spent $500,000 in preparing and delivering the bulk of the 100 volumes of briefs and testimony collected by the commission.

"It would be premature to comment on the 800-page report in full or in part until a thorough study has been completed," a press release issued by a public relations firm quoted the industry's leading spokesman in the province, Ken Malthouse, representing both the Insurance Bureau of Canada and All-Canada Insurance Federation.

'Spokesman Is a PR Firm'

Other spokesmen for insurance associations and even individual company managers and agents contracted for comment gave the same response.

George Turner, of the Canadian Underwriters Association, revealed that "I haven't seen the report yet but in any case I cannot comment on it because the spokesman for all of us is John Usher (a Vancouver public relations man who issued the Malthouse release).

"He is to make all comment for all of us and I am not really authorized to make any comment or I could get my knuckles rapped."

Justin Harbord, Victoria insurance agent with a reputation for being outspoken who also presented a brief to the commission on behalf of the Insurance Agent Association, also declined any comment.

The association's president, Robert Spray in Vancouver, told The Times that it had been agreed in advance that all comment would be withheld, at least until the Oct. 21 meeting of directors in Nanaimo.

A spokesman for the Independent Insurance Conference, in Vancouver, also told The Times "you can't expect any comment from us."

TIME TO ADJUST

Mayor Hugh Stephen termed the commissioners' recommendations "a radical new concept, a revolution in thinking to which one will require time to adjust."

Mayor Stephen declined comment on premium costs "be-

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS are barred from classes by university students who seized Groulx College near Montreal Wednesday and closed it down. The students from a nearby high school use campus facilities for some of their classes but now have nowhere to go. (CP Wirephoto.)

Four Colleges Seized By Quebec Students

STE. THERESE DE BLAINVILLE, Que. (CP) — Student occupation of junior colleges spread to four Quebec campuses Wednesday night as opposition to the province's education system grew.

Begun with the take-over here Tuesday of Lionel Groulx College, there were fears student occupation would soon include Quebec's 21 other junior colleges.

Meanwhile, Louis Falardeau, secretary-general of the Union Generale des Etudiants du Quebec, said an emergency meeting of UGEQ will be held tonight in Montreal to determine the extent of the union's support for the Lionel Groulx take-over.

His announcement was made before junior colleges came under student occupation at Quebec City's suburban Ste. Foy, at Chicoutimi 125 miles north of Quebec City and St. Jerome 45 miles north of Montreal.

Mr. Falardeau said:

"We plan to propose to representatives of the 25 Cegeps—Colleges d'Enseignement General et Professionel (post-secondary colleges)—that they not attend classes next Tuesday and that they sit in on study sessions instead."

The "study sessions" could lead to a decision by the student executive to occupy all of Quebec's post-secondary schools.

Lionel Groulx students said they decided to barricade themselves inside the school 20 miles north of Montreal to draw attention to the need for reforms in Quebec's education system.

The demands include:

—Immediate government action to set up a long-promised second French-language university in Montreal.

—Reversal of a government decision to reduce the amount of money available for student scholarships by $3,300,000 this year.

—Reversal of a government decision to increase the annual interest rate on student loans to 7½ per cent from 3½.

—A study of the education system in general.

Wilson, Smith Talks Affable but 'Tough'

GIBRALTAR (AP) — Prime ministers Harold Wilson of Britain and Ian Smith of rebel Rhodesia opened today a last-ditch effort to solve the three-year-old impasse between them in a 2½-hour meeting that aides described as "tough going for both sides."

The aides made it clear the language used was "perfectly affable" but the session was tough in terms of uncompromising stands on key issues.

These sources said there was "clear disagreement" at the opening session of the negotiations aboard HMS Fearless in Gibraltar harbor.

The sources refused to comment on the substance of the opening talks or say which issues were discussed.

However, the two leaders set out uncompromising stands Wednesday on Britain's demand for "unimpeded progress" toward majority rule for Rhodesia.

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Avery Brundage, 81-year-old American apostle of amateurism in sports, won re-election today as president of the International Olympic Committee, defeating Count Jean Beaumont of France, the only other candidate for the prestigious post. (See earlier story page 14.)

'Breach of Security'

BRUSSELS (AP) — A Turk working for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Belgium has been turned over to Turkish authorities because of "serious breaches of security." It was announced today. NATO authorities declined to give any further information.

Peace Plan Vetoed

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad today rejected Israel's latest Mid-East peace plan and said Israel could not continue its "policy of aggression" without American political and materiel support.

BONN (AP)—Defence chiefs of seven North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries began secret two-day consultations today on the role of nuclear weapons in the defence of the West.

B.C. Gets $56 Million From U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States handed over a cheque for almost $56,000,000 in Canadian funds today as payment to British Columbia for flood control for the next 50 years from a Columbia River dam.

The $55,909,812.50 will be used by the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority for construction projects.

Canadian Ambassador A. E. Ritchie accepted the cheque in a state department ceremony and an aide then popped it in his wallet for depositing with the U.S. treasury department.

The money will be transferred to Victoria via the Federal Reserve Bank in New York.

"This is going to be the most man-handled cheque of all time," said George Springsteen, deputy assistant state secretary who presented it to Ritchie.

"I just want to touch it," said a secretary.

The payment is the bulk of the $64,000,000 pledged by the U.S. under the Columbia River treaty for flood-control benefits produced in the U.S. by three B.C. dams taming the unruly river.

Duncan Lake, the smallest, has been completed. Today, Arrow Lake dam became fully operational, months ahead of schedule.

The Arrow Lake dam was one of the most controversial projects as far as Canadian opposition to the treaty was concerned.

A third dam, and the largest, at Mica Creek, is to be completed in early 1973.

The U.S. in October, 1964, made a lump-sum payment of $275,000,000 to B.C. for the extra power the Canadian storage allows to be generated on the American leg of the Columbia.

The Canadian government estimated when the agreement finally cleared Parliament in 1964 that total costs to Canada and B.C. for the three dams would be $448,000,000 and that U.S. payments "would have a total value to Canada of $501,000,000 by 1973."

That figure, providing at that time for a B.C. profit of $53,000,000, took account of interest on the U.S. payments.

'Complete Color Ban'

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Rightwing firebrand Enoch Powell today demanded a total ban on colored immigration to Britain before "the character of this country is changed beyond recognition."

Bobby Hull Quits; Sought $100,000

TORONTO (CP) — Superstar Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks announced today he is retiring from the National Hockey League. The announcement was made in a brief statement issued by Bobby Hull Enterprises Ltd. of Toronto.

The statement said:

"Today I wish to announce my retirement from Chicago Black Hawks. It is with a great deal of regret and much sadness that I face the fact that my contribution to the Black Hawks and hockey is a matter of dispute.

"Therefore, under the circumstances I have no alternative other than to wish my team good luck and say good-bye to the game."

The announcement followed weeks of contract dispute between Hull, perennial goal-scoring champion in the league and the game's biggest star, and the Hawks.

Hull was reported to have been seeking a three-year contract at $100,000 a year. His team-mate, centre Stan Mikita, was also reported to be seeking a six-figure contract.

Biafran Civilians Massacred by Advancing Nigerian Troops

By CHARLES TAYLOR
Special to The Times

UMUAHIA, Biafra — Nigerian soldiers have massacred more than 500 Biafran civilians in the town of Urua Inyang on the southern war front, according to witnesses I interviewed here.

Women and children were among the victims when the Nigerians opened fire with mortars and machine-guns on the town market place and refugee camps last Friday. Thousands of civilians fled the town in terror and are hiding in the bush.

There is still fighting in Urua Inyang, 36 miles south of Umuahia, so it was not possible to visit the scene of the massacre, which was reported by the Biafrans.

But the witnesses were interviewed in English, in different places and without advance warning. Their report tallies with the others and there is no reason to doubt their truth. On the outskirts of Umuahia, I interviewed John Akpaiibok, a 30-year-old secondary school teacher who brought the first news of the raid to the capital.

On Friday morning, he was attending a Red Cross meeting in Urua Inyang when he heard the sound of gunfire. "The noise became louder and when it was unbearable, I rushed out of the hall," Mr. Akpaiibok said.

"I saw three tall Nigerian soldiers walking down the street and spraying bullets in all directions. Behind them was a land-rover with more Nigerian soldiers and a heavy machine-gun. It was moving very slowly and the machine-gun was also spraying bullets on both sides of the streets.

"Then a lot of refugees rushed out of their camp. A lot of them were hit by the bullets.

"I escaped by running to my house and jumping through the back window. Then I passed through the market square. It was a market day and everywhere I looked I saw dead bodies and blood. I saw mortar shells falling on the people and I saw the same land-rover machine-gunning people in the market. Then I dashed into the bush and managed to get to safety."

There were no Biafran soldiers in the town at the time of the Nigerian attack, according to Mr. Akpaiibok and all other eyewitnesses. The nearest Biafran troops were at the front, four miles away, and the Nigerians outflanked them to enter the town.

"Nobody stopped to count the bodies," said A. E. Bassey, the administrator of Annang province in which the town is situated. "But after piecing together all the reports, we're sure that many more than 500 people were killed, and hundreds more were wounded." Urua Inyang has a normal population of about 9,000. There were also about 8,000 refugees in three camps.

Most of the townspeople are members of a minority tribe, the Annangs (Mr. Bassey is also in Annang). Most of the refugees were Annangs, Ibibios, Efiks, and Ogonis. There were a only a few Ibos—the leading Biafran tribe.

According to Lagos, the federal Nigerian troops are fighting the war partly in order to liberate the minority tribes from domination by the Ibos.

To confirm these reports, I drove across country to the Ikot Umo Essien area, about 11 miles from Urua Inyang. At a crude refugee camp in the bush, I found other survivors of the massacre.

They all told the same story—a sudden mortar attack on the market place and the refugee camps, the Land-Rover with the machine gun, and the Nigerian soldiers spraying bullets at the civilians.

"I was in the market place with my bicycle when the shooting started," said Pius John Inokotong, 38, a former chairman of the northern Annang county council. "People were running all over the place—running in terror," he added.

PEOPLE FALLING

"I saw Nigerian soldiers in their steel helmets sitting in the Land-Rover and shooting into the crowd. People were falling on every side. "I ran away into the bush. I had my wife and six children in the town and I don't know where they are."

According to E. E. Ekanem, a 52-year-old school teacher, the market place was filled with women doing their shopping when the shooting began. "Suddenly there were explosions everywhere. I saw people die from the mortar sheels and the bullets. It was horrible."

At the start of the attack, John Eyara, a worker with Caritas, the Roman Catholic relief agency, was standing with Rev. Eugene Bree, from Ireland, the parish priest.

Mr. Eyara started to flee on his bicycle, but was knocked down by the explosion of the mortar shell.

Mr. Eyara never saw Father Bree again. But a friend later

AT TORONTO Inco fell 1⅞ to 41⅝, Falconbridge 1 to 98, Seagrams 1 to 46⅝, MacMillan Bloedel ⅜ to 25, Bank of Montreal ⅜ to 24½ and Bartaco ⅜ to 17⅝.

Ford of Canada was up 13½ to 272½, General Developments 1⅜ to 25, Canadian Tire A 1⅛ to 57 and Carrier Shoe 1⅛ to 12.

Bethlehem Copper gained 1 to 14¼, Bankeno 50 cents to $5.30 and Kerr Addison ⅛ to 19½. Pine Point lost ⅝ to 44½ and Northgate ⅜ to 16⅝.

AT VANCOUVER Coast Silver was strong and gained .30 to $3.20 on 129,000 shares. Lornex put on .20 to $9.30 and Athas rose .15 to $2.65.

However, Dynasty was off .50 to $10.25, Brenda was down a similar amount to $11.75 and Silver Standard dropped .17 to $1.55.

In the industrials, Trans-Canada Mortgage rose .25 to $2.75, but EDP was .62 lower at $22.37.

AT NEW YORK losses outnumbered gains by some 200 issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average was off about 5 points.

Pent-up demand from the Wednesday closing boosted volume as usual.

Turnover also was swelled by a parade of big blocks, among them 379,000 shares of Great Western Financial, off 2¼ at 23. Earlier it traded on a 77,000-share block at 25.

Ingersoll-Rand rose about 2, and Torrington gained more than 3, after a report they planed to merge.

In Canadians, Canadian Pacific gained 1⅛, McIntyre Porcupine ½ and Massey ¼. Distilers Seagrams lost 1½, Dome ⅞, Granby ⅜, Hudson Bay ½, Walker Gooderham 1, Inco 1⅞ and Alcan ⅛.

AT MONTREAL Inco led industrial losses with a fall of 2 to 41⅝. Dominion Bridge retreated ⅞ to 16⅝ and Famous Players ½ to 66.

Canada Steamship Lines climbed ½ to 31⅜. CP Rails ? to 69⅝ but Quebec Telephone slid ¼ to 12?.

Distillers Seagrams lost 1¼ to 46½.

B.C. Oil fell ¼ to 47¼ on a small turnover in senior oils.

Louanna led volume trading on the Canadian Stock Exchange with a gain of ½ cent to 25 cents on a turnover of 258,500 shares.

AT LONDON stock markets were dull today, but scattered firm features arose from company news of bids. Gilts drifted lower on lack of support.

With Wall Street Closed Wednesday, dollar stocks were quiet, and small rises by Ford and Woolworts were the only noteworthy movements.

Canadians made a mixed showing with Cominco, Imperial Oil and Dome $2 to $3 off, but Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas rose 1½ to 103½. Hiram Walker, Inco and Algoma were others to improve.

Royal Bank of Canada, Canadian Imperial and Nova Scotia lost but Bank of Montreal moved against the trend.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices fell below Wednesday's close amid slight export interest today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Light local and commission house selling in oilseeds met small down-scale buying. Flax trading included some inter-month spreading.

Rapeseed offerings were generally scattered and commission houses bought on the scale down.

Trading in rye was light with inter-month spreading. Oats and barley met a routine domestic shipper trade.

Japan had passed up offers of Canadian wheat in their weekly tender and bought two cargoes of U.S. wheat and one cargo of Australian barley at prices apparently below Canadian.

Tobacco Sales Drop Blamed on Taxes

OTTAWA (CP) — Soaring tax rates on tobacco this year are being blamed by the tobacco industry for a drop of three to four per cent in sales volume.

Last Dec. 1 the federal government increased its excise taxes on all tobacco by 10 per cent.

Since Jan. 1 provincial rates have gone up in Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Quebec, Ontario and Saskatchewan. The cigarette tax alone has been increased by as much as 300 per cent and by no less than 66 per cent in these provinces.

Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd. Wednesday reported net income of $4,070,000 or $2.54 a share in the 12 months ended June 30, compared with $3,763,000 or $2.35 in the previous year.

But it said its own unit sales were down 1.5 per cent and industry sales off 3.3 per cent in the same period.

SALES MAY BE OFF

Later figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, incorporating inventory changes, suggest that in the first eight months of the year industry sales may be off as much as 4.1 per cent from the same period of 1967.

No comprehensive survey is available to determine whether price is the big factor in these decisions to cut down or stop smoking.

But the retail price changes are substantial and well-detailed.

Last December's federal increase, for example, added 2½ cents to the cost of a pack of 25 cigarettes.

Here are some typical changes for the 25-cigarette pack in major cities between November, 1967 and August, 1968:

St. John's, Nfld.—To 72 cents from 58 cents. Newfoundland's provincial tobacco tax doubled to 12½ cents a pack on April 1.

Montreal—To 61 cents from 54. Quebec's tax increased 66 per cent to 10 cents a pack on March 28.

Toronto—To 59 cents from 50. Ontario tripled its provincial tax to 7½ cents a pack on March 13.

Saskatoon—To 60 cents from 54. Saskatchewan increased its tax to 8¼ cents a pack on March 1.

Prices tended to be lower in August in provinces that did not increase taxes this year: Halifax 55 cents; Saint John, N.B., 58; Winnipeg 61; Calgary and Edmonton 52; Vancouver 54.

'New Type' Of Realtors

—Dennis Stewart, 44, newly-elected president of the Canadian Association of Real Estate Association of Real Estate Boards, says the real estate industry is "trying to create a new type of real estate man."

"He (the real estate broker) has to play a much greater part in the larger financial picture than ever before, occupying a more vital role in the business world," Mr. Stewart said Wednesday after he was elected to head the 22,000-member association. (See story on page 20.)

"He has a responsibility to the country to play this larger role because the wealth of the nation is founded on real estate and what is under it."

Mr. Stewart was elected president at the association's annual convention here. Te succeeds Ronald Sanderson of Oakville, Ont., in 1969.

Automobile Sales Climb Sharply

OTTAWA (CP) — Sales of new passenger cars and commercial vehicles in August totalled 65,138 with a retail value of $224,028 million, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The figures compared with sales of 55,704 vehicles with a retail value of $190,084 million in August last year.

Sales of all vehicles in the first eight months of 1968 totalled 588,188 with a retail value of $2,085,311,000, up 4.7 per cent in volume and 7.2 per cent in value from the same period last year.

Cement Plant Study

The Power-Gas Corp. of America has received a contract from United Gypsum Corp., Ltd., a subsidiary of Alsope Consolidated Ltd. of Vancouver and Passaic, N.J., for the preparation of a feasibility study for a plant to produce sulfuric acid and cement from gypsum and anhydrite.

Location of the proposed plant is Skookumchuck, B.C., where United Gypsum has large reserves of gypsum and anhydrite.

Swedes Drop Rate

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — The Swedish bank rate will be lowered Friday by one-half per cent to five per cent, it was announced today.

The rate was pared to 5½ per cent Feb. 9 from six per cent.

Canadian Exports Soar

OTTAWA (CP) — Exports totalled $1,128,100,000 last month, one third more than in September last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The continued strong export movement brought the total for the first nine months of 1968 to $9,882,200,000, up 18.4 per cent from last year.

September exports to the United States showed a 26-per-cent increase to $718.7 million from $570.3 million September last year. Exports for the first nine months of this year were 25.7-per-cent higher at $6,628,700,000.

Machine Chews Logs in Bush

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A new machine that reduces pulp logs to chips before they leave the bush is under trial by a Prince George pulp mill.

Initial testing has been successful, and an extended trial is planned by Northwood Pulp Ltd.

Advantages could include cleaner logging, more chips from a given area of trees and cheaper transport of pulpwood to mill.

The American-made $120,000 "Chiparvester" can be moved by tractor to any tree-falling operation and can be operated by one man. It can produce up to four railcars of chips in eight hours.

Pulp logs are dumped onto hydraulic forks, and then fed into a conveyor belt. Within seconds, the logs are chomped into chips and spewed from a spout into vans.

While I was still staring bleakly at my first mug of office coffee this morning, a zealot called to suggest that I should look into health food.

"Most people don't eat the right foods," she said. "They should be taught to choose what's good for them."

Perhaps we would all become better, kinder and slimmer people on a diet of turnip croquettes and loaves baked from hand-bashed barley.

But that's not the point, any more than the purpose of this Tuesday - through - Saturday ramble is to teach you "What you should be taught."

Further — and believe me, it took a long time for this realization to sink home — I can get along handsomely without the unsolicited services of the self-appointed teacher.

Mind, I am not knocking health food. Far from it! It's just that I believe with increasing fervency in man's right to make his own mistakes.

This up to a point: We should not hurt others in the process, and it is a duty imposed on us by our common humanity to save each other from lethal error when we can. It is right that a child be taught the folly of assuming that all clear liquids are water. The container could hold naptha, or vodka.

★

My spleen is reserved for those who insist that we be taught in areas where ignorance is of no great consequence, or where the insistence on teaching can do more harm than the error itself.

When we bought a boat trailer, I hadn't the foggiest notion of how to back the thing. So I set out to teach myself the knack, in the home driveway.

I got along reasonably well, and after a few bouts of practice, could wiggle along in reverse without jack-knifing, beating up the salvia bed, or intruding on the lawn.

Then one morning, we set out to try an actual launching on a boat ramp. We had the concrete apron to ourselves, the boat-laden trailer was behaving nicely, when a "This Guy has to be Taught" type appeared out of nowhere.

He stuck his head into the car—I had rolled the window down for a fast exit if need be—and hollered in my ear, "Hey, you're doing this all wrong! Better pull out and try it again."

What with his "Hold the wheel here and here," his "No, no, don't keep looking back" and his shouts of "Watch it, watch it!" I came within an ace of dunking us in Oak Bay.

He didn't teach me a thing. What he did do was drain my shallow self-confidence so thoroughly that it took another session of driveway backing to restore it.

★

About the time that "togetherness" was blooming in the women's magazines, it seemed that every medical authority who could scribble more than a prescription felt impelled to teach the arts of wedded love. This he or she attempted in a book: the plain brown wrapper never had it so good.

The spate has dwindled now, and perhaps that's just as well. The instructions offered were dismayingly acrobatic, and one essential ingredient of wedlock was nowhere to be found in the copy that I browsed through. This is humor.

Those books may well have ruined more marriages than they nourished.

The self-sparking teacher, the person who cannot rest until he has taught some happy blunderer how to do it right, turns up in every bracket and department of life.

He will not let be, he is a petty tyrant, and as a swarm of niggling two-bit municipal regulations attest, he is well on his way toward ruling our lives.

The woman who believes you should be taught to eat health foods means well, and I hope she enjoys her bowl of blah and her dish of parsnip patties. But may the same be forced down this protesting throat if I ever decide that you must learn anything from me!

CLASSROOM CROWDING at Claremont Secondary School in Saanich means students must jam into lunchroom (above) to work. Three classes use lunchroom almost full time in the space squeeze. Principal J. W. Lott predicts school enrolment will climb from 698 this year to 964 by September of 1973. Saanich ratepayers vote October 19 on school district building referendum which would give Claremont two extra permanent and six portable classrooms. Trustees report all 18 schools in the district require additions or renovations. (Times photo.)

2 Radar Men Not on Watch When Ship Hit

By JOHN SLINGER

The operations officer of HMCS Saskatchewan testified today that the ship did not have a complete "blind pilotage team" in the operations room when the ship struck a rock September 8.

He was testifying at a court martial of the captain of the destroyer, which grounded in a fog in Active Pass.

Lieut. Bran Oudshoorn said the two officers who normally carried out radar fixes to determine the ship's forward progress had been assigned other duties.

He said he had made no report to Commander Norman S. Jackson, the captain, because he thought it was "obvious the men were not in the operations room. Commander Jackson is being tried on three charges of negligence.

Lieut. Oudshoorn told the five-member court headed by Capt. Frederick C. Frewer, CFB Esquimalt commander, that Mrs. Oudshoorn and another guest were in the operations room watching at the time of the incident.

14-18 KNOTS

As the court martial entered its second day, Cmdr. J. L. Henderson of Ottawa cross-examined the ship's navigator, Lieut. Robert G. Howden, who had testified the destroyer-escort was making 14 to 18 knots in unexpected fog at the entrance to the pass.

"I felt perfectly confident of navigating Active Pass visibly."

But, said the navigator, "a dense and wet" fog hung over the entrance shoals and "I doubt whether I would have transited Active Pass at that speed."

In preparing for the trip to Esquimalt to Vancouver and back he said the captain had asked for an alternate route to Active Pass in case of bad weather. If there was fog "he had no intention of going through Active Pass."

Lieut. Howden, who said the captain had offered to give assistance whenever the navigator ran into difficulty, testified that the question of going blind through Active Pass had not arisen.

If the weather is bad "one normally doesn't go through."

OFF COURSE

Lieut. Oudshoorn testified that the tide running against the Saskatchewan at the entrance to the pass was 4.2 knots.

After making initial entry he noticed the ship was 100 yards to port (left) of the planned course.

He progressively recommended three course changes but the ship was 600 yards off course when she "struck a rock."

He said just prior to the incident he had sent a petty officer to the bridge to get Mrs. Oudshoorn and bring her to the operations room so she "could see what was going on there." He testified there had been "no conversation" with the guest in the room.

Under examination by prosecutor Maj. D. H. Ward, of Winnipeg, Lieut. Howden related how the Saskatchewan had left Vancouver on a prepared course based on a weather report that did not mention fog possibilities.

Leading sister-ship Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan steamed into the Pass entrance and Lieut. Howden, navigating by radar, ordered a course bearing 215 degrees.

He took a radar fix on Marianne Point and saw the ship was "bearing greater" than 215 and "I knew we were to port of track"—the planned course.

The operations room confirmed the ship was off line.

Lieut. Howden recommended a course heading 225 degrees. The ship came around.

Suddenly operations recommended 240 degrees. Again the navigator concurred.

He was taking another radar fix when operations called for 270 degrees.

"I was reaching for the intercom" to say he agreed "when I felt a bump."

"The ship bumped and appeared to bump for some seconds."

Under prosecution examination, the navigator said "I felt we were aground."

SAW NOTHING

He went out on the wing of the bridge and, in the fog in the narrow passage, "nothing was visible."

Temporary repairs to the Victoria-built vessel, commissioned in 1963, cost $15,000. Extensive repairs will be required when Saskatchewan goes into drydock for a refit next year.

Orders require the operator of the ship's echo sounder, an instrument which measures water depth, to "call out everything under 10 fathoms," Lieut. Howden testified.

"I don't remember getting any report from him," he said.

The ship's charts indicated the deepest spot on the ship's intended course "appeared to be 15 fathoms."

"I knew I was off my track" but the echo sounder, even if it was making reports, would not have indicated how far.

CUT SPEED

The navigator said just after the course change to 215 degrees was ordered, Cmdr. Jackson ordered the ship's speed reduced from 18 to 14 knots.

Maj. Ward has the navigator take nearly three hours to go over the route, explaining each course change as the ship progressed across the Straits of Georgia.

He asked the navigator who was responsible for keeping charts up to date and Lieut. Howden said it was his responsibility.

"Were the charts up to date?" the prosecutor asked.

"At that time they were not," said the navigator, explaining there was "a large backlog of corrections" to be made and "I had not checked" to see whether they were being made.

The court martial is continuing.

CHOSEN TO ATTEND College Militaire Royal at St. Jean, Que., is Ian Kinsey, 17, son of Mrs. Olive Kinsey and the late Russel Kinsey, of 5217 Sark Road. Uvic Brief Under Way On Housing

A special committee of Uvic students and faculty will prepare a brief for the Hellyer task force on housing this month.

Ronald Jeffels, Dean of college and student affairs, said this week the committee would study housing and accommodation as it affects the university.

The Hellyer commission will visit to Victoria Nov. 6. Arrangements for briefs and hearings are being made this week.

The task force was set up by the federal government a month ago under Transport Minister Paul Hellyer to study housing problems across the country. It is cerrently conducting hearings in Ontario.

The Uvic committee was set up a week ago under Dean Jeffels' direction.

Woman Put in Freezer For Phone Call Attempt

A woman who tried to phone the police during a midnight hold-up at Ernie's Fine Foods restaurant, 1616 Hillside, was shut in a refrigerator and kept there, it was stated in B.C. Assize Court Wednesday afternoon.

Raymond Victor Moorhouse, 19, an employee at the drive-in restaurant, testified that three men with sweaters pulled over their faces entered the restaurant and held up the staff with guns.

One of the men, Mr. Moorehouse said, took Mrs. Rose Davis by the arm, led her to a stand-up refrigerator and forced her inside.

Under cross-examination by David Skillings, Mr. Moorhouse said he was uncertain which of the men shut Mrs. Davis in the refrigerator.

Mr. Moorhouse was giving evidence at the trial of Peter Simpson, 21-year-old Toronto man, who has pleaded not guilty to robbing the restaurant; also to charges of breaking and entering and theft from the Monty Aldous home at 4580 Sumner Place, and stealing a car from Mr. Aldous's step-son, Melvin R. Butler.

At a preliminary police court hearing, Mr. Moorhouse said it was Simpson who shut Mrs. Davis in the refrigerator.

In Assize Court Wednesday, he said it was another man who put her in the refrigerator while Simpson was emptying the cash register.

FACES COVERED

"Their faces were covered," he said, "and I was relying on voice identification. It wasn't until after the preliminary hearing that I became certain the man at the cash register had the same voice as the accused."

"Why didn't you tell the police about your change of mind?" asked defence counsel Skillings.

"Because I was told all would come out and be corrected at the trial," witness replied. Mr. Skillings said the change of mind came out two weeks ago when Mr. Moorhouse was interviewed by Crown counsel.

"Are you sure today that your voice identification of the accused is correct?" asked Mr. Skillings.

"Yes," Mr. Moorhouse replied.

Under questioning by Crown counsel Louis Lindholm, witness said one of the three hold-up men ran into the restaurant, pointed a gun at him and said: "Don't move — this is a stickup."

'UNUSUAL'

Mr. Moorhouse said holdups were "so unusual" at Ernie's Fine Foods, he thought it was a big joke and "smiled from ear to ear." Then the gunman repeated "This is a stickup" in a rather nasty voice.

"Did you continue smiling?" asked counsel.

"No Sir, I knew the they were in earnest."

Witness said Mrs. Davis picked up the phone. As she did so, two other men, both carrying guns, rushed past him. One of them took the phone out of her hand and led her to the refrigerator.

Mr. Moorhouse said the third man threw him to the floor. After Simpson had been to the cash register, the three men left the store. One of them pointed a gun at him, momentarily, then left without a word. Constable Peter Doberty of Esquimalt police identified Simpson in the dock as the man he found unconscious behind the steering wheel of a car after it smashed into a tree at View Royal soon after the holdup.

HIGH SPEED

The crash occurred when the car was being chased at high speed by Esquimalt police.

Constable Doherty said he found two other men unconscious in the front seat. They were Robert Rickward, 20, and Roger McEwan, 22.

Rickward died almost immediately; McEwan died a short time later. Simpson was treated for a broken foot, broken ankle and head injuries at St. Joseph's Hospital.

The trial continued today. It is being heard by Mr. Justice J. S. Aikens and a jury of two women and 10 men.

Retroactive Strike Vote Clears Air

Shingle workers at two local mills who walked off the job earlier this week confirmed their action with a strike vote Wednesday.

About 150 men are off the job at McCarter Shingle Co. Ltd. and Smith Cedar Products Ltd. and another 150 at the Hunting-Merritt mill in Vancouver.

William Bell of Victoria, president of the shingle weavers division of the carpenters' union, said today the vote makes the strike legal. One company spokesman said earlier it appeared to be a wildcat strike to him.

"The situation now is for us to try and get back talking with the companies and get this straightened out," said Mr. Bell.

Negotiations opened last April and the length of talks is one reason for the walkout. Mill-workers also want wage increases and an hourly pay scale for numerous jobs where men are now paid by piecework.

SEEKING PRIVATE POOL

Nudist Group Winters Indoors

Victoria's newest nudist club is hibernating this winter in members' homes, and looking for a private swimming pool.

The Arbutus Park Club was formed in March for nudists who like to travel. It has no home base but this summer members made the rounds of nudist camps (sometimes called sunbathing clubs) on Vancouver Island and the mainland.

"This club is for those who may already belong to another similar club but want to travel around and meet others," said Oliver Lordby, associate director.

Last weekend they hosted the Western Canadian Sunbathing Association directors' meeting in Victoria. Representatives from Nanaimo, Courtenay, Powell River, Vancouver, Penticton, Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg attended meetings and were taken on a tour of Victoria.

Inter-club business was discussed and slides to be used on public speaking tours were edited.

There are now two sunbathing clubs operating in Victoria. The other is the Sol Sante club.

Plan Forecasts Higher Rates For 'Collision'

Mayor Names Auditorium Advisors

Mayor Hugh Stephen announced today the formation of a citizens committee to iron out the details on design of a civic auditorium-convention centre complex.

The committee will work in conjunction with Marathon Realty, the CPR development agency, to design a facility tailored to community needs.

Members of the new committee are Clare Copeland, president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce; T. M. Sherwood, Community Arts Council; Larry Ryan, Victoria Labor Council; Roy Denny, Downtown Businessmen's Association and Jack Morgan, director of community services for the city.

Mayor Stephen said the task of the committee would be to advise city council on the features that should be built into the facility to ensure maximum community use.

"Until now the total emphasis has been place on use of the centre for conventions, but it must be stressed that for most of the year it would be available and used for other community functions," the mayor said.

he added that he was anxious that when final proposals are made to city council the centre, planned for the rear of the Empress Hotel, should incorporate all the design features necessary to the community role.

$100 Deductible For Everyone

Persons buying more than basic car insurance under the Wootton Commission plan would find rates higher than they pay now for property damage coverage.

The commission said in its report this is because the policyholder's own company would be meeting all the costs.

There would be no recovery as often applies now, from the other car owner involved, or his insurance company.

And there would be more claims for damages because under the present insurance system many drivers prefer to pay repair bills themselves than apply to their insurance company.

They know that besides paying a portion of the initial settlement — usually the first $100 — they can also expect a rate boost after making a claim.

This situation inevitably would force an increase in present premiums for collision coverage — perhaps as much as 36 per cent, the commission said.

Where a driver might pay $100 for collision coverage under today's third-party liability system, the new self-insurance for an owner's own repair bills would likely cost $135.70.

But while the consumer cost of "damage insurance" would be higher, the basic cost of insurance required as protection against death or injury would be considerably less than at present.

The commission commented on two forms of supplementary insurance coverage which likely would be required under a no-fault driver insurance system.

The first would supplement the basic level of death and disability insurance which may be considered by some drivers as inadequate.

Insurance companies could be expected to offer such additional insurance at relatively low cost to cover benefits such as ambulance services and other out of pocket expenses, it was suggested.

The insurance industry would be expected to offer considerable choice in voluntary endorsements and riders to extend coverage.

Incentive to Defensive Driving

However, it is suggested that (payable by the insured) should the minimum deductible amount be set at $100 for collision coverage in order to give incentive to defensive driving practices.

Any lower deductible could encourage irresponsibility in those drivers who knowing their own damage would be paid for, may jeopardize unnecessssarily the safety of others, commissioners said.

It was found in examining the mechanics of the proposal that average claim size would not be greater than at present, although frequency would be.

It also was found that claims expenses would be reduced, leaving a greater share of the premium dollar available for payment of claims.

Any dispute or dissatisfaction over any claim or payment could be taken to a proposed insurance appeal board.

Referring to agent's commissions the commission said it was not prepared to recommend a maximum amount chargeable on voluntary insurance coverage.

Any reduction on the commission percentage on higher cost insurance should be left to arrangement between agent, insurance company and consumer—"provided there is effective competition," the report said.

Insurance, Agent's Fees Separate

But in this connection, the commission found favor in a "disclosure" plan. It would require each voluntary insurance contract to show clearly the cost of insurance separately from the fee payable to the agent.

"This would make the agent's professional fees as readily ascertainable as those charged for services by members of other professions," the commission said, and be in the interests of more effective competition.

It would be workable only if the direct-writing companies operated by rules that eliminated the service costs customarily carried out by independent agents, it said.

Although predicting a representative cost for supplementary insurance under the Wootton report was difficult to arrive at, the commission gave an actuarial—based breakdown of how it arrived at the basic compulsory premium.

At a total $16.76—compulsory premium for death and disability minimum coverage—a driver would be paying $10.26 pure premium, 45 cents adjustment expense, $1.80 underwriting and administrative cost, $3 agent's commission, 82 cents contingency reserve and underwriting profit, 34 cents for 2 per cent provincial premium tax.

Drivers with an escalating number of demerit marks for driving offences would pay for the basic coverage on a rising scale up to $25.48, after which they could be suspended from driving, but their insurance would remain in effect.

Plans Drafted For Long Beach Park Project

Kenneth Kiernan, B.C.'s minister of conservation and recreation, said today his department is preparing a working draft for a federal-provincial agreement over Long Beach Park on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

The park proposed for a 20-mile wide strip of surf and sand will be discussed by Mr. Kiernan and Northern Development Minister Chretien at a federal provincial conference on tourism in Ottawa later this month Mr. Kiernan said.

Mr. Kiernan said he had received a reply from the federal minister which stated "in general terms that we should now proceed with outlining an agreement."

THE NEED IS GREAT

Volunteer canvassers are needed for the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal's door-to-door campaign which begins Tuesday.

A total of 2,100 canvassers will be required, a spokesman for the United Appeal said today.

Volunteers are asked to call the Community Chest office at 385-6788 for further information.

Ask The Times

Q. In Monday's issue you mentioned a mine disaster in Ladysmith which you claimed happened on Oct. 5, 1918. I think this explosion and fire occurred in 1910. Are you sure you're right?—J. M. McD.

A. The Times was wrong. The actual date of this disaster was Oct. 5, 1909. On that date 32 men were trapped and killed underground following an explosion in a mine level at Extension. Ladysmith never recovered economically as a mining town. There was, however, a 1918 mining disaster on Protection Island when a cage dropped killing 16 men. The confusion in dates stems from this.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

. . . REACTION

cause I think only the experts can say whether they are fair and adequate. But I think it a very good concept that insurance will be compulsory before you can obtain a driver's licence.

"And I think it is extremely sensible to tie the licence to insurance and the insurance rate to a driver's record. Many bad drivers will be eliminated in the process, but that's all to the good."

Mayor Stephen said he also agreed with the commissioners' recommendation that road safety programs be co-ordinated at the federal and provincial levels and that more money be spent on such programs.

TOUGHER APPROACH

But he added that he would have liked to see the commission take an even tougher approach.

"It has always been shocking to me that people with terrible records of negligence are allowed to drive at all. Whatever plans and proposals we make for safety now, in the final analysis we have to come down to taking hard, brassy action against the consistently bad driver.

Vancouver Ald. Halford Wilson, chairman of the insurance committee of the B.C. Safety Council, said he had not as yet had time to read the full report.

"But I think it safe to say that any recommendations that tend to improve the safety factor will have our full support," he said.

"From the brief accounts I have read it would appear that the establishing of compulsory minimum insurance protection is a sound step in the right direction."

Ald. Wilson said the Safety Council would solidly back the commission call for greater co-ordination between federal and provincial governments and between various departments within the provincial government.

"Actually such recommendations are part of our long range program," he said.

Victoria and Vancouver lawyers agreed that the proposed auto insurance scheme would ease the load on law courts throughout British Columbia.

"I would say between a quarter and a third of the courts' time is now spent on the hearing of accident cases," said Kenneth Murphy, vice-president of Victoria Bar Association.

"If no auto accident cases were heard in the courts, other actions would certainly be brought on more speedily.

Colin McQuarrie, QC, a bencher of the B.C. Law Society, said the proposed scheme could mean a loss to the public "if they didn't have more protection than is indicated in the royal commission's report."

"The proposed sum of $20,000 would be an inadequate insurance basis for a person seriously injured in an accident. I would say the present court system is better where people have substantial claims.

COMPENSATION

"At least they have a reasonable chance of recovering a substantial amount of compensation.

Lloyd McKenzie, QC, of Victoria agreed with Mr. McQuarrie.

"Under the present system of hearing claims in court, the amount of compensation is more precisely measured than would be possible under the system proposed.

Mr. Griffiths, president of the trial lawyers association, said proposals contained in the report would lead to anarchy.

He said the "no fault" principle in the report removes the responsibility principle from insurance.

"One of the most important things the commission hasn't taken into account is that the no-fault principle doesn't make any impact on the wrongdoer.

'FICTION'

"It is a monstrous fiction that leaves the impact with the person (the injured party) who can least afford it."

"The present system is an excellent one, if properly used. It is the best in North America."

WITHIN YEAR

To the commission's reference to a time lag in the hearing of accident cases, Mr. Griffiths said there is "no unreasonable lag" and the majority of cases go to trial within a year".

NDP Leader Strachan said he welcomed the adoption of his party's argument for compulsory no-fault insurance.

"However, the commission's proposal to leave the handling of such insurance in private hands is, I think, morally wrong and will not result in insurance at the lowest possible cost to the public."

He predicted the Social Credit cabinet would "pigeonhole" the proposals and contended "this report makes it obvious that any real change in automobile insurance will still require the election of an NDP government in B.C."

FAR REACHING

Newly-elected Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said the report's proposals were so far-reaching that he and his party would have to study it thoroughly "for some considerable time before I will comment on it."

Cyril Shelford, provincial minister of agriculture, said the report puts the onus on insurance companies to do a better job for B.C. drivers.

'REAL PROD'

"It will act as a real prod," he said. "This is what I've wanted all along."

He said the report gives companies a chance to improve rates and coverage under the clear threat of government takeover if conditions do not improve.

Mr. Shelford, who made the motion in the Legislature calling for the commission, said he was also impressed by the emphasis it placed on accident prevention.

Ray Haynes, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said the report only postpones the inevitable introduction of a government car insurance plan.

Noting that the report was critical of insurance companies, he added that he did not "see why they didn't recommend a compulsory government plan."

Hijacking Charge Tossed Out

MONTREAL (CP) — Charles Leverne Beasley, 22, of Dallas, Tex., was acquitted today of charges alleging that he attempted to divert an Air Canada flight to Cuba Sept. 11.

Judge Emile Trottier agreed with the argument of defence lawyer Sidney Leithman that the Crown had failed to obtain necessary authority from the attorney-general of Canada to prosecute a non-Canadian in an airplane hijacking case.

The judge dismissed all charges, which included theft of an aircraft, interfering with transportation facilities, kidnapping, forcible detention, illegal possession of a .22-calibre revolver, public mischief by obstructing use of property and two counts of assault.

Changes in Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand today brought Speaker Remi Paul of the legislative assembly into his cabinet as provincial secretary and named two ministers to new portfolios in the first cabinet shuffle since he came premier Oct. 2.

Yves Gabias, 47-year-old lawyer from Trois-Rivieres, was switched from the provincial secretary portfolio to the department of financial institutions and co-operatives and Armand Maltais, a 55-year-old lawyer from Quebec City, who had been minister without portfolio, was named solicitor-general.

Skin 'Transplants' For Burn Victims

TORONTO (CP) — Temporary skin grafts from corpses can work miracles overnight for patients suffering severe burns, says Dr. George Collentine, assistant professor of surgery at the Marquette School of Medicine, Milwaukee.

Speaking Monday to the sixth annual meeting of the Ontario College of Family Physicians, Dr. Collentine said a graft applied to a dying child, with a high temperature and bleeding from ulcers, will cause almost instant improvement.

"He'll sit up and want to eat the next morning."

Why the graft makes this dramatic difference was not known but it seems enough to help the body block out bacteria invasion and fight infection.

Dr. Collentine said the temporary grafts are applied as soon as one-third of the burned area has healed enough to take them.

In time the graft is rejected —"it just feathers and disappears" and then a permanent graft of the patient's own skin could be applied.

The surgeon said the best first-aid treatment for burns of any degree of severity is a "clod, moist cloth, the cleanest one available."

He advised parents whose child has been burned to remove his hot clothing "grab a clean towel and put it under the cold water tap, wrap it around the burned area and take him to hospital."

Prague in Gloom As Details Known

By KENNETH AMES

Special to the Washington Post

PRAGUE — An atmosphere of profound gloom settled on the Czechoslovak capital Wednesday —the cumulative effect of the information gradually becoming known about the latest Moscow demands and the tortuously depressing communique issued Tuesday midnight by the communist party presidium.

Meanwhile, as if to underline the real significance of the communique—which promised to purge "anti-socialist forces" and toughen controls over party and press—a mission of military experts, led by Czechoslovak deputy premier Frantisek Hamouz and senior staff officers, was reported Wednesday about to sign an agreement in Moscow on a Warsaw pact garrison to be stationed in this country.

The defence minister, Gen. Martin Dzur, who normally would head such a delegation, was in a hospital. The announcement of Dzur's illness was made Wednesday—four days after he is said to have been admitted to the hospital.

In the wake of these developments, Czechs and Slovaks are trying to calculate what might be salvaged from their eight-month liberalization program.

The best informed observers Wednesday said the Czechoslovak presidium communique was a total acceptance of Moscow's conditions, punctuated by occasional phrases intended to ameliorate the shock.

An important question raised Wednesday was how long it would take for the general population of the nation, as distinct from politicians and intellectuals, to recognize the full implications of the communique.

told him that he had watched the priest being beaten my Nigerian soldiers, dragged into a car and driven away. There has been no further report on Father Bree.

According to E. D. Ogolo, the district officer for central Annang, thousands of refugees from Urua Inyang began streaming through his area after the attack. "Many were badly wounded, all were hungry and they only had the clothes on their back," Mr. Ogolo said.

"I had to tell them there was nothing I could do for them. We had no doctor and our refugee camps are already filled up. I couldn't give them any food.

"Our stocks are so low that I'm only giving the refugees one cup of garri (the Biafran staple) a day. Some days I have to ask the adults to go without their garri so there's something for the children."

BIND WOUNDS

Some of the victims from Urua Inyang stayed in the refugee camps but most moved on into the bush, Mr. Ogolo added. Many were binding their wounds with leaves. "From what I heard, there must have been 700 to 900 killed in the town," he said. "I don't know how many more have been dying in the bush."

As we talked—standing by one of the refugee huts and surrounded by a crowd of thin and ragged people—an Ilyushin bomber of the Nigerian air force broke through the clouds and flew directly overhead.

We scrambled behind trees and into ditches.

For about 20 tense minutes, we heard the bomber circling nearby, above the clouds. Then—in the distance—two explosions, followed a few minutes later by three more. Then the Ilyushin flew back above us and away.

"It happens like that every day," Mr. Ogolo said. "Only now they know we take cover, so they're starting to strafe the bush. "They want to kill us all," he added. "They simple want to kill us all."

Surprise Talks End In Finland

HELSINKI (AP) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin flew back to Moscow Wednesday following a secrecy-shrouded surprise visit to Finland where he had talks with President Urho Kekkonen — partly at sea during a fishing trip.

As Kosygin and his party was seen off with a hearty farewell by Kekkonen and Finnish Premier Mauno Koivisto at Helsinki Airport, a communique expressing Finno-Soviet unity on international questions and peace efforts gave the first official word on the talks.

"The friendly and frank discussions," were said to have confirmed the wish of both governments and peoples to develop their relations on the "firm basis" of the 1948 friendship and assistance treaty — which gives the Soviet Union the right to demand military consultations and even to station troops in Finland in case of a tangible threat from West Germany or its allies.

Kekkonen and Kosygin in the communique expressed their "firm confidence" that the two countries' policies would "remain unshakeable."

Marches Called Off

LONDONDERRY (Reuters) —Organizers of a march which ended in violence in this Northern Ireland city last weekend today called off two planned demonstrations.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Cloud cover is variable throughout B.C. this morning. There are a few showers mostly in southern regions. The weather system which dumped nearly two inches of rain along the west coast of Vancouver Island yesterday is nearly stationary and weakening. However, it will maintain cool unsettled weather in most areas today and Friday. There will be sunny periods especially in coastal areas.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, OCT. 10, 1968—PAGE 11

Second Section
Pages 11-22

Arthur Mayse

While I was still staring bleakly at my first mug of office coffee this morning, a zealot called to suggest that I should look into health food.

"Most people don't eat the right foods," she said. "They should be taught to choose what's good for them."

Perhaps we would all become better, kinder and slimmer people on a diet of turnip croquettes and loaves baked from hand-hashed barley.

But that's not the point, any more than the purpose of this Tuesday - through - Saturday ramble is to teach you "What you should be taught."

Further — and believe me, it took a long time for this realization to sink home — I can get along handsomely without the unsolicited services of the self-appointed teacher.

Mind, I am not knocking health food. Far from it! It's just that I believe with increasing fervency in man's right to make his own mistakes.

This up to a point: We should not hurt others in the process, and it is a duty imposed on us by our common humanity to save each other from lethal error when we can. It is right that a child be taught the folly of assuming that all clear liquids are water. The container could hold naptha, or vodka.

★

My spleen is reserved for those who insist that we be taught in areas where ignorance is of no great consequence, or where the insistence on teaching can do more harm than the error itself.

When we bought a boat trailer, I hadn't the foggiest notion of how to back the thing. So I set out to teach myself the knack, in the home driveway.

I got along reasonably well, and after a few bouts of practice, could navigate in reverse without jack-knifing, beating up the salvia bed, or intruding on the lawn.

Then one morning, we set out to try an actual launching on a boat ramp. We had the concrete apron to ourselves, the boat-laden trailer was behaving nicely, when a "This Guy has to be Taught" type appeared out of nowhere.

He stuck his head into the car—I had rolled the window down for a fast exit if need be—and hollered in my ear, "Hey, you're doing this all wrong! Better pull out and try it again."

What with his "Hold the wheel here and here," his "No, no, don't keep looking back" and his shouts of "Watch it, watch it!" I came within an ace of dunking us in Oak Bay.

He didn't teach me a thing. What he did do was drain my shallow self-confidence so thoroughly that it took another session of driveway backing to restore it.

★

About the time that "togetherness" was blooming in the women's magazines, it seemed that every medical authority who could scribble more than a prescription felt impelled to teach the arts of wedded love. This he or she attempted in a book: the plain brown wrapper never had it so good.

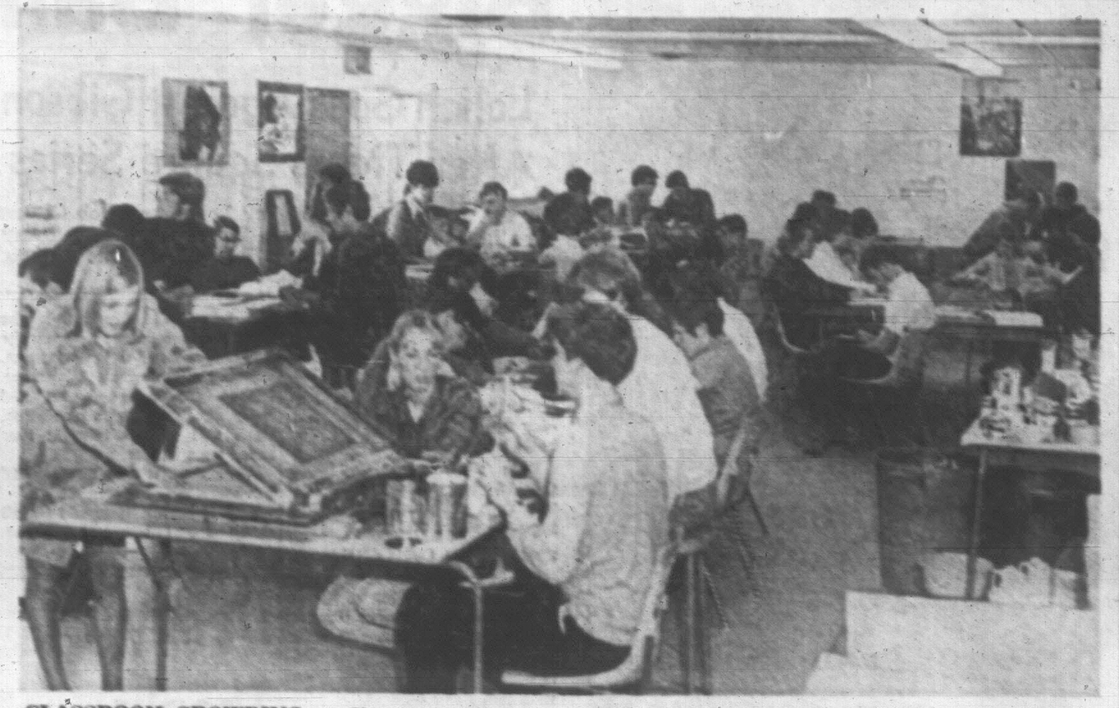
The spate has dwindled now, and perhaps that's just as well. The instructions offered were dismayingly acrobatic, and one essential ingredient of wedlock was nowhere to be found in the copy that I browsed through. This is humor.

Those books may well have ruined more marriages than they nourished.

The self-sparking teacher, the person who cannot rest until he has taught some happy blunderer how to do it right, turns up in every bracket and department of life.

He will not let be, he is a petty tyrant, and as a swarm of niggling two-bit municipal regulations attest, he is well on his way toward ruling our lives.

The woman who believes you should be taught to eat health foods means well, and I hope she enjoys her bowl of blah and her dish of parsnip patties. But may the same be forced down this protesting throat if I ever decide that you must learn anything from me!



CLASSROOM CROWDING at Claremont Secondary School in Saanich means students must jam into lunchroom (above) to work. Three classes use lunchroom almost full time in the space squeeze. Principal J. W. Lott predicts school enrolment will climb from 698 this year to 964 by September of 1973. Saanich ratepayers vote October 19 on school district building referendum which would give Claremont two extra permanent and six portable classrooms. Trustees report all 18 schools in the district require additions or renovations. (Times photo.)

2 Radar Men Not on Watch When Ship Hit

By JOHN SLINGER

The operations officer of HMCS Saskatchewan testified today that the ship did not have a complete "blind pilotage team" in the operations room when the ship struck a rock September 8.

He was testifying at a court martial of the captain of the destroyer, which grounded in a fog in Active Pass.

Lieut. Bran Oudshoorn said the two officers who normally carried out radar fixes to determine the ship's forward progress had been assigned other duties.

He said he had made no report to Commander Norman S. Jackson, the captain, because he thought it was "obvious the men were not in the operations room." Commander Jackson is being tried on three charges of negligence.

Lieut. Oudshoorn told the five-member court headed by Capt. Frederick C. Frewer, CFB Esquimalt commander, that Mrs. Oudshoorn and another guest were in the operations room watching at the time of the incident.

14-18 KNOTS

As the court martial entered its second day, Cmdr. J. L. Henderson of Ottawa cross-examined the ship's navigator, Lieut. Robert G. Howden, who had testified the destroyer-escort was making 14 to 18 knots in unexpected fog at the entrance to the pass.

"I felt perfectly confident of navigating Active Pass visibly."

But, said the navigator, "a dense and wet" fog hung over the entrance shoals and "I doubt whether I would have transited Active Pass at that speed."

In preparing for the trip to Esquimalt to Vancouver and back he said the captain had asked for an alternate route to Active Pass in case of bad weather. If there was fog "he had no intention of going through Active Pass."

Lieut. Howden, who said the captain had offered to give assistance whenever the navigator ran into difficulty, testified that the question of going blind through Active Pass had not arisen.

If the weather is bad "one normally doesn't go through."

OFF COURSE

Lieut. Oudshoorn testified that the tide running against the Saskatchewan at the entrance to the pass was 4.2 knots.

After making initial entry he noticed the ship was 100 yards to port (left) of the planned course.

He progressively recommended three course changes but the ship was 600 yards off course when she "struck a rock."

He said just prior to the incident he had sent a petty officer to the bridge to get Mrs. Oudshoorn and bring her to the operations room so she "could see what was going on there." He testified there had been "no conversation" with the guest in the room.

Under examination by prosecutor Maj. D. H. Ward, of Winnipeg, Lieut. Howden related how the Saskatchewan had left Vancouver on a prepared course based on a weather report that did not mention fog possibilities.

Leading sister-ship Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan steamed into the Pass entrance and Lieut. Howden, navigating by radar, ordered a course bearing 215 degrees.

He took a radar fix on Marianne Point and saw the ship was "bearing greater" than 215 and "I knew we were to port of track"—the planned course.

The operations room confirmed the ship was off line. Lieut. Howden recommended a course heading 225 degrees. She ship came around.

Suddenly operations recommended 240 degrees. Again the navigator concurred.

He was taking another radar fix when operations called for 270 degrees.

"I was reaching for the intercom" to say he agreed "when I felt a bump."

"The ship bumped and appeared to bump for some seconds."

Under prosecution examination, the navigator said "I felt we were aground."

SAW NOTHING

He went out on the wing of the bridge and, in the fog in the narrow passage, "nothing was visible."

Temporary repairs to the Victoria-built vessel, commissioned in 1963, cost $15,000. Extensive repairs will be required when Saskatchewan goes into drydock for a refit next year.

Orders require the operator of the ship's echo sounder, an instrument which measures water depth, to "call out everything under 10 fathoms," Lieut. Howden testified.

"I don't remember getting any report from him," he said.

The ship's charts indicated the deepest spot on the ship's intended course "appeared to be 15 fathoms."

"I knew I was off my track" but the echo sounder, even if it was making reports, would not have indicated how far.

CUT SPEED

The navigator said just after the course change to 215 degrees was ordered, Cmdr. Jackson ordered the ship's speed reduced from 18 to 14 knots.

Maj. Ward had the navigator take nearly three hours to go over the route, explaining each course change as the ship progressed across the Straits of Georgia.

He asked the navigator who was responsible for keeping charts up to date and Lieut. Howden said it was his responsibility.

"Were the charts up to date?" the prosecutor asked.

"At that time they were not," said the navigator, explaining there was "a large backlog of corrections" to be made and "I had not checked" to see whether they were being made.

The court martial is continuing.

Uvic Brief Under Way On Housing

A special committee of Uvic students and faculty will prepare a brief for the Hellyer task force on housing this month.

Ronald Jeffels, Dean of college and student affairs, said this week the committee would study housing and accommodation as it affects the university.

The Hellyer commission will visit to Victoria Nov. 6. Arrangements for briefs and hearings are being made this week.

The task force was set up by the federal government a month ago under Transport Minister Paul Hellyer to study housing problems across the country. It is currently conducting hearings in Ontario.

The Uvic committee was set up a week ago under Dean Jeffels' direction.

Woman Put in Freezer For Phone Call Attempt

A woman who tried to phone the police during a midnight hold-up at Ernie's Fine Foods restaurant, 1616 Hillside, was shut in a refrigerator and kept there, it was stated in B.C. Assize Court Wednesday afternoon.

Raymond Victor Moorhouse, 19, an employee at the drive-in restaurant, testified that three men with sweaters pulled over their faces entered the restaurant and held up the staff with guns.

One of the men, Mr. Moorehouse said, took Mrs. Rose Davis by the arm, led her to a stand-up refrigerator and forced her inside.

Under cross-examination by David Skillings, Mr. Moorhouse said he was uncertain which of the men shut Mrs. Davis in the refrigerator.

Mr. Moorhouse was giving evidence at the trial of Peter Simpson, 21-year-old Toronto man, who has pleaded not guilty to robbing the restaurant; also to charges of breaking and entering and theft from the Monty Aldous home at 4590 Sumner Place, and stealing a car from Mr. Aldous's step-son, Melvin R. Butler.

At a preliminary police court hearing, Mr. Moorhouse said it was Simpson who shut Mrs. Davis in the refrigerator.

In Assize Court Wednesday, he said it was another man who put her in the refrigerator while Simpson was emptying the cash register.

FACES COVERED

"Their faces were covered," he said, "and I was relying on voice identification. It wasn't until after the preliminary hearing that I became certain the man at the cash register had the same voice as the accused."

"Why didn't you tell the police about your change of mind?" asked defence counsel Skillings.

"Because I was told all would come out and be corrected at the trial," witness replied. Mr. Skillings said the change of mind came out two weeks ago when Mr. Moorhouse was interviewed by Crown counsel.

"Are you sure today that your voice identification of the accused is correct?" asked Mr. Skillings.

"Yes," Mr. Moorhouse replied.

Under questioning by Crown counsel Louis Lindholm, witness said one of the three hold-up men ran into the restaurant, pointed a gun at him and said: "Don't move — this is a stickup."

'UNUSUAL'

Mr. Moorhouse said holdups were "so unusual" at Ernie's Fine Foods, he thought it was a big joke and "smiled from ear to ear." Then the gunman repeated "This is a stickup" in a rather nasty voice.

"Did you continue smiling?" asked counsel.

"No Sir, I knew they were in earnest."

Witness said Mrs. Davis picked up the phone. As she did so, two other men, both carrying guns, rushed past him. One of them took the phone out of her hand and led her to the refrigerator.

Mr. Moorhouse said the third man threw him to the floor. After Simpson had been to the cash register, the three men left the store. One of them pointed a gun at him, momentarily, then left without a word. Constable Peter Doherty of Esquimalt police identified Simpson in the dock as the man he found unconscious behind the steering wheel of a car after it smashed into a tree at View Royal soon after the holdup.

HIGH SPEED

The crash occurred when the car was being chased at high speed by Esquimalt police.

Constable Doherty said he found two other men unconscious in the front seat. They were Robert Rickward, 20, and Roger McEwan, 22.

Rickward died almost immediately; McEwan died a short time later. Simpson was treated for a broken foot, broken ankle and head injuries at St. Joseph's Hospital.

The trial continued today. It is being heard by Mr. Justice J. S. Aikens and a jury of two women and 10 men.

Retroactive Strike Vote Clears Air

Shingle workers at two local mills who walked off the job earlier this week confirmed their action with a strike vote Wednesday.

About 150 men are off the job at McCarter Shingle Co. Ltd. and Smith Cedar Products Ltd. and another 180 at the Hunting-Merritt mill in Vancouver.

William Bell of Victoria, president of the shingle weavers division of the carpenters' union, said today the vote makes the strike legal. One company spokesman said earlier it appeared to be a wildcat strike to him.

"The situation now is for us to try and get back talking with the companies and get this straightened out," said Mr. Bell.

Negotiations opened last April and the length of talks is one reason for the walkout. Millworkers also want wage increases and an hourly pay scale for numerous jobs where men are now paid by piecework.

SEEKING PRIVATE POOL

Nudist Group Winters Indoors

Victoria's newest nudist club is hibernating this winter in members' homes, and looking for a private swimming pool.

The Arbutus Park Club was formed in March for nudists who like to travel. It has no home base but this summer members made the rounds of nudist camps (sometimes called sunbathing clubs) on Vancouver Island and the mainland.

"This club is for those who may already belong to another similar club but want to travel around and meet others," said Oliver Lordby, associate director.

Last weekend they hosted the Western Canadian Sunbathing Association directors' meeting in Victoria. Representatives from Nanaimo, Courtenay, Powell River, Vancouver, Penticton, Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg attended meetings and were taken on a tour of Victoria.

Inter-club business was discussed and slides to be used on public speaking tours were edited.

There are now two sunbathing clubs operating in Victoria. The other is the Sol Sante club.

Plan Forecasts Higher Rates For 'Collision'

$100 Deductible For Everyone

Persons buying more than basic car insurance under the Wootton Commission plan would find rates higher than they pay now for property damage coverage.

The commission said in its report this is because the policyholder's own company would be meeting all the costs.

There would be no recovery as often applies now, from the other car owner involved, or his insurance company.

And there would be more claims for damages because under the present insurance system many drivers prefer to pay repair bills themselves than apply to their insurance company.

They know that besides paying a portion of the initial settlement — usually the first $100 — they can also expect a rate boost after making a claim.

This situation inevitably would force an increase in present premiums for collision coverage — perhaps as much as 36 per cent, the commission said.

Where a driver might pay $100 for collision coverage under today's third-party liability system, the new self-insurance for an owner's own repair bills would likely cost $135.70.

But while the consumer cost of "damage insurance" would be higher, the basic cost of insurance required as protection against death or injury would be considerably less than at present.

The commissor commented on two forms of supplementary insurance coverage which likely would be required under a no-fault driver insurance system.

The first would supplement the basic level of death and disability insurance which may be considered by some drivers as inadequate.

Insurance companies could be expected to offer such additional insurance at relatively low cost to cover benefits such as ambulance services and other out of pocket expenses, it was suggested.

The insurance industry would be expected to offer considerable choice in voluntary endorsements and riders to extend coverage.

Incentive to Defensive Driving

However, it is suggested that the minimum deductible amount (payable by the insured) should be set at $100 for collision coverage in order to give incentive to defensive driving practices.

Any lower deductible could encourage irresponsibility in those drivers who knowing their own damage would be paid for, may jeopardize unnecessarily the safety of others, commissioners said.

It was found in examining the mechanics of the proposal that average claim size would not be greater than at present, although frequency would be.

It also was found that claims expenses would be reduced, leaving a greater share of the premium dollar available for payment of claims.

Any dispute or dissatisfaction over any claim or payment could be taken to a proposed insurance appeal board.

Referring to agent's commissions the commission said it was not prepared to recommend a maximum amount chargeable on voluntary insurance coverage.

Any reduction on the commission percentage on higher cost insurance should be left to arrangement between agent, insurance company and consumer—"provided there is effective competition," the report said.

Insurance, Agent's Fees Separate

But in this connection, the commission found favor in a "disclosure" plan. It would require each voluntary insurance contract to show clearly the cost of insurance separately from the fee payable to the agent.

"This would make the agent's professional fees as readily ascertainable as those charged for services by members of other professions," the commission said, and be in the interests of more effective competition.

It would be workable only if the direct-writing companies operated by rules that eliminated the service costs customarily carried out by independent agents, it said.

Although predicting a representative cost for supplementary insurance under the Wootton report was difficult to arrive at, the commission gave an actuarial-based breakdown of how it arrived at the basic compulsory premium.

At a total $36.76—compulsory premium for death and disability minimum coverage—a driver would be paying $30.25 pure premium, 45 cents adjustment expense, $1.80 underwriting and administrative cost, $3 agent's commission, 82 cents contingency reserve and underwriting profit, 34 cents for 2 per cent provincial premium tax.

Drivers with an escalating number of demerit marks for driving offences would pay for the basic coverage on a rising scale up to $36.48, after which they could be suspended from driving, but their insurance would remain in effect.

Mayor Names Auditorium Advisors

Mayor Hugh Stephen announced today the formation of a citizens committee to iron out the details on design of a civic auditorium-convention centre complex.

The committee will work in conjunction with Marathon Realty, the CPR development agency, to design a facility tailored to community needs.

Members of the new committee are Clare Copeland, president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce; T. M. Sherwood, Community Arts Council; Larry Ryan, Victoria Labor Council; Roy Denny, Downtown Businessmen's Association and Jack Morgan, director of community services for the city.

Mayor Stephen said the task of the committee would be to advise city council on the features that should be built into the facility to ensure maximum community use.

"Until now the total emphasis has been placed on use of the centre for conventions, but it must be stressed that for most of the year it would be available and used for other community functions," the mayor said.

He added that he was anxious that when final proposals are made to city council the centre, planned for the rear of the Empress Hotel, should incorporate all the design features necessary to the community role.

Plans Drafted For Long Beach Park Project

Kenneth Kiernan, B.C.'s minister of conservation and recreation, said today his department is preparing a working draft for a federal-provincial agreement over Long Beach Park on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

The park proposed for a 20-mile wide strip of surf and sand will be discussed by Mr. Kiernan and Northern Development Minister Chretien at a federal-provincial conference on tourism in Ottawa later this month Mr. Kiernan said.

Mr. Kiernan said he had received a reply from the federal minister which stated "in general terms that we should now proceed with outlining an agreement."

THE NEED IS GREAT

Volunteer canvassers are needed for the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal's door-to-door campaign which begins Tuesday.

A total of 2,100 canvassers will be required, a spokesman for the United Appeal said today.

Volunteers are asked to call the Community Chest office at 383-6708 for further information.

Ask The Times

Q. In Monday's issue you mentioned a mine disaster in Ladysmith which you claimed happened on Oct. 5, 1918. I think this explosion and fire occurred in 1909. Are you sure you're right?—J. M. McD.

A. The Times was wrong. The actual date of this disaster was Oct. 5, 1909. On that date 32 men were trapped and killed underground following an explosion in a mine level at Extension. Ladysmith never recovered economically as a mining town. There was, however, a 1918 mining disaster on Protection Island when a cage dropped killing 16 men. The confusion in dates stems from this.
